TESTING A SHELL.

Ordeals Through Which a Big Gun Missile Must Pass.

THE SOFT NOSE PROJECTILE.

Its Ability to Bore Its Way Through Heavy Armor Plate Without Exploding Until After Its Impact Was Discovered by Accident.

Everybody knows that the modern shell is one of the most diabolical of man's inventions, but how many of us realize that it is also one of the most delicate and complicated?

Recently some firms holding contracts for making high explosive shells took upon themselves to "correct" a detail in the specification, and, as a result, a certain thread was "improved." They will never do anything of the kind again, because all their work was rejected. The apparent absurdity—it is, in fact, an absolute absurdity, from an engineering point of view—is designed of set purpose.

There is a somewhat similar anomaly in the big shell for penetrating armor plating, which was introduced in consequence of an accident. One day a test shell was fired at a piece of armor plating from the soft side, and the projectile went clean through it and exploded after impact, whereas a similar shell fired against the front—the hardened and tempered side—shattered and left an indentation of only a few inches.

This singular incident set somebody thinking, and in consequence the high explosive armor piercing shell is now given a soft nose. To the hard point is attached a cap of soft metal, with which addition it will go through the toughest piece of armor plate. What happens on impact seems to be this. The cap spreads, holding the point and so enabling it—remember that the shell is revolving rapidly—to force its way unbroken through the hard face of the plate by a sort of boring action.

No less curious is another fact concerning the points of such projectiles. After the heads have been worked the shells are left for weeks before they undergo the next stage, because, strong as they look, they are liable to snap.

Why? Think of the razor. Constant stropping twists the grain, with the result that the steel gets "tired" and will not yield a keen edge. But if you put the thing away for a few weeks the grain will return to its normal state and you can get a satisfactory shave. In a similar way the grain of the steel is affected by working, though of course to a much greater extent, and until it is "set" the makers must go cautiously.

Steel shows a like eccentricity in the making of test gauges. Some of the measurements of shells are very fine and the instruments employed are so delicate that they have to be used quickly lest the heat of the hand causes the metal to expand.

Now, when a groove is cut in a piece of steel which is to be used as a test gauge the work is laid aside for weeks perhaps months. Why not finish it at once? Because the groove, though dead true when cut out, may be otherwise in a short time, even though it has been absolutely untouched.

As a concrete proof of the elaborate nature of projectile making take the case of the shrapnel shell. The steel portion undergoes about a score of operations, and the brass cartridge case attached to the base requires about sixteen, counting from the disk of sheet brass to the finished article. Then there is the fuse, the delicacy of which resembles watchmaking.

Altogether the shell is subjected to about forty inspections and may be rejected at any stage.

After a shell has survived this ordeal it ought to be, one would think, perfect, but a test shell is taken from every 120 and actually fired from a gun into a bank of sand. It is then again examined, and if the contour about the powder pocket is expanded away goes the whole batch, because if they were fired the grooving might be torn out of the gun.

Perhaps the most striking illustration of the minute care exercised in projectile making is that every shell is weighed over and over again. If you produce an eighteen pounder high explosive shell it must be only a few drams over or under its normal weight; otherwise it is rejected.

In this connection it may be of interest to note that an explosive shell that weighs only about seventy pounds will break into a shower of some 1,200 pieces. A single one of the monster projectiles fired from a fifteen inch naval gun will weigh 1,950 pounds. It takes twelve seconds for the projectile of a twelve inch naval gun to reach its point of impact when firing at a range of five miles. To fire a battleship broadside costs about $20,000.—Exchange.

AN EVENING WITH DUMAS.

It Was a Cosmopolitan Crowd That Flocked to His Shrine.

Dumas sat like some bronze of a Buddhist temple, while his guests stood or moved about, conversing with him or among themselves, writes Francis Grierson in the Century, describing an evening with the great novelist. A famous comedian from the Gymnase exchanged jokes with a tragedian from the Theatre Francais, a witty journalist was conversing with a gifted singer from the Theatre Lyric, an artist with flowing hair and a huge pince nez was begging a professional beauty to give him a series of sittings for her portrait, a novelist on the qui vive for copy seemed to see, hear and appropriate everything and everybody all at once.

A young poetess and an aged dramatist were discussing the latest plays. A Russian countess, tall, slender, insinuating, clad all in black, made me think of a character I had seen in a fantastic pantomime. She glided about mysteriously and, stopping at Dumas' chair, placed her long, thin hand on his shoulder for some moments, like a ghostly visitor with a fatal message, and then glided away. Austrians, Italians, Germans, mingled their accent with the accent of the true Parisian. But Dumas was more than a Parisian; he was a cosmopolitan at a time when there were no cosmopolitan Frenchmen, and he gave me the impression of a man who had seen life in every aspect.

He might as well have said in so many words: "My mind is made up. Do not give yourself the trouble to tell me what is going on in England or America or in the country of the Grand Turk or among the nabobs of India. I know as much as they know. You see me sitting here contented enough as things are. All these charming women of talent are my friends" (as a matter of fact, there was not an old woman in the room). "A man is not the author of books like 'Monte Cristo' without some recompense."

No one would have taken him for a celebrated author. He had the air of a man who had done nothing all his life but invent, taste and prepare luxurious dishes at a restaurant patronized by wealthy gourmets.

NUNOBIKI WATERFALLS.

Bewitching Night Scene at a Popular Japanese Resort.

A sight in the summer life of Japan not easily forgotten is procured in a night visit to the Nunobiki waterfall, just outside Kobe on the northeast. There are two falls, the lower or female fall of forty-three feet and the upper or male fall of eighty feet, the water gushing in each case out of the hill above and falling down the gorge to a whirling pool below. It is reached by an easy, winding climb up the cliffs of the "Million Fireflies"—tiny electric bulbs in thousands among the trees—and the thousands and thousands of gayly clad women and children visitors shepherded by the more somber clad men give the traveler two distinctly delightful sensations before reaching the illuminated falls themselves.

The tiny lights come and go among the trees in a bewitching way. The single light, says the Kobe Chronicle, which illuminates the higher fall will perhaps appeal to many rather than the colored lights thrown on the lower fall, and the lamp rays giving the fountain the hues of the rainbow may be regarded as artificial. Nevertheless the general effect is attractive.

To any one who knows China it is impossible not to draw a comparison favorable to the Japanese in viewing the crowd. Entrance to the gorge is perfectly free, yet thousands flocking there every evening are neatly dressed in summer garments, every one clean and respectable, while the conduct of the great crowd is orderly and marked by a sense of quiet enjoyment. Such a scene would be almost impossible in China, and until the idea of personal cleanliness can be introduced among the swarming millions of that country we are afraid the Japanese will continue to look down upon their neighbors as inferior.

Origin of the Caucus.

The origin of the American caucus dates back to Revolutionary days, being traced to the Caucus club of Boston. This club was composed mainly of persons engaged in shipbuilding. It was one of the most radical opponents of British oppression. The Caucus club and the Merchants' club of the same period used to meet before elections and agree on candidates for town and provincial offices. "Caucus" is believed to be a corruption of "caulkers."

The Heat of Australia.

Australia is the hottest country on record. I have ridden for miles astride the equator, but I have never found heat to compare with this. Out in the country in the dry times there appears to be little more than a sheet of brown paper between you and the lower regions, and the people facetiously say that they have to feed their hens on cracked ice to keep them from laying boiled eggs.—Sydney Telegraph.

Her Hard Task.

"That's a beautiful girl you have in your store," said the man acquaintance. "I've seen her in the window several days as I passed."

"She isn't an employee," the milliner answered wearily. "She's a woman trying to decide on a new hat."—Buffalo Express.

Weather Note.

"Looks like rain for our outing tomorrow."

"Just our luck! How would it do to telephone the weather bureau?"

"No good. But you might make an appeal to the clearing house."—Boston Transcript.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

SUFFRAGISTS SPENT $9,000 IN CAMPAIGN

Belated Report of Work in New Jersey Contains Interesting News.

The campaign for woman suffrage in the State of New Jersey cost $3,000, according to a belated report that has been issued by the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League, of which Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of Plainfield, is president.

Of this amount more than $8,000 was spent for advertising through various mediums. The press committee of the New Jersey organization called for an expenditure of $400 a month, and during the campaign, before a vote of the suffrage amendment, $2,500 was paid for display ads in State newspapers.

Here are some high lights in the accomplishments of the New Jersey suffragists as set out in the report:

Distributed 1,550,000 pieces of literature; distributed 200,000 "Votes for Women" buttons; sent one column of New Jersey suffrage news a week to 200 weekly and two columns a week to 25 daily newspapers; paid salary and expenses of one field organizer and the expenses of thirty organizers and speakers, who either gave their time or whose salaries were paid by other States; held over 2,500 outdoor and 250 indoor meetings; supplied speakers for over 500 meetings of men's fraternal and labor organizations, church clubs, etc.; conducted twenty-nine schools for watchers and workers at the polls, to which was largely due the fact that 1,957 of the 1,891 election districts in the State had women watchers at the pools; these schools were planned and conducted by Mrs. F. H. Colvin, first vice-president of the association; conducted auto tours with speakers, stopping for meetings in the principal towns in Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Gloucester, Middlesex, Salem and Somerset counties; held during the last week of the campaign automobile parades covering Burlington, Hudson, Morris, Passaic and Union counties and the city of Camden; handled the getting in and sending out of its own election returns, in co-operation with the Associated Press, commenting on which the manager of the election department of the Associated Press said that they had never handled a political campaign where the returns came in better and few where they came in as well. By midnight complete returns were in from 70 per cent. of the State. This result was entirely due to the splendid co-operation of the county chairmen and local workers throughout the State, who only knew one day in advance that this work would be required of them.

CHILDREN TO HEAR TALKS ON HYGIENE

Health Crusade Day of Tuberculosis Week Will Be Observed.

Every child in the city of Plainfield and all adjoining suburbs and townships will today hear at least a five minute talk on the importance of health, if plans of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield are carried out, and its members have received pledges enough from teachers and parents to insure the truth of the statement.

This is Children's Health Crusade Day of Tuberculosis week. Its purpose is to impress upon the child the importance of body hygiene, and especially the means of prevention of the dreaded white plague, and literature has been sent to every teacher in the public schools of this section urging them to devote twenty minutes, if possible, to the subject during their classes.

Tomorrow the Seventh-Day Adventists will devote to religious services and the next day will be Tuberculosis Sunday, ending the annual national program of the society. Each of the religious or semi-religious bodies in the country is urged to recognize the day, and there is ample proof of interest in Plainfield in the number of requests that have been made by local pastors and church workers for literature.

FOUR SOLOISTS TO BE HEARD IN THE "MESSIAH"

Those who go to hear the "Messiah" on Tuesday evening, December 14, at the High School Auditorium will hear an oratorio of unusual quality. It will surpass the production given last year, and those who heard that remember what a splendid performance it was. Besides the excellent chorus there will be the four soloists, who are the foremost oratorio singers of the day. Miss Marie Morrisey, who is to sing the contralto part, has a wonderful voice, being sweet, sympathetic and mellow. She has sung in concerts, oratorios and musical festivals in all the large cities. Tickets are on sale or exchanged at Miller's drug store.

HELP THE POSTOFFICE.

Postmaster Hoagland has issued the usual request that people consider the postal clerks and carriers as well as the employes in the stores in the matter of the Christmas rush That the public can help in expediting the Christmas service everyone knows, but most people wait until the last minute with all their mail. The postoffice department is concerned about efficient service, but there is another side, as the Paterson Call points out. The carrier always gets the brunt of the burden, and the clerks have more than a man's share of the work.

The distribution of the load over many days will make it easier for the workers. The man in the postal employ earns every cent he gets any time in the year, and at the Christmas reason he doubly earns his money, and gets no overtime pay. There is not a deal of pleasure in handling all the mail we get day after day, and there is less when we load up the mails with the bundles of Christmas cheer. Yet we have never seen a grouchy postman at Christmas time. He seems to reflect the cheer he carries in his pack, and no matter how heavy his burden, he comes to you with a smile.

It won't hurt us one bit to help a little in the Christmas mail distribution. We can make out our lists now, get our packages ready and mail them at the first opportunity. If enough of us do our Christmas shopping early we may make it possible for more of our good friends in the postal employ to realize a merry Christmas in their homes. Let us do what we can, anyway!

The other day an automobile driver was nearly killed in this city because he cranked his car while the gears were "in mesh." As it was he was severely injured, and unable to work for some time. It is a wonder that there are not more accidents of this kind. One of the favorite diversions of small boys is to run up to an automobile standing along the curb, blow the horn, fool with the levers which control the brake and gears, and on the whole make a nuisance of themselves. This little trick is one at which most people smile, thinking only of it from the viewpoint of the boy, but the truth of the matter is that strenuous steps should be taken to stop this practice of the youngsters. The police should be instructed to bring a few of them into headquarters, and let Judge DeMeza give them a good lecture. One or two examples of this kind would soon put a stop to the practice.

There is a story going the rounds that the new city hall site could have been purchased six months ago for $16,500. While it is hardly worth denying, for the sake of those people who might put credence in such a yarn, it is a fact that $25,000 was refused for the property five years ago, and nothing in the same vicinity has been purchasable for several years at so cheap a price per foot as the city paid.

Now that a city hall site is procured, and the building will soon be under way, the next Council should turn its attention to the park question. For years there has been talk about the necessity for this, and it has all ended in talk. Mayor Calkins and the councilmen by taking the action they did have earned the thanks of every citizen, and now they can earn a lot more by providing a suitable park.

After a reading of the exchanges, one thing is evident. President Wilson has struck a responsive chord on the Preparedness question. Regardless of party affiliations the newspapers all seem to approve of what he had to say on that score.

The knockers can say all they want to about the streets of Plainfield. Those who have taken the trouble to investigate know that criticism is all wrong, when a comparison is made with other communities nearby.

If you want your part of the Christmas fund to do really effective work, send your check today. The purchasing committee are getting busy, and they want to know at once how much to spend.

Plainfield will lose the services of two excellent city fathers on January first when Messrs. Clay and Claybrook leave the Council. Both have done splendid work for the city.

"Parade Pupular Feature," says a headline. And we'll bet the city editor said "dog gone it" when he saw that proof reader's error.

What has become of that good old fashioned nine column country newspaper that made good shelf paper?

ATTRACTIVE PROGRAM FOR SCOTTISH CONCERT

Under the auspices of Clan Mackenzie, Order Scottish Clans, the annual concert and dance will be given at Columbus Auditorium, tonight. The committee in charge, of which Robert Murray is the chairman, has arranged an attractive progam. Immediately following the concert there will be a grand march after which dancing will be enjoyed.

The artists who will present the program comprise Mrs. Edith Hallett Frank, soprano; Miss Florence Mulholland, contralto; Theodore Martin, tenor; William Holmes, baritone, Robert Davidson, and troupe of Highland dancers; Piper Major Peter Mackinnon, of Westfield; R. F. Fritchney, Scottish comedian. Herbert J. Harold will be the accompanist and John Mitchell's orchestra will furnish the music for dancing.

LITERARY

An Unusual Recipe.

In the January Woman's Home Companion is a recipe by Cora Farmer Perkins, in charge of the cooking school formerly directed by the late Fannie Merritt Farmer, whose fame was national. Here it is:

"Date Bread: Mix one cupful of warm wheat mush, one-fourth cuptul of brown sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one tablespoonful of butter; then add one-fourth yeast cake, broken in pieces and dissolved in one-fourth cupful of lukewarm water, and two and one-fourth cupfuls of bread flour (once sifted). Toss on a slightly floured board and knead. Return to mixing bowl, cover, and let rise over-night. In the morning cut down and add two-thirds cupful of dates stoned and cut in pieces, and two-thirds cupful of chopped English walnut meats. Shape into a loaf, put in buttered bread pan, cover, and again let rise. Bake in a moderate oven fifty minutes."

Great Statesmen

We find, in studying them closely—
These statesmen that we once called great—
That they cut up and act morosely
And pick a quarrel with their fate
If someone else succeeds in bringing
About their own long-sought reform.
That ought, it seems, to set them singing—
It merely makes them sulk or storm!

One time we fell for their pretensions,
And thought their very hearts were set
On what they preached—now their dimensions
Have shrunken, much to our regret.
We find that what they really long for
Is not the righteous thing, per se,
But that the thing they are so strong for
Is having great things done "by me."

Conscience

(Should be divided into two syllables: Con-science. Get that!)

The conscientious manufacturer of cartridges for domestic use only, who had sternly sworn not to make any for use in the war, said to his trade-getter:

"How is business?"

"Fine! Never so rushed with orders before, sir."

"You haven't taken any of those accursed war orders!"

"No, indeed. Not one."

"What has caused our rush?"

"Well, you see most of our competitors are engaged in making war stuff, and they have cheerfully turned over the domestic trade to us so they can devote themselves to the foreign trade."

"The dastards! How dare they profit by the taking of human life? Well! put on as many more hands as are needed, and if necessary we will put on a night-shift. But no profiting by the war, mind you!"

Advertising

Advertising is what nothing was ever sold without

If a loaf of bread is sold to a tramp who managed to glom onto a jitney, it had been advertised by the tramp's hunger and by somebody who told the bo where the bakery was.

Or by the window of the bakery itself.

There isn't a human being who doesn't believe in advertising.

If he really doesn't, he had better commit suicide.

And that will give him a lot of publicity that nobody can cash in on.

The man who claims not to believe in advertising is a—well, let Roosevelt say it.

This boob is anxious for everybody to tell other people that his place is a good one to trade.

But he won't give the advertiser anything for telling the other folks.

He is a something-for-nothing tightwad.

The man who puts on good clothes advertises his own respectability, and expects results in the shape of the respect of others.

The man who dresses poorly because of necessity or purposely, advertises his poverty and expects results in other people's help or contempt.

The doctor claims it is unethical to advertise, but he wants the newspaper to mention every time he has a case.

Unless he loses it.

In fact, every honest person wants advertising.

Only dishonest people are afraid of it, and they get it anyway.

Mathematically Speaking

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D

One Good Thing About Breweries

THE old, chronic varicose or leg ulcer which is covered with a dry, resistant, indurated slough is one of the most discouraging conditions to treat. Any one who suffers with such an ulcer will do well to consider what the brewery has to offer in the way of treatment.

The suggestion, so far as we are aware, was originally made by the late Dr. Roswell Park, the distinguished surgeon, author and teacher of Buffalo, N. Y. We have found it very valuable, and only our inborn hatred for breweries and all their works has prevented us from passing the information on to our readers. Now, however, the poor breweries are having a pretty hard time keeping their heads above water; furthermore they have been remarkably courteous and accommodating in furnishing quantities of their by-product for our patients, so we must suppress our racial antipathy and speak the truth about an excellent remedy—brewer's yeast.

Any old sore that is covered with a dirty, gangrenous or resistant slough, or any ulcer which refuses to assume the bright red, granular, velvety appearance of a healing wound (granulating surface) may be treated with brewer's yeast to good advantage. The yeast is obtained fresh every two or three days from the brewery in a wide-mouthed jar or pail—a quart or so at a time—and kept in the refrigerator. If the brewer's real product tastes and acts as well as this by-product smells we do not blame the few million people who consume the former.

Apply the semi-fluid yeast on sterile gauze folded in several thicknesses. First bathe the ulcer thoroughly in sterile water. Over the gauze apply a layer of rubber dam such as dentists use, or a square of oiled silk, or a piece of oiled or waxed paper, to prevent too rapid drying of the yeast. Then a little cotton for padding, and finally a snug bandage, preferably an elastic, an ideal, or a woolen flannel bandage made from flannel cut on the bias.

The yeast smarts a little at first. But it will clean up the ulcer and institute healthy healing. It must be changed about every eight hours. At each re-dressing bathe the ulcer gently with warm boiled water, but avoid touching it with anything—just pour the water over it to remove all the old yeast and any secretions from the surface.

The yeast dressings may be kept up for a week, more or less, until the ulcer becomes fairly clean.

Of course the nutrition of the tissues is better when the patient is off the feet. A week in bed is better than a pound of salve for any varicose ulcer.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Dandruff Remedy Par Excellence

I am sure it would gratify many readers other than myself if you would suggest a good application for dandruff.

Answer—We have a letter if you will supply postage. But here is a salve which usually does great good if massaged in systematically, by parting the hair here and there and applying the salve to the scalp only: Powdered sulphur, a dram; salicylic acid, half dram; ointment of rose water, one ounce.

CLOCKS

WHEREVER you find civilization, there also you will find the clock busily reminding man that he is fifteen minutes behind the world and that unless he hustles like thunder he will have all the skin on his heels worn off by the onrushing future.

The world has not always had clocks. Once mankind told time by the sun alone. Adam counted time by days, and it took him over 150 years to become a grandfather. Then the hour glass was invented and man told time by hours. Our courts still do business at eight o'clock until nine o'clock and most of them are two years behind. When the clock was finally devised man began telling time by minutes. But clocks are going out of date in hustling countries, because they do not have second hands and the man who does not carry a watch is likely to overrun his lunch minute by over $50 worth of time.

Clocks are of various sizes and tell time by hours of different sizes too. The clock in the church sometimes has hours two days long. The clocks in the homes of beautiful young daughters have hours which are so short that a young man will frequently use up four of them while trying to tell a girl good-night. Clocks in schools and offices have only two hours—lunch hour and quitting hour. The clock in Congress has a wonderful, elastic hour which is frequently stretched clear out into the next day, when Congress is too busy to adjourn at noon.

There are three kinds of clocks—alarm clocks, real clocks and wedding clocks. Alarm clocks tell a man he ought to get up by exploding in the early morning hours with a soul-scarifying din, which they keep up until hit with a chair. Formerly millions of alarm clocks were sold, but the manufacturers are now making them so durable and effective that no one will buy them. Alarm clocks are useful but unpopular, like alarm statesmen. Real clocks are kept on the mantelpiece and serve to keep the meals waiting for the husband instead of letting him wait for meals. Wedding clocks are used for ornaments and exercise. After a man has wound a wedding clock once a day for a year, he has a magnificently developed thumb and forefinger, but he is also as likely as not to be living two weeks ahead of the calendar and to be getting his breakfast in the afternoon.

Two classes of men are inveterate clock watchers—lazy men and ambitious men. The lazy man watches the clock in order to find out, just when to stop working. The ambitious man watches it to see if he can't crowd more work into an hour than he did the day before. Clocks are used in all lines of business, except on branch line railroads, where the trains are run by the almanac.

Views Of The Press

"Let's Quit!"

WHEN the nebulous comet enveloped the earth with a peculiarly poisonous but non-fatal gas in H. G. Wells's sociological romantic novel, "In the Days of the Comet," two hostile forces were drawn up opposite each other, "somewhere" in Europe, to begin fighting on the morrow. The blue vapors settled down, however, through the earth's atmosphere, and harmlessly put both bodies of men, together with all the rest of mankind (save the crew of a submerged submarine), fast asleep. When they woke up the next day a strange thing had happened—common sense had come to them. For the first time rancor, prejudice, bigotry, racial blindness, and many other senseless traits fell away, leaving them clear-sighted and free. The result was that the troops of one camp crossed to the opponents'; both armies fraternized; the war was not only over—it was impossible. A few sentences from the Manchester Guardian recall this scene. They purport to narrate truthfully an incident witnessed only the day before the last great attack in France by an officer who now lies wounded in London. We read:

A board was hoisted in the German trenches bearing the inscription—

"The English are Fools."

No one wasted a bullet on such poor abuse. The board went down and reappeared with the addition—

"The French are Fools."

It was ignored by the British. Then the board came up again with a third line—

"We are Fools."

A lively interest was now awakened in the board. On its last appearance it bore the inscription—

"Why not all go home?"

People's Legal Friend

BY E. R. BRANSON

A Moral Obligation

Q. A young man, thirty years old, was taken ill while on a visit. He was taken care of by some strangers, who procured medical attention for him and otherwise assisted him. After he regained his health, his father promised to pay these people for the expenses incurred by them. Would this promise hold against him, in law?

A. No. The father's promise was based upon a purely moral consideration.

An Author's Rights

Q. What rights does an author have as to his unpublished writings? If a manuscript should be wrongfully taken from his possession, or wrongfully used, would he have any remedy?

A. He has a property right in an unpublished manuscript and is entitled to maintain an action for its wrongful appropriation or use.

The Builder's Opinion

Q. Please inform me whether a builder's opinion will be received in court concerning the strength or durability of a sustaining wall?

A. Expert opinions of this kind have been held to be admissible.

Not Binding

Q. Where goods are sold, and the seller afterward makes a warranty respecting them, will it hold good?

A. A warranty made after the completion of the sale, and based upon such past transaction, will not be binding.

Minor Must Pay

Q. Will a boy under age be legally bound to pay for necessary medical services furnished him at his request?

A. Yes.

An Informal Contract

Q. May a corporation make a legal and binding contract without using its corporate seal?

A. It may sometimes. If the law does not require the transaction to be evidenced by means of a document under seal, the use of the seal is not indispensable.

A Careless Signature

Q. Please give me your opinion as to the following facts: A man signed a deed, without reading it, believing it to be a lease. Subsequently, the person to whom the property was sold decided to sell it to another man and did so. The first man wants to know whether the conveyance made by him can be considered his deed and wishes to be informed as to what rights he has.

A. If the first man was able to read, and executed the deed without reading it, he is bound by his act in case the property is re-sold to an innocent purchaser for value.

A Private Corporation

Q. Who has the right to create or authorize a corporation for private profit?

A. This power is vested in the legislature of the state, subject to limitations imposed by the Constitution.

The See-Saw

Q. I am occupying a building, under a lease for five years. The lease is partly printed and partly in writing, a printed form having been adapted and used for the purpose. Some dispute has arisen concerning the meaning of some parts of the lease, and the written part seems to contradict the printed words. How should the lease be interpreted?

A. If it is possible to reconcile the different parts of the lease, so as to give effect, consistently, to the entire instrument, this should be done, but if there is a manifest contradiction or inconsistency between the printed and the written portions, effect should be given to the written parts of the instrument.

Pepper Talks

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Fear-Thought

We all, sooner or later, learn that the only serious Fear is Self-Fear. This world is a very open sort of an affair. Harm and disaster are most accidental—and of accidents we all most cheerfully await our turn, taking them without Fear.

It's the pesky little things that never could happen, that would do little or no harm if they did happen, that make us gray haired and nerve rattled.

Fear is foreign. It has no place in the healthy Mind. So that the Mind that entertains Fear gives to a Vicious Robber.

The measure of your Happiness and your Success will always be in proportion to your ability to laugh at and defeat, stingingly, this arch sneak-thief—Fear.

Fear hands out Worry, Jealousy, Suspicion, Indifference—Hatred. And Fear knocks in the head every fine, delicate, big-minded affair.

Once let Fear dominate your Thought and you might as well surrender and hunt up a new house to live in.

Current Poetry

Ambition's Finish

A man with firm and piercing gaze
And hair well touched with white
Stood pensive as the twilight haze
Was melting into night.
"I've wealth," he said, "and case complete,
Yet for one thing I sigh—
I vainly wish that I could eat
A second piece of pie.

"The hours are gone, alas! for me,
When I would never wince
While going through the list with glee,
From custard down to mince.
The days so strangely short and sweet,
How they have passed me by!
What would befall if I should eat
A second piece of pie!

"A bit of pastry now and then,
I nibble, half afraid:
My word among my fellow-men
Is instantly obeyed.
But I desire no tributes neat,
Nor flattery flaunted high,
I only wish that I could eat
A second piece of pie."

Snap Shots

By Jay E. House

There is a time in every man's life when he becomes the publicity agent of union underwear.

Clell Bixby, who is married again, was divorced from his first wife. "Yes," he said to an old friend who came in yesterday after a long absence, "I am serving my second term."

When a man can restrain his indignation long enough to shed his coat the fight never comes off.

It is but fair to say, however, that the sex should not be judged by the Indiana girl who had a man arrested on the charge that he attempted to kiss her.

When a man begins to raise money on his clothing the first bundle offered at the pawnshop contains his white gloves.

After the girl's folks have told everybody else about the engagement they break the news to the prospective bridegroom.

It is Tank Beverly's idea that a tidy fortune awaits the inventor of a device which will enable a fat man to scratch his own back.

Inspect a girl's dressing table and you will find that most of the stuff displayed upon it is bait for men.

This rule holds good in most instances. In looking for trouble first find an affinity.

When a man says his baby waked the household but once during the night is he boastful or apologetic?

WOUNDS SCORNED ON FIELD AT LOOS

Lieutenant, His Leg Shattered, Dragged Wire Over Trenches.

NEARLY ALL WERE HIT TWICE

Men Stuck to Their Posts, Refusing Hospital Aid—One Officer Shot Seven Times—London Report Asserts That One English Soldier Captured Seven Germans in Cellar.

Among after tales of the great battle of Loos, which have just appeared in the official records, are stories of the heroism of various individual officers during the progress of the battle who have been rewarded by the military cross or the Distinguished Service Order.

One of the most remarkable deeds was that of Lieutenant Hollwey of the Royal artillery, who took a field telephone and wire to a little force of British who were clinging to the trenches on the far side of the captured Hohenzollern redoubt.

At times Hollwey had to crawl across the tops of the excavations, in plain view of the German machine gunners only a few hundred yards away, slowly uncoiling telephone wire behind him. Before he had gone ten yards he was hit in the leg. He crawled on. Before he had finished his task another missile struck the same leg, breaking the bone.

Still Hollwey struggled on. Two other telephone men crawled out to take him to safety and for their pains were ordered to leave him and finish laying out the wire. Not until all was secure would he consent to be carried to the hospital.

Nearly All Wounded Twice.

Scarcely one of the officers mentioned in the orders but was wounded at least twice. Captain Dennis of the Scottish borderers, twice wounded and carried to the rear, scrambled out of the ambulance, escaped from the dressing station and ran back to his company to be with them on the final charge, only to receive a third bullet. But even Captain Dennis was surpassed by Captain Kearsley of the Welsh fusiliers, who stuck to his post at the head of his men until he had been hit no less than seven times.

Major Gordon of the London artillery, sent forward to the German trenches with a reconnoitering party, shot one German with his revolver and returned through the midst of a terrific fire, marching twelve German prisoners before him.

Captain Bird of the London field ambulance corps worked for twenty-three hours without a stop, tending wounded and carrying them to the rear through a terrific shell fire, and was twice seen coolly carrying off wounded on a stretcher with German rifle bullets whistling all around him. He remained on duty for fifty-five hours in all without a rest.

Lieutenant Williams of the Buffs, heading a bomb party, threw 2,000 bombs in seventeen hours, holding his position throughout that time in a heavy rainstorm, lighting the damp fuses from his cigarette. After he had been relieved it was discovered that he had been seriously wounded early in the fighting.

Captain Williams of the Welsh guards, commanding a machine gun squad, was dangerously wounded, but returned to his post and directed the fire of his men while lying on his back on the ground, unable to raise himself, until at midnight relief came up, and he was carried to the rear.

Lieutenant Wood of the Gordon highlanders, after marching 275 prisoners, taken in Loos by himself and his company, to the rear, returned with badly needed supplies of ammunition to find his company clinging desperately to a position under hill 70, under heavy fire, and with every other officer down. He promptly took command and held on to the position until relieved.

Lieutenant Pusch of the London infantry, head of a bomb party, was engaged in the perilous work of routing the Germans out of the cellars in Loos in which they had taken refuge. Plunging into one house ahead of his men, he found himself alone in the presence of seven Germans, one of whom fired on him and wounded him in the face. In spite of this he captured the entire lot and continued with his work without stopping to have his wound dressed.

HIS CISTERN FULL OF CIDER.

Farmer's Crop Too Big For Barrels, He Uses Paraffined Undearth Tank.

Albert F. Dougan has a 185 barrel cistern brimming full of good apple cider on his farm four miles southwest of Princeton, Ind. Handicapped by lack of barrels and the immensity of his apple crop, Mr. Dougan had a huge cistern constructed.

It was well lined with concrete, and a heavy coating of paraffin was placed over the concrete, while a regular cistern pump, new and clean, fitted closely over the top. Then he started making cider with his big mill, a pipe carrying the cider from the press directly into the cistern, where the paraffin coating keeps the apple juice fresh and sweet and prevents fermentation. He pumps the cider from the cistern the same as water.

PICKING CANDIDATE.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—All the nominations for president and vice president of the United States on the Socialist ticket are in today, and preparations are under way by the national headquarters of the party to hold a referendum to determine the final choice to head the ticket in 1916. All candidates receiving nominations from ten or more locals will be on the referendum slate. The early activity of the Socialists is not disturbing the big parties, but it is a notable event, in that this is the first time candidates for President and Vice President of any political party have been nominated by a referendum vote of the entire membership.

Stood Back in Triumph to Watch Her Bonfire.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Anne Made An Expensive Bonfire.

"I MADE a bonfire of autumn leaves today, daddy," said Jack as soon as his papa sat down in the armchair that meant a story.

"That reminds me of Anne's bonfire!" cried daddy. "Would you both like to hear about it?" So the children nestled down beside daddy, and he began: "About thirty miles from Uncle Ben's farm, in another county, a poor man who had no overcoat broke into a house and stole one to keep himself warm one cold night. Everybody talked a great deal about this poor thief, and when Anne heard of him she worried night and day lest some burglars break into Uncle Ben's house and steal something. Of course Uncle Ben only laughed at her. But Anne still worried and every night spent an hour barring doors that already locked, nailing down windows already bolted."

"Was Anne too fussy?" asked Evelyn.

"No, Anne was wonderful. She loved all the family so much that she would not bear the idea of harm coming to any one. Well, one late November afternoon she told Uncle Ben that she guessed she would rake up the leaves in the front yard. Now, it was Hank Fritz's work to rake the yards, and Uncle Ben told Anne that Hank would do it now. But soon as Uncle Ben got out of sight Anne wound a red tippet over her funny hair, pinned up her alpaca skirt, put on her mittens and raked up a pile of maple leaves much higher than she was. Then she slipped back into the house and came out with a little wooden box that she tossed right into the middle of the leaves. Then quick as a flash she tucked a lighted match underneath and stood back in triumph to watch her bonfire."

"What was in the box, daddy?" cried both Jack and Evelyn.

Daddy smiled. "She poked and piled on more leaves and heaped on little sticks every time the blaze died down, and in about half an hour there was nothing left of her excellent bonfire but a little handful of ashes. Then Anne ran joyfully to Uncle Ben and told him that she had just burned up her bankbook with $200 on it and the deed of her farm up state, so that now there need be no temptation for burglars to break into the house.

"Probably for the first time in his life Uncle Ben scolded Anne. 'Now you needn't worry about burglars!' Anne told him. 'But I never have worried!' cried Uncle Ben. Then he saw how unselfish and devoted Anne had been. So he gave her $200 more and said, since she had no farm of her own now, she might always stay on his farm as long as she lived."

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The Sutners Get a Very Bad Scare, Which Later Proves Unfounded.

When John Sutner opened the door and saw Mr. Jaynes standing on the steps his heart gave a great bound and then stopped. Had he come with an officer to arrest him? Jaynes did not wait for Sutner to recover his breath,

"Get your coat on, Sutner; I want you to go with me. I have something to show you," he said, stepping inside without waiting for an invitation.

With a terrible sinking in the heart John set a chair for his uninvited guest and went to the closet for his coat and hat.

"I must tell Molly," he thought. "No telling when I can come back."

"Molly," he called softly, "Mr. Jaynes wants me to go with him."

"Where?" asked his wife in faint

"I do not know." His face was white and drawn with suffering.

"I am going with you, dear. Whatever it is, we can stand it together." She reached in the closet for her coat.

"What about Jack? Have you forgotten him?"

"We will stop and ask Mrs. Moore to sit with him a few minutes. He is asleep and will make no trouble. Besides, I shall not be gone long. I can't let you go alone." She threw her arms around his neck and he clasped her in a close embrace. Just then Jaynes looking up saw their reflection in a mirror. He passed the back of his hand over his eyes and looked away.

"May I go with you, too?" asked Molly, coming up to Mr. Jaynes with extended hand. "I may be able to help him." She summoned the ghost of a smile to her face.

"Sure thing! Glad to have you," was the hearty response. Molly, with a wildly beating heart, prayed for strength to face she knew not what, as they whirled through the frosty night.

Jaynes jumped out and helped Molly to alight in front of the office.

"Come on; they are waiting for us," he said cheerily, and led the way to the room where the silent quartet were sitting.

"Here, Mr. Tyler, is the innocent man you tried to saddle your crime on." Jaynes's voice rang through the silent room.

"Your good friend Miss Osgood here is to be thanked for discovering the thief."

Julia stepped forward smiling and held out her hand to Sutner.

"My penchant for seeing lights in between the shades and windows served you a good turn this time."

"Please tell me what this is; I do not understand." John passed his hand in a dazed way over his forehead.

"Miss Osgood was passing here tonight, and saw a light. She rushed in here with her friend and caught this fellow helping himself to the money in the safe. Then she telephoned me to come. She is a cool one, all right. Pinkerton lost a good detective when she was made a woman." Julia laughed light-heartedly.

"Now, sir, please fork over your haul of tonight." Jaynes turned to Tyler. The unhappy man reached in his pocket and laid the roll of bills on the table near him.

"Mr. Cane, here, is the expert who came down from Kansas City to go over the books. He will do that tomorrow with Sutner's help. In the meantime, my man, we will see that you are made comfortable behind locked doors where we can get at you when wanted."

"If you people will wait here till Cane and I come back, I'll take you all home," he added. Motioning to Cane, he took hold of Tyler's arm and the three went out.

When the door closed Molly went up to Julia Osgood and laying both hands on her shoulders said:

"My husband is too dazed by his good fortune to think to introduce us, but I want to thank you from a full heart for your part in this night's happy work." She leaned forward and impulsively kissed Julia's cheek. John seemed to begin to realize the delightful state of things and came striding over to his wife's side.

"I am sure this is all a happy dream, but I want to shake hands with you before I wake up," he said, gripping Julia's hand.

Life in the Trenches

A series of letters written by Canadian Officers now in Belgium, who are relatives of Councilman Allan Cowperthwait, of North Plainfield, have been received by him. The series gives such a graphic description of the life which the Canadian contingent is leading in Belgium, that the Daily Press has secured permission to print the letters in serial form.

Sunday, Oct. 10, 1915.

Dear Frank:—

I was more than glad to get your letter today. I thought I had already written you and Fred regarding the banking arrangements I had made for Helen. All the money I had was deposited in the Bank of Montreal, Waterloo Place, Pall Mall, London, and my pay is credited there monthly. The account has been made a joint one, and Helen need not be in want if her money is slow in coming from Canada at any time. I also left her some blank drafts on the company in case of absolute need and wrote them regarding the foregoing.

My expenses here are about seventy-five cents a day for extra messing and I carry very little money with me, as we were ordered not to take gold out of England when we left. At the present time we are somewhere in Belgium in rest billets and after five days we go back to a new lot of trenches, and from there to reserve trenches and back to the trenches again, and then a rest, so next time we will be eighteen days under fire, and I understand the trenches we are going to are very wet, etc. The ones we were in twice were most comfortable and in fact we were glad to get back to them as against the rest camp and under canvas. I should like very much to write you regarding a lot of things, but the censor would likely not stand for it, and then our vocabulary is not elastic enough to get in all the scene effects to really paint the picture. It is quite different from all previous wars, according to the old-time soldiers. I thank the good Lord that my officers have a keen sense of humor and also the men. It helps us over many a hard spot, and though I would like to spin you a yarn it is so intermined with doings that mean bodily hardships who, though they seem great, after all really are not, because we are fed well and though other discomforts occur, no one can help them; it's part of the game and we have to take them as they come. The men are simply splendid and I am glad to have been strict with them since the very first. It makes it easier to handle them now under the strenuous conditions in which we naturally have to work. Soldiering is a great game at the front. I wish I could go into details but I am afraid it will have to wait until my return, and then I will have all sorts of tales to tell. I was so glad to get mother's letter today. It did me all sorts of good to get it. I also heard from Ada, Elsie and you, the last two, I think, sent on by Helen. I also had a letter from Uncle How—forwarded. He enclosed some newspaper clippings of his own contributions in favor of the Allies. I must close now and try and write again before I go back to the trenches.

Yours affectionately,

"MORGAN."

Belgium, Oct. 11, 1915.

My dear Father and Mother:—

I think it is about a week since I wrote to you. The days fly by so very quickly that it is hard to remember just when or to whom I have written. I try to write to Toronto every week and to Mr. Greig and also to Frank every now and then, so that it keeps me busy.

Well, we are out of the trenches again, and having a rest. We came out on Friday night last. We were very busy getting ready to flit when we had to get three new casualties, the worst one among them being one of my stretcher bearers. However, I think he will be all right, but it kind of balled us up at the last moment. We were, of course, the last section of the battalion to leave the trenches. We marched away about 11 p. m. with a seven-mile march ahead of us to a place and along a road I had never seen. However, I had seen a map. But it is very easy to go wrong on a night march when it is inky black. We arrived in camp about 1.00 a. m. After I got my men put away, I found headquarters was filled up, so I went back to where my horse was, put some hay in a wagon box and spread my bed on that. Then with the horse at my feet and a pigsty at my head I slept comfortably.

Saturday I moved in here. Am at present in a loft under the roof of a Flemish house, with my bed spread on some hay. My bed is very comfortable, but the surroundings aren't what you would call palatial. My only company is the rats, except that at times I feel as if I had still closer friends, but the rats are very friendly. They all came to see me the first night. In fact, they made me put up a dinner for them; the first night they took eight inches of candle which I had beside me and had a royal feast. Now I beat them to it by putting the remains of my candle under my sleeping bag. Some one with a sense of humor was here at one time, for he has written in four inches letters across a beam "Strafe the bloody rats." In the morning I am waked up by four kids and a dog howling in unison at 5:30 a. m., et quor, some place.

I understand my dressing station is to be in the cellar of a "brasserie" or brewery. Am sorry to say that the industry has been called off in that particular building for a time.

The men are getting to be as busy as a pet dog. Life in the trenches of course is very conducive to this interesting condition. The men are not really seasoned soldiers until they have a certain affection for those ticklers. No man is allowed to take off his clothes, not even his boots, for the six days he is in the trenches. When he comes out and goes into billets he gets a bath and his underclothes are handed in and boiled and he gets a clean pair. Some men benefit by the exchange, others get even worse than they had before, especially if the boiling has been imperfectly done.

Well, am getting very sleepy, so will close. Much love to all. Received your metal mirror. Many thanks. My own may get broken any day.

Your loving son,

"KENNETH."

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

If values and prices ruled about alike in all stores at all times, there would not be any such thing as store competition. And, as finding desirable values would require no especial knowledge or insight, store advertising would be superfluous.

Give a Piano with a Fine Old Name

LINDEMAN

It is here. The oldest piano in New York. Not the piano that was made 79 years ago; but a new one, in a far finer model, with 79 years of test and triumph behind it—and a lifetime of service before it.

And It Costs But $220

As between the proven and unproven how will you choose this Christmas? Men and women of three generations have proven the LINDEMAN. Seventy-nine years of uninterrupted building have refined the tone and lessened the cost. First of New York's pianos, it is still the FIRST of moderate-priced pianos, not only in New York, but in all America.

The Lindeman Player-Piano. One Model, Costs But $395

The piano at $220; the player-piano at $395—either of them on convenient terms; small payment down today, music in your home tomorrow.

The Wanamaker LEATHER GOODS SHOP

We believe there is no store in New York with so varied an appeal, with stocks so comprehensive from top to bottom, with articles crowded so full of value at each price. There may be finer things in other good shops—and at higher prices; there undoubtedly are cheaper leather goods in other places—things that we would not sell because not dependable. But, considering all goods and the variety of each grade, and the general satisfaction that each gift will bring, we feel so confident of what we have to offer that we make

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Beginning today a new program of Triangle Plays will be presented at Proctor's local playhouse. Dustin Farnum will appear in "The Iron Strain" and Raymond Hitchcock in "My Valet." "The Iron Strain" has been called the modernization of "The Taming of the Shrew," and was produced by Thomas H. Ince. Mr. Farnum gives an exceptionally strong and capable characterization of a college man roughing it in the wilds of Alaska. He is ably assisted by Miss Enid Market, who portrays a society girl in search of adventure. She accidentally meets the college man, and —well, the rest is best told on the screen. This production contains exceptionally fine views of mountain scenery, the filming of one of which nearly resulted disastrously for three members of the company. This is a production worthy of the name Triangle, and should prove a tremendous hit. In conjunction with "The Iron Strain," the management will present a Triangle Keystone comedy, "My Valet," featuring Raymond Hitchcock. Mack Sennett, the greatest comedy director, is the producer of this mirth-provoking playlet, and Mabel Normand, the greatest screen comedienne, plays an important part. She has the pleasure of being tossed around like a bean in a coal bunker tied to a rock while the surf rolls over her head, ducked in the ocean and otherwise handled with hooks. In addition to the Triangle Plays a William Fox production, entitled "The Broken Law," and starring William Farnum, the dramatic star, will be presented. It is replete with thrills, and gives this powerful actor opportunity to display his gifts of physique and pantomime. Tomorrow afternoon the usual toy matinee for the children will be held. Beginning Monday, a new program of Triangle Plays will be offered, and will include Dorothy Gish in "Old Heidelberg," and Roscoe Arbuckle, the Keystone fat boy, in "Fickle Fatty's Fall."

"Trade-marked" articles—things sold by NAME or DISTINGUISHING and IDENTIFYING BRAND—must be kept at the highest standard of quality. The VALUE must never vary. Hot Water for Sick Headaches Tells why everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it before breakfast.

Headache of any kind is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood through the lymph ducts, excite the heart, which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head, producing violent, throbbing pain and distress, called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides, which temporarily relieve but do not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for awhile, will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath, or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick, and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffing, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.—Adv.

SCOTCH ARTISTS PLEASE AUDIENCE

Annual Concert and Dance of Clan Mackenzie Proves Delightful Affair.

MAYOR MAKES ADDRESS

Program Comprises Vocal and Instrumental Numbers and Selections on Bagpipes—President Wilson Sends Regrets.

Scotch songs, stories and dances featured the annual concert and dance given in Columbus Auditorium last night, under the auspices of Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, O. S. C. The audience was an unusually large and appreciative one, and the numbers rendered by the various artists on the program were heartily encored throughout the evening.

Following a short introductory address by Robert Murray, the chairman of the affair and to whom its success was largely due, Messrs. Peter Mackinnon and Roderick Davidson of Westfield and Jersey City, gave several bagpipe selections, including marches, strathspeys and reels. Theodore Martin, a tenor, of New York city, scored a big hit with his solo numbers, "There's a Wee Bit Land" and "Of a' the Airts." In answer to repeated encores, he pleased with several other solos during the evening.

Plainfield music-lovers seldom have the opportunity of listening to such artists as Mrs. Edith Frank, soprano, and Miss Florence Hardy contralto, both of New York city. Possessed of voices of brilliant range, the two young women, who have an extremely pleasing personality, delighted the audience with their selections. Mrs. Frank sang in beautiful voice, "My Ain Folk" and "Jessie's Dream," while Miss Hardy's numbers consisted of "Come Ye by Athole" and "Angus MacDonald."

William Holmes' appearance caused a round of applause, the poular Plainfield baritone being well known to local audiences, and his "Highlandman's Toast" proved one of the selections most enthusiastically received. He also sang "Mary" and several other numbers. The rendition of a duet, "Hunting Tower," by Miss Hardy and Mr. Martin, as well as the quartet number, "Ye Banks and Braes," by Mrs. Frank and Miss Hardy, Mr. Martin and Mr. Holmes, were of a meritorious nature.

The Highland fling, sword dance, sean trews, sailors' hornpipe, skirt dance and Irish jig, executed by the Davison troupe of Highland dancers was a treat in itself, the two young women dancers, clad in native kilts, keeping excellent time to the bagpipe selections rendered by Mr Davidson. R. F. Faichney, the Scottish comedian, of Philadelphia, was in a class by himself, his "A Nice How Do Ye Do" causing roars of laughter, as well as his up-to-the-minute Scotch jokes. His "This is How We Came Hame in the Mornin'" scored another big hit.

H. J Harold, of this city, played the accompaniments throughout the evening, as well as giving several piano selections of Scotch variations. Following the concert John Mitchell's orchestra furnished the music for the dancers.

Edmund L. MacKenzie, who was scheduled to address the audience, was compelled to go home during the early part of the evening owing to a severe cold and Mr. Murray expressed the former's regret. Mayor Leightton Calkins was introduced by the chairman, and the former gave a short address of congratulation to the members on the splendid program arranged. He also gave a brief resume of the clans in the United States, who number 200, with a membership of about 25,000, and an expenditure of about a million and a half in benefits to its members. He expressed the sentiment that such an order in this country was especially desirable in that it makes for better citizenship, steadfast loyalty to a purpose, as well as truth, courage and devotion.

At the conclusion of the musical program Mr. Murray read a letter of regret from President Wilson, sent by his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, in which the latter expressed the former's appreciation of the invitation to him, and owing to an engagement n Columbus, Ohio was unable to be present. At the conclusion of the program "Auld Lang Syne" was sung, led by the artists, and the audience rising, joined in the chorus. A feature of the dance which followed was a grand march led by the bagpipers and Robert Murray.

The committee in charge of the affair last night consisted of Robert Murray, chairman; A. Campbell, A. D. Doig, William Braidwood, William Hayes, Andrew Petrie, R. C. Brown, A. R. N. Anderson, D. MacInnes, R. Baillie, J. M. Donaldson, A. Peacock, William Munroe, E. L. MacKenzie, Peter Mackinnon and Chief W. Spalding.

GOT A GILLET, BUT HE WAS NOT SAFE

Colored Woman Has Husband Arrested for Beating Her in Face.

That there is nothing in a name was proven in police court this morning when a negro woman told of having picked out a Gillet for a husband, but failed to get a safe one. Emery Gillet, the husband, was arraigned on a charge of having assaulted his wife with his fist. He said he beat his wife because she went two and three weeks without speaking to him, but she denied this, and charged him with drinking.

Upon their statement that there were five children in the family Judge DeMeza acted as peacemaker and after they had made up he dismissed the charge against Gillet and told him to be nice to his wife and children, and quit drinking.

VOLUNTEER POLICE ATTRACT NOTICE

North Plainfield Township Asked to Explain Unique Plan.

The volunteer police force of North Plainfield township has attracted State-wide attention and recently Chairman William de La Roche Anderson received a letter from George A. Viehman, president of the New Jersey Chamber of Commerce, asking for details of the plan. The State Chamber is attempting to determine whether there is a need for a rural patrol in the State, and if so whether the cost be commensurate with that need.

Mr. Anderson's answer, giving details of the North Plainfield township plan, follows:

"In answer to your letter of inquiry concerning a citizen police system as established in North Plainfield township would say that such a system is merely carrying out the principles of a volunteer fire department into a police department—volunteer firemen for small or rural communities, why not volunteer police?

"Answering your first question, 'Anticipated protection.' Protection will be in proportion to the civic interest and spirit of the citizen members of such a department and will be general in nature.

"Second 'Number of men.' The number of men will also be governed by the interest in local public welfare of the people, but should in all cases be sufficient to meet local requirements.

"Third, 'The cost.' The cost will only be that of supplying a proper equipment, such as hand-cuffs, club, electric handlamp, badge and revolver—about $20 per man—and the defraying of each man's expenses for transportation and the like when incurred in answering a call or in making an arrest.

"Fourth, 'The territory involved. The territory involved is the whole municipality.

"Fifth, 'The nature of the territory.' North Plainfield township is of a rugged nature, well-wooded hills, from which wide and entrancing views may be obtained, divide fertile valley and low-land, and lies along the confines of the communities of Plainfield, North Plainfield borough, Dunellen, Bound Brook and Scotch Plains, whose forty thousand residents take advantage of its rural beauties and pure air in using it as a pleasure park and breathing spot.

"Sixth, 'How is the plan working out.' The plan is working out very satisfactorily. In addition to the actual service and protection rendered the psychological effect of having an officer of the law always readily at hand is a wonderful preventative. It is the most economic and effective system that can be instituted."

LAST GAME TOMORROW.

The Independents will play the last game of football to be seen in town this season when they tackle the fast Bound Brook eleven in Netherwood tomorrow at 3:30 p. m.

SAYS CAPT. FLYNN GOT HIS $20,000

Crazy Man Also Talks to Senator Martine From Police Cell.

United States Senator James Martine was awfully busy with the duties of the nation in Washington last night, but that didn't prevent Mack Davis, colored, from talking to him over the telephone for more than two hours, according to Davis. So important was his business that he had a special 'phone installed in his cell at police headquarters, and from there he conversed with the Senator until late in the night. Davis is the man who walked into the police station last Sunday to surrender, saying that a German regiment had murdered his wife. He lost $16,000 in his cell during the night. This morning he accused Captain Flynn of taking $23,000 from him and asked Judge De Meza to lock the captain up. Mack worked Sunday, he said, and made a million and a half dollars answering the telephone for a friend of his but he has not collected yet and is thinking of suing. He was pronounced insane early in the week, but was not committed to the State asylum in the hope that he would improve, but there seems to be little chance of this.

JOY OF GIVING AIDS COMMUNITY XMAS

In Sending Check One Person Wishes It Could Be Made Ten Times as Large.

"It gives me great pleasure to send my check of ten dollars. I wish it were ten times as much as it is to help along the beautiful work of the Community Christmas," said a letter received this morning by Treasurer DeWitt Hubbell, of that worthy cause, and it in brief reflects the sentiments expressed by every person who contributes. The five hundred dollar mark has been safely passed, so that Plainfield kiddies are already assured a substantial lot of gifts, and not a few of their elders will get flour, coal and other necessities.

The distributing committee of the work wish to emphasize the fact that all persons who are going to help anyone at the Christmas time make that fact known by addressing a letter to the Community Christmas Committee, so that there may be no conflict, and some people get more than their share, and others not get enough. There have already been some conflicts discovered, and it is hoped that so far as possible these will all be avoided.

Chairman Richard A. Claybrook, of the general committee in charge, is greatly pleased at the response thus far. Not a few people have told him that they are sending their checks to Mr. Hubbell, and the mail received by the latter official bears out the statement. He can be reached by addressing him care the Plainfield Trust Company.

Boxes into which contributions may be dropped for the cause have been placed in the drug stores of Dudley S. Miller, C. H. Hall, William M. Walsh, Peter B. Hodge, United Drug Company and L. W. Randolph.

Those who have sent in checks since yesterday are Samuel Rothberg Mrs. Henry C. Cochran, H. F. Milliken, S. J. Binninger, Alan M. Johnson, Louise K. Atwood, Charles H. Russell, Mrs. Frank Pierson, Arthur M. Harris, B. O. Bowers and Mrs. Rowland Cox.

CHRISTMAS FUND TOTALS $227,000

Plainfield Trust Co. Distributes That Amount to its Patrons Today.

CHECKS ARE MAILED

Popularity of the Plan Has Steadily Grown During Past Three Years—New Club to Be Started Monday, December 27.

This is a happy day for some six thousand people in Plainfield, for it so happens that it is the day that the Plainfield Trust Company has selected to distribute the $227,000 in its Christmas Club fund. The checks were mailed to members this morning, and will doubtless be in their hands on Monday. In its desire to co-operate with those who are advocating early Christmas shopping, the company has made a strenuous effort to close the fund ahead of time, and by the employment of extra help it has succeeded in mailing the checks a week earlier than last year. This will materially assist those who use their check for the purchase of Christmas gifts. There are many however, who turn the amount received right over to the tax collector while other thrifty ones deposit their checks in permanent savings accounts. That the popularity of the Christmas Club grows with each succeeding year is evidenced by the increase in the total amount deposited The first year that the club was operated $70,000 was distributed; the second year, $160,000; the third year $198,000, and this year, $227,000 The success of the plan is due to the fact that it is easy and practical, and that it produces results. Probably no other plan ever devised has so conclusively demonstrated the fact that it is possible for everyone to save something out of the week's receipts, and that it is systematic saving that counts.

For the past few years there has been a concerted effort on the part of bankers, educators and philanthropists to strengthen the foundations of our social structure by encouraging thrift among the people, and to that end much helpful and instructive information has been disseminated through the media of printed matter moving pictures and various savings plans. Of these plans it is safe to say that none has met with such great success as the Christmas Club which is now in operation in hundreds of banks and trust companies throughout the country. The system of even weekly payments, which, in the new club to be opened by the Plainfield Trust Company on December 27, will range from 50 cents to $5, is so simple that anyone can understand it, and because of the atmosphere of cordiality which pervades the institution, members come to look forward with pleasure to their regular visits to its building.

Officers of the trust company state that a warm welcome will be extended to those who wish to join the 1916 club, and that detailed announcements regarding it will be made within the next week or two.

HIDES BOY TO KEEP HIM FROM HOSPITAL

Stubborn German Will Not Let Tubercular Son Be Cared For.

Because he spirited away his thirteen-year-old boy to prevent his being sent to Bonnie Burn Sanitorium, Ludwig Thoms, an aged German, was in police court this morning.

Miss Maybelle Phillips was responsible for the appearance of Thoms before Judge De Meza. She is agent for the Charity Organization Society, which has been supporting him for almost two years because of an attack which resulted in the German being blinded for months. He has recovered now sufficiently to care for himself, and one child has secured a position, so that there is but the thirteen-year-old son troubling the society.

Drs. Currie and Hubbard have pronounced the child a tuberculosis patient, and Miss Phillips has worked for weeks to have him admitted to the sanatorium. Just when the proper authority was secured the father sent the boy to Brooklyn, where he is out of the jurisdiction of local authorities. He was in court this morning, but the judge was powerless to act. Efforts to reason with Thoms proved fruitless, and after almost a half-hour of arguing and pleading with the German, Miss Phillips quit in disgust, exclaiming, "Now I know why Europe is in war."

Despite the father's stubbornness local authorities are determined that the boy shall not be permitted to die of tuberculosis, also that he shall no be permitted to carry contagion to others, and Miss Phillips went to Brooklyn this afternoon in the hopes of getting the co-operation of officials there in having him committeed

Dr. Eaton agreed to clear the roadway in front of his property of all trees and shrubbery that mitigate against the beauty or usefulness of the thoroughfare and will have the work done himself. He will begin this immediately, probably Monday of next week. This agreement was satisfactory to the committeemen, and there will be no new developments in the controversy.

FLOODS ARE USED AGAINST GERMANS

Belgium Army is Now Fighting Invaders With Water.

FRENCH STILL RETREAT

Allies Have Decided to Fall Back to Salonki and Use Greek Port as Base for All Operations in the Balkans.

London, Dec. 11.—Once more stricken Belgium is harassing the German invaders, despite the crippled condition of the little country. Her armies are now fighting with water instead of fire and shell. Inundations have forced the German armies out of their advanced trenches in the Yser region, and the "ferryman's house" on the canal is again the center of land fighting, Germans mine throwers having been driven out there by the accurate fire of Belgium gunners.

The French War Office has announced the retirement of the French from the positions on the Cerna River and toward Krivolak. This was carried out without difficulty, although several Bulgarian attacks were made. On Wednesday and Thursday there was violent fighting in which the Bulgarians suffered heavily, following which the French and British troops established themselves on a new front, extending approximately toward the River Bojimia, the French War Office states.

The Allies now may fall back on to Salonica, it is believed here, and there is a general demand that they continue to hold the port as a base for further near eastern operations. The question of Greece's attitude is becoming more pressing, for it is not believed that the Allies will agree to abandon Salonica, although King Constantine has promised to use the Greek army to protect their retreat through Greek territory if they agree to leave Salonica.

HOLIDAY HINTS FOR CONDUCTORS

Public Service Corporation Issues Booklet for Street Car Men.

As a reminder of the unusual demands made upon the service, and the necessity for using extra precaution in the handling of the holiday shopping traffic, General Superintendent Bolen, of Public Service Railway, has issued what he terms "Holiday Hints" to all the motormen and conductors. The "hints" are set forth on a card in acrostic fashion, so that the first letters of the various lines spell the words of the railway's motto, "Safety, Courtesy, Loyalty."

The employes are urged to keep a stock of good humor with them, and to be extra considerate of the women with children or with bundles, and of the aged infirm. "You men," reads one line, "are the opinion moulders of the company," and another one is, "Use tact when a passenger puts up an argument."

How I Found the Christmas Spirit in Wanamaker's Store New York

YEARS ago I was in a hospital. Zip - zang bang-r-r-r-i-p-p! A package of fire-crackers seemed sputting and shooting about me. Something hit me a blow on the head. I knew nothing * * * Three hours later I awoke. The operation had been successfully performed. I was at peace with the world

The noises in my head were caused by the anesthetic. They were purely imaginary. The peace in my heart was real. That peace grew and flowered in my heart as I lay there recovering. It remained many a day. It was a priceless possession. Suddenly I lost it. * * * And now I have found it again, and I must tell how.

The miracle happened the other day. I awoke with the same sputtering and shooting in my head. This time I was in my home, in my own room; I was not ill.

But the same hospital noises shot through my brain. I awoke with a shock. "What's happened? What's the matter?" I exclaimed

Silence. Dead silence. I was alone

I turned over for another nap. I was weary. I was heart sick. But I couldn't sleep. The tighter I closed my eyes the wider awake I grew.

I began to think of myself. I began pitying myself—"I, I, I, a rich man, a successful man, with everything I want — yet with nothing! Why? Yes, why, why, why?" I asked

"Confound it," I muttered * * * and then my tongue halted * * * "that's just the matter with you." I said to myself—"you're forever complaining and groaning; scolding the servants, grumbling at your wife; grouchy to every one—that's the matter; how do you expect to be happy, yourself, if you don't try to make others happy?"

The chimes in a nearby church began to ring — a Christmas carol.

"Christmas!" I fairly shouted it. "The Christmas Spirit! That's what I need—I'll catch that old elusive spirit, throw a noose around his neck and tie him so fast he won't ever get away * * * —but, hold on; there you go again, selfish to the bone, thinking of yourself, forgetting others. * * * This won't do."

I pondered. Suddenly the door flew open. A child entered. My child. "Daddy, Daddy, this is Saturday. No school. You must take me to the Santa Claus Sto-r-e. I want to see Santy."

That settled it. I knew then how to find the Christmas Spirit.

We started. We took a subway car. "What store are we going to?" I asked my little girl.

"Oh, don't you know we're going to the Christmas Store?"

"But where's that? What store?"

"Why the store that Mama goes to, that everybody goes to; it's just the biggest, loveliest place, and there's two stores — when you're tired in one you just walk across a bridge and you're in another * * * wait, and I'll show you. Daddy, dear."

Show me she did

The subway took us right into the Store. Hundreds of others got off with us Happy little family parties. Mothers with children. Couples that were "towsing." All smiling. All eager—with expectancy Expectancy of what? Why, the Christmas spirit, of course. Wasn't I tracking down this Christmas spirit to his lair? The others must be doing the same thing, surely!

Pushing through the happy throng — my little girl first, I following—we walked a long way among wonderful exhibits of goods—it must have been more than a block. "Up these stairs, Daddy. I hear some music."

Up we went. An organ was playing. We drew nearer Suddenly we were in a great big rotunda—inside a church, I thought at first, so churchly were the decorations. Old wood carvings from Italy. Mellowed old flags, priceless tapestries and altar cloths, even vestments. And stained glass windows. Colorful lights everywhere. A huge lighted censer hanging in the center of the Rotunda. And a pipe organ at one end, whence came the music.

Instinctively I took off my hat. Even my little girl—with her mind on the toys when she entered the store—was awed and moved. "Isn't it just too beautiful, Daddy?"

Yes, it is just too beautiful; too beautiful for me (I said to myself); more beautiful than I deserve.

A woman began to sing. We couldn't see her. At first I thought it must be a Victrola — sounded like Melba. Then more voices—a Christmas carol. Is it real or is it the Victor? No matter what or who is making the music, it is the real voice, however, reproduced. Everything is real to me today—even the Christmas spirit

You see, I was already catching my quarry.

Standing on the Rotunda steps we looked all over the floor of that store.

A fine beautiful Jewelry Store, over there—I could see the people bending over the showcases picking out their precious baubles (and strangely enough I d dn't grow cynical as I did the day before when jewels were mentioned)—I even started to go into the Jewelry Store—but no, not yet; I must go where my little girl wants to go.

I saw the great Book Store fairly alive with books and people.

And the leather gifts, and perfumes, and gloves, and slippers, and stockings, and handkerchiefs, and so many other pretty things—I was seeing with new eyes now and I began to realize it

"Come on Daddy, let's hunt the toys," and I came out of my reverie.

Up the big Rotunda stairs we hurried in quest of the toys—up through the greatest lot of fancy boxes and sewing things and needlework and fancy pillows, through snowy linens, and lace and dress goods—past table after table of gifts; calendars, cards, leather gifts—thousands of them. Up another flight of stairs * * * "Oh, Daddy, what's all this crowd about?

It was in the Fashion Salons. On a platform young women were walking up and down.

Suddenly my little girl broke from me—"There's mother," she said, and ran to her

"Well, well, is it possible! You—the cynical old business man in a store—and looking at a fashion display"

"A fashion display," I stammered; "one of those confounded foolish contraptions that * * *" I caught myself just in time. I smiled. "Can't get me mad today. I'm guning for that Christmas spirit."

"Oho," said my wife. "Well, then I'll tell you These are the first models Poiret has created since the war. Poiret, the great Paris dressmaker And the others are models of Worth and Callot and Paquin and Cheruit. They were made for charity to help the Paris midinettes—and they are here for sale—don't you want to buy me one for Christmas?"

"Come on," I said, and turned, not to buy, but to hurry away "I thought that would scare you," was my wife's parting shot.

"Just for that I will buy one of the models," I said. But our little girl and her mother, knowing me better than I know myself, pushed me on—and away we went, up another flight of stairs where there were many little shops with show windows * * * and then over a stone bridge lined with book cases to * * *

TOY WORLD.

There it was in letters of fire Girly saw it first—and yelled—"Here it is, here it is, Daddy—see

"T-O-Y — W-O-R-L-D. That's where Santy is."

My, my, my! A whole floor of toys And this floor must cover a whole city block—it is so big.

The color, the whirr, the motion, the action, the happiness of it all. Everything seemed going—trains whizzing, steamers whistling in the water, merry-go-rounds swirling along, clowns dancing. Dear me, dear me, how it took me back to my own Childhood. I walked about in a trance—girly fairly pulling me along and chattering; her mother also; I alone in all that vast multitude was dumb, struck to the heart with a new discovery; I have found it; here is the Christmas Spirit; this is the store of the Christmas Spirit.

Oh—yes, we went through that Toy Store from end to end, from side to side, from middle to end and back again. We saw Santa Claus and talked with him—and he is a real Santa Claus, not an imitation. We visited the dolls. We saw everything—that wonderful Christmas panorama that hangs in the Rotunda—with its jack-in-the box, the rooster weather vane, the fighting cats, the long nose clown, the donkey that wags his tail—and the cow that jumped over the moon

Yes, we went all over that store—over the two buildings from bottom to top, and from top to bottom.

We wandered through the Picture Galleries, so full of inspiration, and had luncheon in the Restaurant—delightful food and service and splendid music.

We spent an hour in the big Auditorium listening to wonderful music on the pipe organ and piano.

We went through the House Palatial, a marvelous old time Colonial house of twenty-eight rooms built into the store, and we registered in the Guest book there.

We saw stacks of rugs, whole floors of furniture, China and Oriental wares in abundance, rich upholsteries, interesting housewares. And we lingered long enough in the Men's Store to have me make up my mind that whenever I need new clothes I will get them there.

Then we started home. As we walked out under the Bridge between the two buildings I saw a line of automobiles on both sides of the street reaching two blocks.

"Wait a moment, please," some one said, "won't you take and fill a Christmas Red Stocking?"

"What's a Christmas Red Stocking?"

"Why, a stocking of red cambric that you can stuff full of little gifts at a few dollars' cost and it is given to a needy boy or girl on Christmas, the names being supplied by the charity organizations of the city."

"Will I take one—no! Give me a dozen. If a store like this, busy as it is, can stop to fill Christmas stockings for the poor I want to help."

And as I stepped into "mother's" car (she had come by motor while we slipped off on the Subway) the chimes in the tower of old Grace Church in this old Knickerbocker neighborhood pealed out again the Christmas carol I had heard that morning when I awoke with those dreadful noises in my head.

"Yes, little girl," I said to both my wife and daughter "Old Christmas now is come to town"—"and old Christmas has come to me and to you as never before."

I had found the Christmas Spirit.

Now where do you think I found it—this Christmas Spirit?

You can easily guess the name of the store. You probably guessed it long ago. But you haven't guessed yet where I found that Christmas Spirit.

In the Store? No; it was there real enough; it is there every day. But I would never have found it there had I not first found it somewhere else. The Store only helped me to find it.

Do you really want to know where I found the Christmas Spirit?

Well, I found the Christmas Spirit in MYSELF; in my own heart.

We can't find the Christmas Spirit anywhere unless we find it first in ourselves.

But I know of no place where the Christmas Spirit may be felt, seen, known, enjoyed and inhaled with every breath and captured so easily as in that wonderful store I visited on that wonderful day.

I found myself that day—again.

We are going to have a great Christmas in our home this year. No cross words. No cynicism. No soreness. No selfishness.

And I wish that everyone in New York might visit that Store and find there, as I found it, the real Christmas Spirit—the real Christmas Spirit in themselves.

The Store will help. It is wonderful in its inspiration. Its Christmas goods are beautiful, and so varied and extensive. The atmosphere makes one fairly breathe, Christmas. I am told the store opens in the morning with the store people singing in the Rotunda. No wonder the happy-looking men and women behind the counters are so courteous and smiling that you feel as though you were a guest in some vast museum of happiness.

It is the wonder store of New York It is the home store, the store that old New Yorkers used to attend in the days of A. T Stewart. It is a New York institution. It is more it is a national and international institution. The day I was there I saw more automobiles with license tags from other States than I ever saw anywhere else in the city. And in the House Palatial Guest Register I saw names from at least twenty States and several foreign countries. Baron Shibusawa was there and other distinguished foreigners.

Yes, indeed, the store is wonderful, especially in its Christmas dress—and all my Christmas gifts are coming from that Store—a piece of jewelry, and one of those Poiret gowns for wifey, too.

But the greatest gift of all is the gift that has come to me: the gift of the Christmas Spirit which I found in myself.

So may you find this gift yourself—everybody!

CHILD LABOR BILL UP IN CONGRESS

Prohibits Interstate Shipping of Goods Made by Children.

The campaign for the Keating-Owen federal child labor bill has been launched in Washington. This week, Senator Owen, Congressman Keating and the secretaries of the National Child Labor Committee met to confer on the bill and decide on the final form in which it is to be introduced.

"The bill will be introduced early in the session," said Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, "and we are going to stand by to see that it is not buried under national preparedness, shipping or tariff. But I do not think there is serious danger of that because the sentiment of the present Congress is favorable to the bill and the endorsements and offers of co-operation which daily pour into our offices are evidences of the fact that thousands of people throughout the country are convinced that this bill ought to be passed."

The bill as decided upon at the Washington conference is practically identical with the Palmer-Owen bill of last year. It prohibits the shipment in Interstate commerce of any article which is the product of any mine or quarry in which children under sixteen are employed, or the product of any mill, factory, workhip, cannery or manufacturing establishment in which children under fourteen are employed, or in which children under sixteen are employed more than eight hours a day or more than six days a week or at night.

The regular meeting of the Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, held last night, was called to order by President J. M. Harper. After the singing of two Christmas carols by the congregation, Rev. Mr. Ralston led in prayer, and Mr. Doane read the story of the Nativity, after which two more carols were sung by the congregation. The following reports were presented: Mrs. L. M. Case, distributing committee; Howard V. Hall, boys' auxiliary; Miss Suydam, literature committee; Robert Love, for boys' auxiliary. A resolution was passed thanking the persons who donated fruit and money that made the Thanksgiving offering such a success, and also to the Garden Club for 100 glasses of jelly and Grace Methodist Episcopal church for 58 hymn books. The feature of the evening was an address on "The Spirit of Christmas," by Rev. E. S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church.

Life in the Trenches

A series of letters written by Canadian Officers now in Belgium, who are relatives of Councilman Allan Cowperthwait, of North Plainfield, have been received by him. The series gives such a graphic description of the life which the Canadian contingent is leading in Belgium, that the Daily Press has secured permission to print the letters in serial form.

Belgium, Oct. 18, 1915.

Dear Helen:—

Your two letters have been bright spots in a sea of dullness and I thank you for them. It is really very neglectful of me not to have written to you before now, and I mustn't let it occur again. But because I haven't written, please do not think you have been out of my mind, for Morgan and I have a chat nearly every day and he tells me all the news about you and the boys. And every day I say, "I certainly must write to Helen," and every night goes by without the deed being done. But "tonight's the night."

I certainly have not had a very great deal to do in the way of fixing up wounded men, for our casualties have indeed been very few. But that, I have found, is the smallest part of my work. The water supply for 1,000 men is a problem in itself. And the sanitation of men living in a very confined space is also quite a problem. However, after you get used to it, it falls into a kind of routine, and if you religiously go through the routine, things are generally all right. But every new place we go, new conditions crop up that cause new work and worry

Morgan and I went for quite a long walk today down the road. We saw two Flemish chateaux which have been battered to pieces by the Germans. They were certainly fine places at one time, but at present are worth about as much as any rubbish pile you may come across. Both of them have a moat around the house, and large stables and very capacious and what were once beautiful grounds But now there are trenches dug through the estates and everything is battered to pieces. I stayed in Morgan's dug-out for lunch today and he fed me very well. They live on the fat of the land.

Fred Raymond is getting fat with eating lots and doing little. Every one else in the battalion is well and happy.

Am glad you are doing some Red Cross work, but I hope you don't have to do any for me.

Give the boys a spanking for me, and tell them to write to me now and then. Much love to you—and have a good time.

Yours,
"KENNETH."

Somewhere in Belgium,
Monday, Oct. 18, 1915.

My dear Frank:—

As I have been up since 4 a. m., I am rather sleepy, so my remarks may seem somewhat the same. The dug-out that I have is fairly comfortable as the weather has been dry lately. I don't know just when it was built, but each successive tenant does somehting to improve it, being guided by his own personal point of view. Major Gordon, an Anglican parson from Niagara Falls, and I have been relieving one another's companies for some time. Hy Ryries' boy is with him as a Sub but this trip in I find he has had an attack of appendicitis I believe and so was not here when we took over. At present we are trying to strengthen our trenches and put them in good shape, get them drained as best possible, but believe me it sure is some job. This trip my company is split up among four redoubts or strong points half a mile back of the firing line and these we hold if the fire trenches are carried away. We have an extra supply of bully beef, biscuits and water and ammunition enough to last us many days—during which time our people re-organized and carry on the counter attack. Of course, we have machine guns and all the necessary stuff to put up a good argument for quite a while. It really would mean the sacrifice of a company to save this point in the line but that is the only way to handle the situation—you see, the trenches run from Switzerland to the Channel—some front, and it takes some men to look after it. This sure is a great game. Sit outside the dug-out in the sun under the trees—birds singing, etc., for an hour you imagine it's a dream. There is no war, and then a roar and hell is let loose. The artillery are having a go somewhere along the line and then perhaps just back of you some gunners from Guelph, Ontario, and good ones too, will heave a few high explosives over your head at the huns just to make him behave. Early this a. m. in the dark and fog, they sure got busy up north from here and you talk about rapid fire and machine gun fire—I would hate to think how many rounds of ammunition was expended; it sounded to us exactly like a pot boiling on the stove, that's the nearest I can describe it—I don't know what was doing but we likely will hear today or tomorrow. We go into the fire trench after six days here. The engineers are putting it in good shape I am glad to say—we give them all the men we can. Round here you are always running across graves—very shallow ones too, not marked often—find them when filling sand bogs by the earth you dig up to fill them with. One becomes quite callous and it seems as though that had always been the way of carrying on. A big sense of humor is a God send; my servant, who is a bricklayer's laborer, has also been a grave digger in his day and I find he is an excellent cook and with our other batman has proved a clever thief and it is really wonderful what they can dig up—I never ask any questions, but the Lord helps those who help themselves, and Canadians are sure the Lord's own people. On Belgian farmer, with whom we were billetted for a couple of days (I never will forget it—they had milk fever there, and Oh! ye Gods the smells) however, this Flemish Yokel remarked that when the Germans were there they at least asked for what they wanted and the man said he preferred Germans to Canadians. I wish I could talk French. Several of my N. Cos. talk it well, but some of the Belgian towns are sure pro-German, particularly the Flemish ones. The names and speech is just like German. Some of the words exactly the same. 8 p. m. Have been up all day I was trying to have a snooze when Major Bennett came in and I went on a tour with him to one of my other redoubts and then after lunch Ken and I took an hour or so off and went exploring in two fine chateaux, at least they were, but now they look as though an earthquake had struck them—they sure have been shelled but they must have been very fine old places in their way. The moats round both places have lots of water in them. A Belgian battery was banging away to beat the band back of us—every time a shell would go over your head you felt as the bally place would fall down—Ken and I had climbed to the top story looking for souvenirs, but too many had been there before us—nary a thing left in the cellar of one of them. There sure were a lot of empty champagne bottles—all sorts of papers strewn about. One of the machine gun men was there a week ago and picked up a legion of honor document with countless seals on it belonging to some Belgian baron. I suppose some day I will get a decent souvenir of some kind. Noses off of shells sometimes can be made into inkwells. Two shells shot into our front trenches today; have nose pieces on them as being made September, 1915. The sure must be up against it for munitions. Our artillery along this part sure gives them back about five shots to their one and our bombers do the same thing. It makes them keep their heads down and be good. Ken told me about the apples—it listens good to me. Helen has already sent me a fine chocolate cake and candy and a birthday cake and I am to let her know what else I need. So far I haven't had to spend any of the money you or mother gave me—the time I may need it is if I lose my kit. This frequently happens when on the move, and of course you never see it again. It comes in handy for some one when we go into a squeeze and leave our stuff behind, we may not get it again. My pack shoes are very comfortable for the muddy trenches though, of course you have to have heavy soled boots for marching. One of my subs near got it today; a bullet landed in a tree just over his head about a couple of inches. He thanked Allah he hadn't grown in his youth. Our boys unearthed a cellar of potatoes today on a shelled farm and some soft coal, so tonight our brazier is making the dug-out cozy even though it is a bit gassy and smokey—yet the dampness of the earth floor and walls is temporarily driven out. The men get tobacco, cigarettes and occasionally rum as a ration and their relatives and sweethearts in England sure send them things. One of the pipers who acts as stretcher bearer presented me with some Scotch scenes and heather fresh from Scotland. Will you mail me a couple of boxes of Zam-Buk, like mother gave me—they are very handy. Now I must close this gossipy letter. Don't worry about me. I am fit and keeping my head down and when I see the man who started this scrap I sure will tell him what I think of him. Thanks ever so much for being so good to me

Yours,
"MORGAN."

I talked to some people today who were in that show the other day and they said the prisoners they took were sure glad to give themselves up—sick to death of the game. Our men keep writing home that the war will be over by Christmas. I don't know who told them, but seeing I am married, I sure hope they are right. Merry old England would look good to me about that time.

Love to all,
"MORGAN."

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

TO BUILD HOMES IN THE WEST END

Plainfielders Organizing Company to Put up Small Houses.

WILL SELL FOR $2,000

About Twenty Buildings Are to Be Put up at First, According to Present Plans, Each with Five Rooms and Bath.

Realizing the need of moderately small houses in the West End, due to the influx of workmen through the rush at local shops, a group of Plainfield builders is now completing the formation of a company to supply the desired residences. Several preliminary meetings have been held during the past two weeks and it is believed definite arrangements will be made before the first of the year.

The idea of the project is to build about twenty houses in all to be sold at about $2,000 each. They will be five rooms and bath each and equipped with such modern requirements as are now an absolute necessity even in the small home. A number of those interested in the movement have property in the extreme West End and these sites will be included when the final deal is made. The locations will all be in the territory below Clinton avenue and bounded by Front street and Seventh street.

The price of two thousand dollars will undoubtedly meet with the approval of West End workmen as the houses will be a bargain at this figure. Good value will be possible, through the scheme of the prospective company to purchase all materials in wholesale lots. The tentative plans call for ten to be erected at the outset. Beside having an advantage in securing the material direct from the mills, careful distribution of the work will keep the employes of the promoters in employment when they would otherwise probably be idle. As was stated in an article in the Daily Press last week, several hundred new families have come to Plainfield within the past year and many of them have found difficulty in securing a comfortable home in keeping with the income of the husband. The men interested in the company described are all of good business standing locally and they have associated with them a number of real estate men who will in all probability become members of the permanent organization.

LOCAL PROPERTIES SOLD AT FORECLOSURE SALE

As the outcome of foreclosure of mortgage proceedings, instituted in the Court of Chancery, five properties were sold Thursday afternoon at the weekly sale in the office of Sherih Otto. Two are situated in Plainfield and one each in Westfield, Linden township and Union township. They were disposed of as follows:

Warranty Building and Loan Association vs. Vincenzo Davide, et al., premises known as lots Nos. 196, 196-A, 197 and 197-A, in Maple Park, Linden township, sold to the complainant for $2,000.

Sarah J. Crane, et al., vs. Benjamin W. Doremus, et al., premises in Westfield avenue, near the Central Railroad, Union township, sold to the complainant for $500.

Stapleton National Bank vs. Lillian B. La Rue, et al., premises in Willow Grove avenue, Westfield, sold to Robert Appleton for $500.

Norman Mayer vs. Jennie F. and Ellis G. Potter, premises at South avenue and Berckman street, Plainfield, sold to the complainant for $7,500.

Norman K. Barnes vs. Isabella K. Lyddon, et al., premises in West Fifth street, Plainfield, sold to the complainant for $300.

IMPROVING BOROUGH STORE.

Contractor David E. Conover, has been busy the past month making improvements to the store of William G. Debele. The work includes an enlargement of the floor space by the removal of the partition of a rear room and installing a new soda fountain. A new refrigerating plant is to be installed.

MRS. WEST TO BUILD GARAGE.

Chief Doane yesterday signed a building permit for Mrs. T. M. West, 120 Crescent avenue, for the construction of a garage. The building will be 14x21, one story, and of frame construction. It will cost $257.

SOLD FARM AND STOCK.

Mrs. H. E. Tapscott, of this city, sold at auction, the past week, farm stock and implements, at the Cooper farm at Spring Valley. The farm was sold to Frank Pill, of Califon, for $2,700.

BRICK GOES TO NEW HIGH LEVELS

Leading Authority Says Prices on Basic Commodities Will Advance.

CHANGES LOOKED FOR

Lumber Only Material That is Not Affected by the Market—Steady Demand Has Tendency to Keep Prices up to Standard.

New York, Dec. 11.—Commenting upon the Eastern lumber situation a leading authority on the subject made the statement that prices on all basic building commodities in this department were probably at the lowest levels that will prevail east of the Mississippi for some time at least.

"Brick has gone to new high levels, cement probably will be higher than has been known in this vicinity, anyway, in more than a decade; steel, stone, glass, wire and anything that enters into building construction are still far from their top levels. Naturally builders turn toward lumber, where city ordinances permit its use, and it is the only available commodity that is not reaching to new price levels, although some advances have been made.

"This makes us think that sharp changes will occur before the first of February in many lines. For years lumber manufacturers have been meeting ruinous competition, and have been shading their lists to very immoderate levels. In the very recent past they have been noting a betterment in demand, and in those lines where supplies are low advances have occurred, but we begin to feel that the time for a general marking up of quotations is at hand.

"The removal of competition with European wooden ware manufacturers, the heavy demand for packing cases of carrying capacities suitable for export in larger quantities than ever before, the general revival in building throughout the country, heavy construction works requiring vast quantities of shoring and the revival of shipyard activities on both seaboards speak for greater production. Here comes the shortage of lumbering labor, difficulty of getting added machinery capacity and cluttered transportation lines, and the only way to equalize the situation is to boost prices. These are things dealers have not been thinking about. It may not be for the best interests of manufacturers and distributors to encourage this sort of contemplation but the fact is nevertheless true."

A concrete products company doing business in Chicago and ten other points in the country where it has factories equally as well equipped as that on the Newark Plank road, near the Passaic river, is doing a volume of business for railroads and in concrete piling out of all proportion to previous records. Railroads are finding concrete posts and poles cheaper than heavy rough timber in the light of heavier demand for this wood in other channels, and the same is true of piles. This concern has covered itself with 10,000 barrels of cement. Ordinarily this quantity of cement would last a year, but the Eastern manager said that with the present demand for cement products it would scarcely suffice for the business now developing.

This same concern was in the market for additional cement mixing machinery this week, and found the same stress in that market. Speaking with the engineer in charge of cement manufacturing machinery, it was learned that cement companies are doing a normal summer business in the month of December, a fact fully verified by conditions in the two zones contiguous to New York, where, in the month of November, 556,000 barrels of Portland cement were shipped this year than in the same month last year, and was the largest November movement of this building commodity in any November in the last eight years save one, when there was a shipment in excess of that of November, 1915, of barely 60,000 barrels.

The predicted upward movement in the price of common brick came this week, when Hudson commons were held in this market for $8 a thousand, wholesale, and Raritan interests turned down future contracts running into first quarter deliveries for $7.50 a thousand. Bottom prices for inferior brick were $7.25.

There is scarcely a distributor in the Eastern market who believes that top levels have been reached in any commodity. Just so long as inquiry and orders come in the building material market is bound to be nervous on future deliveries, and there is a feverish disposition on the part of those who are able to finance operations now to close for requirements where it is possible to do so.

IMPORTANT CHANGES TO THE DEPEW BUILDING

R. Henry Depew, owner of the building at the southeast corner of North and Park avenues, is making important changes to the second floor of the structure previous to the occupancy of a suite of offices by Assemblyman William N. Runyon and V. W. Nash, Jr., who are to move from the Vanderbeek building. The main entrance is to undergo improvement and a private hallway, which has connected some of the rooms, is to be taken out entirely. When completed the changes will make the location one of the most desirable office sites in the city, and especially adapted to the needs of Messrs. Runyon and Nash.

Michael Rimmer has the contract for the improvements and already has a force of men on the job. The work will cost approximately $700.

NEW FACTORY BUILDING PROBABLE IN ELIZABETH

A loft building suitable for light manufacturing purposes will in all probability soon be erected in Elizabeth.

Plans were filed this week at the office of Building Inspector Brennan by the American Lock Nut Washer Company for a one-story building to be erected at 35-41 South Spring street. It was learned today that the company is seriously considering a change in the plans to provide for a five-story structure. The fact that no cost has been placed on the plans for the original building indicates that the change will be made before the permit is issued. The structure will be of brick and steel according to the specifications on file.

It will be occupied in part by the American Company, which will manufacture lock nut washers. It is understood that a concern manufacturing boys' trousers will take over part of the building.

The factory will be erected on the site of the old Strauss wagon shop. The company at first intended to remodel the existing structure, but it was inspected by Building Inspector Brennan and condemned. As the result, the owners decided to erect a new building and the old structure is now being razed.

Stands Directly Opposite the Washington School Campus—All Work Has Been Done by Separate Contractors.

From present indications the new Westfield High School, which is to be one of the handsomest and largest in this vicinity, will be ready after the holidays. All work is nearing completion, and much of the furniture and apparatus has arrived and is being placed in position.

The handsome school stands at Elm and Walnut streets, opposite the Washington School campus. The building is of fireproof construction. The exterior is of tapestry brick with terra cotta trim. The building and furnishings complete will cost $125,000. The work on the structure was done by twenty-four different contractors, there being no general building contract.

The main entrance to the building is at Elm and Walnut streets. There are auxiliary entrances in Elm street and Walnut street. The building contains 572,000 cubic feet, with a ground floor area of 12,500 square feet. The basement is 10 feet in the clear and the other three stories have 12-foot ceilings.

The auditorium, with a seating capacity of 830 persons, is on the ground floor, located in an angle formed by the two wings, and at the rear of the building, with ample exits and aisle capacity. There are a large stage and ample dressing rooms. A moving picture booth and machine will be installed. The main entrance to the auditorium is through the main hall of the building.

The gymnasium is under the auditorium and has an 18-foot ceiling. The lunch room, locker rooms, manual training rooms and janitor's office are located in the basement. The boiler room is in a separate room on the Walnut street side, adjoining the building.

On the first floor is located the superintendent's office, Board of Education room, teachers' retiring rooms cloak and dressing rooms and two class rooms. The library and reference rooms are located with the class rooms on the second floor. The lecture room is on the third floor, centrally located and well lighted. On one side is the chemical laboratory and on the other side is the physical laboratory. Leading from the laboratories are the preparation work room, apparatus room, etc. The biology class room has besides the indispensable north light, a skylight.

Each stairway is enclosed by fire proof masonry. These stairways are of the most approved fireproof construction with fire doors. The call and telephone systems connect each class room, lecture room and laboratory with the suerintendent's and janitor's offices. Careful provision was made in planning the building to admit an extension of at least eighteen class rooms on the Walnut side of the building without detriment to any of the present class rooms or corridors. Trustees J. E. Grape, J. E. Cutler and J. A. Dennis comprise the building committee of the board, who are now using their best efforts to have the school completed before the holidays.

THE PRUDENTIAL GIRL.

When the Prudential Insurance Company began its famous series of Prudential Girl calendars several years ago it perhaps did not realize the task it was setting for itself. If it did not insist upon advancing the standard of beauty year by year its work would be easy. But it does insist, and that is why the 1916 Prudential Girl is the most beautiful of her family. A description is, of course, possible, but it really wouldn't do the calendar justice. And you can see it for yourself, because the Prudential announces that it will send a copy to all who address a postcard asking for it to the home office, Newark.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health Is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save It.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Anthony Wahl, R. F. D., No. 1, Plainfield, says: "I had such distressing pains in my back that I could hardly stand and it was out of the question for me to stoop. I was all crippled up and I knew perfectly well that my kidneys were the cause of the trouble. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me almost immediate relief and three boxes changed me from a chronic sufferer to a healthy woman. I still take Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally, when a cold settles on my kidneys and they act as a preventive of any serious trouble."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Wahl had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

RECREATIONS PUT UP BEST GAME OF YEAR

Plainfield Tossers Display Fine Team Work and Win on Westfield Court.

Players on the Recreation Five, of this city, put up their best game of the season in St. Paul's parish house at Westfield last night, and won by a score of 37 to 22.

The passing and shooting of the winners encouraged the Recreation so much that they believe they are now in shape to trim any quintet in Plainfield. Jack Ricketts turned in seven field goals, and a trio of fouls. Bergen Naylor put up a strong game at guard.

Dancing was enjoyed after the game.

HARVARD ELEVEN TO PLAY TEN CONTESTS NEXT FALL

The Harvard football eleven next fall will play ten games instead of nine, Fred Moore, graduate treasurer of athletics, announced last night. The last five dates of the schedule have been settled as follows:

October 28, Cornell; November 4 Virginia; November 11, Princeton; November 18, Brown; November 25, Yale. These contests, except for the Yale game, which reverts to the Bowl at New Haven, will be played at the Stadium.

Pennsylvania State will not be played. Tufts, probably, will take its place on October 7. Colby, Maine and Massachusetts Agricultural are other institutions which will probably obtain dates.

RISKS WAR PERILS.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—In the interior of Germany two former Chicago women and their children are waiting for their father, Ferdinand Bunte, an aged candy manufacturer of this city, to come and lift them out of the misery into which they have been plunged by the war and to bring them back home. Although Bunte was born in Germany, he is a patriotic American who wears no hyphen. He is a veteran of the War for the Union, and is proud of his citizenship. Twenty years ago his daughters, Martha and Laura, were schoolgirls in Chicago. They married two German brothers, Wilhelm and Albert Kunkale, who were visiting America. Today Martha is huscandless, widowed by militarism, and Laura has lost track of her husband, who went to the trenches in France. So Papa Bunte, aged though he is, is going to try to bring his "little girls" and their "kinder" back with him.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, DECEMBER 11, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is George M. Holstein, Chairman of the Red Cross Seal Committee of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

AMERICAN RED CROSS SEALS.

The Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield is one of our smaller charities in the sense that its cash outlay is moderate and in that its work deals with one thing only; but, measured by its membership and the large number of people who give it support, it is the largest of all our charities. And this is as it should be because this work is peculiarly the duty of each one of us, rich or poor, sick or well, and in these circumstances what a fine thing it is that the League wins its support from the small gifts of a great number of people rather than from large contributions from the few.

When the writer's attention was first drawn to this cause, several years ago, he was convinced, by the testimony of experts, of these two outstanding considerations: First, of the awful ravages of the disease, making it unquestionably among the worst of the enemies of the race, and hence well called the Great White Plague. And was further shown that this did not simply mean that the Indians in South Dakota and the inhabitants of other remote places were dying like sheep, but that there was an alarming prevalence of the disease right in Plainfield.

Second, notwithstanding the strangle-hold of the malady on the human family, of the great hopefulness of the outlook because of methods of prevention and cure which have been developed since the year 1882; in fact, so successful have these methods proven, that our scientists assure us that the plague can be practically wiped out in forty years, provided the whole world goes to work in the fight and keeps working and fighting. What a splendid challenge to fight and what a grand heritage would victory be to hand down to the near generations to come! Plainfield is in the fight and means to keep it up with its Open Air School as a successful protection for children of delicate tendency; its Free Clinic affording as able attention as sufferers can command anywhere; and with its care of out-patients to whom inspection nursing and medical attention are given in their homes.

The money requrements for all this are something over four thousand dollars a year, and the opportunity is now before thousands of our interested citizens to contribute one-fourth of this sum by the purchase of Red Cross Christmas Seals.

And there is not the slightest doubt about the result. Our people are already joyfully imposing this stamp tax on themselves as a ready means to help the afflicted of the community and because they want the privilege of participation in the larger purpose of the undertaking, which is no less than the freedom of the race from the White Terror in the generations to come.

GEORGE M. HOLSTEIN.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

It is a pleasure to announce that May Robson has been induced to revive this season Anne Warner's clever comedy, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," and is to be seen again at the Plainfield Theatre, matinee and night, Monday, December 13, as the delightful and lively New England spinster. Of the many eccentric roles this finished comedienne has contributed to the history of the stage, none has ever approached in point of popularity with the public her Aunt Mary. For many years Miss Robson was associated with the Lyceum and Empire stock companies in New York, under the Frohman direction, and during that period she created notable characters along eccentric comedy lines. Later she proved her versatility by successful appearances in musical comedy, first in the cast of "The Messenger Boy," and later with Weber and Fields, in their famous Broadway music hall. Then along came "Rhe Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," which she played for five seasons with tremendous success. It has always been her aim to win laughter, and to send her audience home happy, and since attaining to the rank of a star, she has remained true to this ideal.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Perhaps for the first time in the history of filmdom it happens that William Farnum and Dustin Farnum appear on the same screen today. It happens at Proctor's Theatre, which is fast becoming known as the theatre of big varieties. First, the keen theatrical insight of the management present the German war pictures, followed by "The Birth of a Nation," and then they offered "The Battle Cry of Peace," each big masterpiece following the other in rapid succession. Today Dustin Farnum in the Triangle feature, exactly as presented at the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, "The Iron Strain," and William Farnum in "The Broken Law," together with Raymond Hitchcock in "My Valet," the famous Keystone comedy, positively one of the greatest of feature programs ever shown for the low admission in this district. Next week the management has arranged for an unusual entertainment, consisting of Triangle Keystone photoplays and a vaudeville entertainment of polite acts that will prove a diversion for the theatre-goer who is tired of the routine amusements and apreciates something that offers diversion.

Preparedness

Little Willie Eezymarque's parents said to him:
"Don't you go a-scrapping now with
'Liphalet and Jim!
Tell them that your pa and ma won't let you fight a lick—
Don't you dare resist 'em if they hit you with a brick!"

Little Willie Eezymarque gumshoed down the street,
Telling every kid he' met what his parents sweet
Had impressed upon his mind—all the kids got next—
Licked poor Willie black and blue!
Willie's folks were vexed.

Little Tommy Foxyguy's people told him: "Kid,
Don't you go to fighting now—scars cannot be hid!
If those bad boys tackle you, turn the other cheek.
Let 'em know your parents' wish is you should be meek."

Little Tommy Foxyguy, quite too smart for that,
O'er one eye in hostile style set his little hat.
Kept his fists clenched as he went 'mid the hoi polloi—
Tough kids said: "Look out for him—he's no sissy-boy!"

Little Tommy Foxyguy mixed in fewer scraps
Than little Willie Eezymarque, with the roughneck chaps!
Lesson of this jingle is: "If we'd not be scared,
Better keep the fighting off by showing we're prepared."

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Blood Pressure

WHAT is blood pressure, and how does the doctor measure it?

Blood pressure is the force with which the column of blood in the blood vessel presses against the vessel wall. It is just like water pressure in a lawn hose. The higher the pressure, the greater the strain on the hose, and the sooner the hose will give out.

In health the degree of blood pressure varies with age. For all ages it average 127 millimeters—which means that the pressure of the blood in the artery of the arm is enough to raise a column of mercury 127 millimeters above the level. From fifteen years upward a blood pressure under 100 degrees is rather too low for health; and from middle life onward, life insurance companies look with disfavor upon a pressure above 145 degrees. However, we often find the blood pressure 160 or more in persons past middle age, yet they seem to be absolutely well.

There are a dozen types of apparatus for measuring the blood pressure. The thing is done in this way. A cuff is wrapped lightly about the upper arm; this cuff consists of an inflatable section of rubber tube like the inner tube of an auto-tire, covered with a stout layer of cloth, the whole pinned or tied about the arm. A length of rubber tubing leads from this cuff to an air-pump, and also to the standard which holds the mercury column in a glass tube. Instead of the mercury column a dial manometer may be used.

The physician now pumps the cuff full of air, thus gradually squeezing the arm, while he keeps his fingers or stethoscope on the pulse at the wrist; at the point where the pulse no longer reaches the wrist he reads what the manometer says—and that is your blood pressure. As simple as feeling your pulse, but incomparably more accurate.

Arterial hardening (arterio-sclerosis) will show itself early in a rise of pressure over the normal. Kidney disease, certain toxic or auto-toxemic states, will increase blood pressure markedly, for instance, uræmia. This is why the expectant mother should have her blood pressure measured occasionally if she is not perfectly well. Over-eating and excessive quantities of meat in the diet will raise blood pressure. Tobacco, alcohol, lead poisoning and certain chronic infectious diseases likewise elevate the pressure above normal, and help to wear out the arteries.

A man is as old as his arteries and a woman as old as she looks, and we determine age in the medical sense by the measurement of the blood pressure with the sphygmomanometer. Part of the annual physical examination which every man over thirty should have, if he values his body as highly as he values his automobile or his watch, is the blood pressure test. It will tell him whether he is living beyond his physical means.

Vest Pocket Essays

BY GEORGE FITCH

ON GROWING OLD

MAN'S life is full of uncertainties. He may not get rich. He may not get married. He may not become wise or famous or strong or insurgent or baldheaded. But there is one certainty before him. If he lives long enough he will become old.

Old age is a period of life during which a man stops watching the speed indicator and the road ahead, and takes his hands off the steering wheel and begins to watch the road behind. It is a calm little spot between a man's last enthusiasm and his first bouquet. It may come happily, accompanied with fame, wealth and grandchildren, or it may come bitterly, with bills and rheumatism and relatives who don't know enough to realize that they will some day grow old themselves. But come it will to every man if he is fortunate enough to be waiting for it when it arrives.

Old age comes to various men at various ages. Some men at eighty years keep old age waiting impatiently while they attend ball games and motor over the country. Other men who have managed to wriggle under the world and hoist it onto their shoulders at thirty, welcome old age and make it feel perfectly at home before they are old enough to be eligible for the presidency.

As a rule, however, man begins to wear slowly away at fifty, beginning at the top. At sixty his hair and teeth are leaving him fast and his digestion is following them. At seventy he doesn't care whether the country goes for protection or free trade if the returns come in after nine o'clock at night. His teeth are much better than they were, but he is not so firmly attached to them. He likes books with large print and his knees and ankles need new springs and lubricants. At eighty he removes himself from general circulation and goes back to his boyhood—for boyhood and old age have a mutual admiration society. At ninety, he is a guest who has lingered long after the feast. Men live to be older than this, but as a rule only partially. They are men whom death is taking away in installments.

Old age is uncomfortable, but it has its emoluments. Man grows wise with age. He learns that there will always be another street car and that the one just passing isn't worth running for. He learns that few things which happen at midnight are worth watching and that even if the wrong party triumphs the sun will rise on schedule time. He acquires grandchildren whom he plays with by day and turns over to his own children to worry with at night. He does not abandon a suit of clothes just as it has accommodated itself to his frame and has won his love. He doesn't worry because his dress suit is getting too tight or because he can't have an automobile or because he has to part his hair with the aid of a magnifying glass. Moreover a man's youth becomes glorious and satisfying in his old age, because the little infant accomplishments of his boyhood have grown up with him to adult size.

We are told that there is no room for old men in this country; that young men not only do the work but give the advice, too. But the fact is our old men are getting too wise to work. They are playing golf with their grandchildren instead.

CATHERINE COOK

MAKING MONEY, by Owen Johnson. With eight illustrations by James Montgomery Flagg. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. $1.35 net.

The hero of this story is a young college man who goes into the Wall Street game with $50,000 and a conscience. How he loses one and saves the other is told with speed and considerable insight into the private life of New York aristocracy.

The characters are true to the type so popular in light literature—the concentrated, money-making father; the soulless and even mean mother; the three daughters with positive, comparative and superlative degrees of beauty, wit, charm and daring; all but one of them fond of money, society and titled adventurers.

It is not a pretty nor edifying picture of family life, but the story is entertaining and that is all one expects of the modern novel.

WINGS OF DANGER, by Arthur A. Nelson. Robert M. McBride & Co., New York.

It's a long, long way to Matabeland, but when you return to Piccadilly Circus with a cargo of diamonds, gold, ivory and a lovely wife, you can bet that your heart's right there.

South Africa and Cecil Rhodes lend the right touch of history and local color to a dashing hero's exploits. It is a regular touch and go from the first page, when the hero rides into Johannesburg town square in search of trek oxen, to the last page, when the Queen knights the hero for his glorious deeds in the Hinterland. Lion hunts, fights with natives, banquets with dusky kings, rescues of beautiful English and American tourists—all these and more are served up in good style to the reader who likes to read about the modern swashbuckler in the African land of Romance.

CLOSED DOORS. Studies of Deaf and Blind Children, by Margaret Prescott Montague. Houghton Mifflin Company, New York. $1.00 net.

Just as one sometimes finds the sweetest and purest flowers growing in a barren soil, so do the souls of little children born blind and deaf develop a wonderful poetic imagination under the tender guidance of loving teachers.

The remarkable achievements of Helen Keller have demonstrated that the dungeons of a child's soul can be opened through education. Unhappy parents whose children are born under the double penalty of blindness and deafness will find encouragement in this book of child biographies.

Miss Montague has an intimate and sympathetic knowledge of the dark and silent country in which these little ones live.

Her stories are of real life. Though they are somber and even tragic, her faith in the unconquerable human soul brightens even the saddest pages.

Current Poetry

The Song Of The Zeppelin

By skyey ways, o'er mountain's height,
The dim earth slumbering far below,
I hold my course by compass right
O'er neutral lands, o'er friend or foe!
The glittering constellations burn
Unnumbered in their stellar fires;
Space silent spreads where'er I turn,
And far below are mountain spires!

Onward I speed 'neath moon or star;
Chill grows the night o'er Bulgar plain;
The skies above all peaceful are Where Night and Silence hold their reign!
No sentry's warning challenge comes
To halt me in my onward flight;
Like martial music, beat of drums,
My engine heart throbs all the night!

No messenger of love am I,
But like Jove's Eagle swift I go;
I bear through depths of silent sky
The thunderbolts of war and woe.
My compass points to Dardanelles,
Where mighty hosts opposing stand;
My dragon teeth of shot and shells
I soon will strow upon their strand!

A monarch I of night and air,
I scorn the earth below me flung;
The things I do, the deeds I dare
Not Homer's self e'er dreamed or sung;
And Ilion's topmost tower vast
To me an idle boast but seems;
The Present dims the mighty Past,
For I have scaled the heights of dreams!

Lo! in the East the morning star
Now glows o'er lofty Ida's height;
The dawn slow climbs the Orient bar—
'Tis time I fold my wings of night!
For far below, Sophia's dome
Stands guard above the Golden
Horn;
Its Star and Crescent signal "Home," My freight of death I land at morn!

Pepper Talks

Word Wings

Helen Keller once wrote to Oliver Wendell Holmes that "Words are the mind's Wings." Well, when we think of how tremendous is this truth, we realize how many clipped wings we are sending our thoughts out into time and eternity with!

How far a kind word travels! How big its Wings surely are. How far a brave word goes—to what ends does it fly on Wings that never tire.

Yes, all words have Wings. That is the unfortunate thing. And it seems the irony of happening that wrong Words many times travel farthest.

But unuttered words have no Wings.

Words are expressions of Life and the purposes back of what Life represents. If you LIVE, you cannot possibly fail to produce Words—and those abundantly. So that if they are worth while they may sail and soar by the power of their Wings into the farthermost parts of space.

Right now—meditate upon your absent Words. Where are they flying? What are they accomplishing? How is their influence?

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

On His Journey Home Odysseus Has Adventures.

A Big Storm Overtook Him.

"COULD we have a Greek story tonight, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"If you children remember that the Trojan war, which lasted ten years, kept many famous Greeks away from home fighting and that Odysseus wandered about ten years more before he reached his home and the faithful Penelope, I can tell you some of his adventures."

"Goody! Goody!" Jack and Evelyn clapped their hands.

"You must remember that Troy is a long way from Ithaca, where Odysseus' home was. When the Greeks at last took Troy he got all his men together on what Greek ships were left and set sail. They had to stop for food and water whenever they saw land, and the first place they visited proved very unneighborly. The people liked to fight, and Odysseus lost six men from each of his ships. When he safely got away a big storm overtook him and drove his ships nine days here and there until the winds finally blew them on to the coast of some people called the lotus eaters. The first thing the Greeks did was to run for fresh water to drink. During the nine days of storm they had been very thirsty and had but very little water to drink."

"Tell us about the lotus eaters, please, daddy?" asked Jack.

"They were kind, rather lazy folks who lived very happily in their beautiful land. The Greeks hunting drinking water found them pleasant. They offered the strangers some of their food, which was the lotus plant. Now, the strange thing about this food was that it made everybody who ate it forget all about home; they wanted nothing but to stay in the pleasant land of lotus eaters. So that Odysseus, who had already lost six of his men, had a dreadful time to get his water hunters away. He had to drag them back to the ships and tie them under benches to keep them from running right back to land. But he was a very strong leader and at last got away from the lotus country with all the water he needed."

"What happened to him then, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"Then he sailed and sailed till he needed more food, when he stopped in the land of the Cyclops, who were great giants who owned a whole island. The wonderful thing about these giants was that every one of them had but one eye apiece. These eyes were placed right in the middle of their foreheads, giving them a very ugly look. They were clever shepherds, lived in huge caves and ate all the wild good things that grew on their rich island. Odysseus left most of his men and ships at anchor, but with picked men and one vessel sailed to the Cyclops island to explore," daddy finished.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. DA LEONARD

The Ellsons Hear the Glad News and Celebrate Accordingly.

"There is a light at the doctor's. Drop me here, please, Mr. Jaynes. I cannot sleep without telling him about the good news," said John Sutner as they neared the doctor's home.

"Oh, I'll get out, too, if you don't mind," chimed in Molly, eagerly. "I can't bear not to see how they receive the news."

"What's the matter with the whole bunch stopping?" asked Jaynes, turning his car up the driveway.

"Hello, there!" he called as the car stopped. He'll think he's in for a night ride," chuckled the big, good-natured fellow.

The doctor appeared on the porch, and Jaynes flashed his light on him, exclaiming:

"Want some company? We have good news for you."

"Sure thing! Is this a surprise party?" The doctor came forward to assist his unknown callers to alight.

"Oh, doctor," exclaimed Mrs. Sutner, as he helped her out, "we could not sleep without telling you the good news."

"Eleven o'clock is a rather late hour for this little berg, but we saw the light and our news would have burst any attempt to suppress it," said John gaily.

"The Sutners. Good! And Jaynes! How are you, old man?" The doctor was shaking hands all around. "I like the combination; I begin to get the vibration. Come in and tell me all about it."

Olive came forward to meet her friend, full of sympathtic happiness, for that her friends were happy there could be no doubt.

"Is it all right?" she whispered in a little aside to Molly, unable to wait longer for the disclosure. Molly nodded radiantly.

"Come, now, cough up your news," chaffed the doctor. "I am simply bursting with curiosity."

"You tell him, Mr. Jaynes," said John, turning to his employer.

"Well, we've caught the thief. I say we, the real heroine is not here. We have just taken her home. Do you know that plucky little stenographer saw a light in the office tonight and stole in on Tyler, caught him right in the act of robbing the safe. She locked him in and telephoned for me. It didn't take me long to reach there, let me tell you. I had Cane with me, the expert from Kansas City. I felt him at the office to pick up on the way back. Our man is safely locked up. You were right about our friend here." He put his hand on John's shoulder. "And I'm mighty glad you were. I want to tell him he's got a mighty good friend in you, doctor." Jaynes turned to John.

"I didn't need this experience to tell me that," said John as the doctor gripped his hand.

"Now, take off your things. We have got to celebrate with a little spread." The doctor commenced to unbutton the overcoats with both hands.

"I'm afraid we ought not to stay," demurred Molly. "I left Mrs. Moore with Jack and I told her that I would not be gone long." Molly's tone was regretful.

"I'll fix it all right with her. She is a friend of mine," insisted the doctor.

"And Cane, I can't leave him so long," put in Jaynes.

"Go get him while we lay the spread. It will not take long. We have simply got to make this a memorable evening."

They all agreed that it was an evening never to be forgotten when they parted after midnight.

T. A. B. S. Seconds Capture Close Preliminary From Spicer A. C., Score Being 20 to 18—Diskin and Force Play Well.

The T. A. B. S. five defeated the Unity Group, Y. M. C. A., team, of Bound Brook, here last night by the score of 30 to 5. The home boys shifted their line-up considerably, letting the regulars take things easy for tonight's game at Hope chapel.

Hannon was the star for the home team, dropping five baskets, while Lidgate and Shuck registered three apiece. Gleason's, Ramsey's and Lawton's guarding aided materially in keeping down their opponents' totals.

In the preliminary the T. A. B. S. seconds won their first game from the Spicer A. C. by the score of 20 to 18. Diskin and Force starred for T. A. B. S., while Phillipson, Burd and Coffey showed up well for Spicer.

The T. A. B. S line-up was: Diskin and Force, forwards; J. Traynor, c; Jinx Traynor and E. Sullivan, guards.

P. H. S. GIRLS CAN'T MAINTAIN ADVANTAGE

Several Times Lead Battin Team, But Are Finally Beaten Out.

The girls' basketball team of Plainfield High School lost its first game of the season yesterday afternoon at the hands of the Battin High School girls on the Elizabeth court, 19 to 12. Several times the local maidens took the lead, but could not manage to keep it.

Margaret Richartf, one of the Battin forwards, was the shining light, making eleven of her team's points and on several occasions caging baskets from difficult angles. Several points in the locals' play cropped out that practice will eliminate, although all the girls played a good game.

P. H. S. LOSES FIRST CONTEST OF SEASON

Ninth Streeters Show Need of Practice in Game at Princeton.

Princeton did not extend a very welcome greeting to the Red and Blue five from the Plainfield High School, last night, when the locals played the P. H. S. at Tigertown and were handed a pretty trimming by a score of 42 to 25. Lack of practice and teamwork was evident in the locals' play throughout the game.

The first half practically won the game for the home five. The last Princeton forwards started to corral points before the Queen City basketeers got started, and by the end of the half had 18 points under their belts, while the locals had only 10. Fifteen points were credited to Plainfield in the second period, but the Princetonians ran wild and scored 24 markeds.

Hubbard, the Orange and Black centre, was the leading light during the fracas. He not only played his position well, but was all over the floor, and caged 8 baskets, most of them from difficult angles. Sheldon Coudray, at forward, played the best game for the Red and Blue aggregation, making 4 baskets and 7 free shots during the evening. McDowell also played a good game after he had replaced Dunham in the last half, and chalked up three baskets.

Finish Five Points in Lead After Exciting, Uphill Tussle.

TOWNLEY WHOLE TEAM

Forward Makes 21 of Locals' 25 Points, as Many as Entire Home Team Makes—Toot Dawe, Hurt, Has to Quit Game.

Another exciting victory was scored last evening by the North Plainfield High School over West Orange High School, at the latter place, by the score of 25 to 21. The battle was close, the boroughites tieing the score at 19 points apiece, and secured six points in the last six minutes of play.

After being in the rear, 14 to 9, the homesters slowly overcame the intervening gap, due to the prowess of Brower in shooting fouls. The West Orange team then forged to the front by one point. Dawe sustained an injury to his leg, and McDonough, who was playing guard, was switched to forward, while Willett assumed the vacant guard position. Two baskets and two fouls gave the boroughites a commanding lead, which they maintained.

The playing of the borough boys was creditable. They outpassed their opponents by some clever teamwork. Both teams played strongly on the defensive, N. P. H. S. securing seven field goals, while their opponents tallied five. The foul shooting proved a deciding factor, each side totaling eleven points in this manner.

SPORTING NOTES.

The winter tennis season gets under-way at the Tuxedo Club today. The club championship will be played first, and later in the month the tournament for the challenge bowl will begin.

Al Norton, of Kansas City, will meet Jack Dillon, of Indianapolis, in an eight-round bout on Monday night at Memphis.

Baseball fans are beginning to wake up to the new dope for next season. The first agitation is whether J. Franklin Baker, Connie Mack's big sticker, will go to Comiskey's outfit.

The Ontario A. A. U. has sanctioned the inter-city tournament between Canadian and Pittsburgh boxers, which will be held in the smoky city tonight. It will be Toronto versus Pittsburgh.

The national junior cross-country championship will be decided at New York today.

George Goulding, the Canadian champion amateur walker, is not worrying over the charges of professionalism brought against him.

To learn that Honus Wagner has slipped under the .300 batting mark is a sad blow to the admirers of the famous shortstop. But the veteran is not all in, if the stove league is to judge.

MURRAY A CANDIDATE.

Included in the number of candidates seeking positions on the Yale University hockey team this year is George Murray, who graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1913. The first squad cut of the season was made yesterday afternoon, and when the twenty-three eligibles were announced his name was on the list. Murray is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Murray, of West Ninth street, and was recognized as a clever skater while in High School.

K. C. MATCH TONIGHT.

A Knights of Columbus League bowling match will be decided on the Columbus Club alleys here tonight. Jersey City Council will roll against the Watchung Council team.

The twelfth team, Sullivan and Anderson, which was trailing yesterday, is now out of the race. Few sprints have been attempted during the last twenty-four hours, and as a result the pace has slowed up so much, the riders are now only a couple miles ahead of the old record.

The even tenor of the riders' work was explained as being a resting up for an afternoon and evening of much sprinting. The race ends at 10 o'clock tonight.

Every one of these Christmas Club checks has purchasing power, but better still, each of these little slips of paper has earning power.

If spent now, your check will temporarily satisfy your desires and that will be the end of your weeks of effort, but if all or a portion of it is used to open a permanent bank account you will have something that will be a continual source of satisfaction, as well as revenue.

Think this matter over, and do not forget that your check is capable of earning for you

MARTINE TO BE PARTY CANDIDATE

Decision Said to Have Been Reached at Conference of Political Heads.

HAS WILSON'S SUPPORT

All Other Aspirants for Senatorial Honors Will Withdraw in Favor of Plainfielder, According to Report From Washington.

United States Senator James E. Martine will not be opposed in his candidacy to succeed himself, according to a decision said to have been reached at a conference of political leaders in Washington on Saturday. It was made clear that it is President Wilson's expressed wish that Mr. Martine be made the party's candidate without opposition, and all others who have been seeking this office are expected to withdraw in the near future.

It is said that Frank Katzenbach, of Trenton, who has Senatorial aspirations, was the only one who objected to the harmony plan, being rather persistent in pressing his candidacy, but he, too, finally consented to withdraw in favor of Martine if thereby it would tend to strengthen the party's chances of success at the election next Fall. Otto Wittpenn is also said to have readily agreed to the plan.

The fact that the President has decided to stand by Martine as he did when he first sought the office of Senator, has been the means of holding up all other aspirants, and it is reported that it was at the request of the Chief Executive that all other candidates withdraw from the race.

The Democratic leaders are afraid of losing the State in November and for that reason they plan to leave no stone unturned in strengthening their forces, even to the point of making some sacrifices. There has been an impression that the President would not support Martine for another term, but after Saturday's conference all doubts along this line seem to have been dispelled. After arguments pro and con it is said to have been the unanimous belief that Martine would be the party's strongest candidate and in view of this fact all decided to lend their support to the Plainfielder in securing a second term.

When the Senator first ran for office he was bitterly opposed by former United States Senator James Smith and James Nugent, but in view of recent events in the business life of Mr. Smith, it is the belief that he will offer no opposition to Mr. Martine. In fact, it has been strongly hinted that both Mr. Smith and Mr. Nugent, strange as it may seem, will do all they can for the success of his candidacy.

Smith was crossing the street at North avenue and Watchung, when a cab belonging to Harry Huff, and driven by John Kennedy, struck him. He was knocked down and bruised, but was not badly hurt. Kennedy took Smith to his home at 406 East Third street.

PAVLOWA GAVOTTE TO BE DANCED AT HIGH SCHOOL

When the "Pageant of the Months" is presented at the High School Auditorium on December 21, one of the most beautiful parts of the program will be the "Pavlowa Gavotte," which is to be danced by six High School girls. On a semi-darkened stage the spirit of the glow-worm will be made more vivid by the tiny flashlights flitting here and there. The dances and drills will all have an original touch. Everything possible is being done to make this an enjoyable entertainment for young and old.

HAND NO LIGHT, ARRESTED.

George Pierson, 24 years of age, who lives at 816 Richmond street, was in police court this morning on a charge of driving his automobile without a light. He was arrested at 2:45 a. m., Sunday, on a downtown street. Judge DeMeza assessed a fine of $50, but suspended it on the promise not to repeat the offense.

OPPORTUNITY CLASSES TO GIVE EXHIBITION

"Motor Minded Children" to Show Handiwork at Franklin School Wednesday.

The opportunity classes are busily engaged preparing for an exhibition and sale of handwork, which will take place in the Franklin School Auditorium, Arlington avenue and West Fourth street, on Wednesday from 3 to 9 p. m. These classes are composed of children that do not take readily to ordinary school work. They are what are often called "motor-minded children," more interested in doing something with their hands than in figuring and reading. For this reason their daily schedule includes a much larger measure of handwork than is the case with regular classes. The aim of the work is to develop them along the lines for which they are best adapted, and so give them a better equipment for life work than they would obtain if held only to book study.

Last year, people who attended the exhibit were surprised at the attractive things produced by the classes. Those who attend this year will find the display even better than that of last year, and all interested are invited to attend, whether they desire to buy or not. The main purpose of the sale is to give the children stimulus and ambition in producing the best handwork of which they are capable.

W. ARNOLD WINS BANKRUPTCY CASE

Discharged by Order of Judge Haight in United States Court.

Judge Haight, in the United States District Court, at Trenton, has made an order granting Walter Arnold his discharge in bankruptcy.

Mr. Arnold became a bankrupt in January, 1914, his largest creditor being Peter A. VanFleet, who had obtained a judgment of $2,800 against him in July, 1912, under the employer's liability law. VanFleet was hurt while employed by Arnold, who was building a house for his father.

The bankruptcy proceedings were opposed by Van Fleet's attorney, and exceptions were filed by him with the referee against Arnold's discharge, but the referee decided in favor of Arnold and recommended his release to the court.

The referee's decision was appealed from and the matter was argued before Judge Haight in the United States District Court at Newark. After taking the matter under consideration, the court sustained the referee.

Howard H. Williams represented Van Fleet and DeMeza & Crane appeared for Arnold.

TERRITORY EXTENDED TO TAKE IN NORTH PLAINFIELD

Mrs. S. G. Van Hoesen, of Fanwood, the local agent for the S. P. C. A., received official notification this morning from Col. E. S. Edwards, State president of the society, that her territory has been extended to include North Plainfield borough, township and Watchung and Warrenville, of Somerset county. Her appointment came unsolicited on her part, but at the request of the North Plainfield authorities.

Heretofore, there have been cases for consideration in this territory, but being so far away from Somerville, quick action was impossible. Any persons having complaints to make can reach Mrs. Van Hoesen by telephone, 1227 Fanwood, and she will give prompt attention to the same.

FAMOUS BASSO TO SING

"The Messiah," which is to be given tomorrow evening, under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee, at the High School Auditorium, will be one of the finest oratorios ever given in this city. The chorus, which has been under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, will be splendid. Wilfred Glenn, the basso soloist, has an unusually fine voice of great power and resonance. He is the soloist at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York, and is also first bass in the Lotus Glee Club, in which, no doubt, many have heard him. Tickets are on sale or exchanged for reserved seats at Miller's drug store.

"WARREN CHAPEL" AT HOME.

COUNCIL TO CAUCUS ON ORGANIZATION

Members of 1916 Body Will Meet Friday Night to Decide Presidency.

Councilman Charles C. Graves today issued a call for a special meeting or caucus of the 1916 members of the Common Council to be held Friday night, when plans for next year's organization will be discussed, and it is hoped, settled. At the present time there are two members who are candidates for the presidency, Francis J. Blatz, who is one of the oldest members of the body, A. D. Edgar being the other one, and Juan A. Babcock who is now completing his first term as a councilman, and who has been re-elected for another.

Mr. Blatz announced his candidacy several weeks ago, and both he and his friends believed that he would be supported by a majority of the members. The fact that Mr. Babcock entered the race during the past week has had a tendency to stir the friends of Mr. Blatz to action.

Mr. Babcock says that he will allow his name to go before the caucus if anyone desires to nominate him, although he admits that he is not seeking the office. He disclaims any knowledge of a reported conference of members at which he was urged to seek the presidency, saying that the only member who has spoken to him about the matter is Councilman Cox. Mr. Edgar was mentioned for the honor, but he is reported to have said that he prefers to remain on the floor.

BRITONS PRAISE LOCAL AEROPLANE

Sloane-Day Tractor Proves Successful in English War Test.

BEST MADE IN U. S. A.

Attains Speed of 84 Miles An Hour in Trial Flights—To Be Used as Eyes of Kitchener's Army Against Germans.

Aeroplanes made in Plainfield are being loudly praised by war agents of the British Government, which has recently purchased some of the Sloane-Day tractors for military use.

According to the English experts who tested the aeroplane for their government, the machine made the best time in its tests of any machine which has been sent from America.

Charles Day, who designed the machine, which was built by the Sloane Aeroplane Company, of Plainfield, of which John E. Sloane, son-in-law of Thomas A. Edison, is the head, left here for England several weeks ago to try out the machine for the British Government. In its trials at Hempstead, Long Island, the machine had attained a speed which convinced Mr. Sloane that the aeroplane could travel at eighty miles an hour.

In the trials at Hendon, however, the machine attained a speed of eighty-four miles an hour. Furthermore, it set a new mark for climbing ascending at the rate of 375 feet a minute. The British authorities were much pleased with the work of the Sloane machine, as in other respects than speed it was of the much desired type—a suitable machine for scout work. In the eyes of the testers the machine ranked closely with the best English aeroplanes as a formidable opponent for the German taubes.

The work of the Sloane Aeroplane Company in perfecting this newest type of machine is typical of what is being done by the aeroplane manufacturers in this country. When the war began and the greater efficiency of biplanes over monoplanes was seen concerns which had been interested in monoplane manufacture abandoned this type. Since then they have been working on the one big problem—the attaining of speed, a thing demanded by the military authorities.

The Sloane-Day machine, which attained such success at the trials has a weight of about 1,790 pounds. It is capable of carrying two passengers in addition to the pilot. It carries armor, which makes it bullet proof, at the altitude of 1,600 feet, and which protects the vital part of the machine and its passengers. It carries sufficient gasoline to take the car four or five hours at a speed of eighty-four miles an hour.

For landing on rough ground, a thing demanded frequently in military aeroplanes, the machine has three wheels. There is a wing spread of thirty-six feet, and the two planes have a surface of 400 square feet. There are five and one-half feet between the planes, and they are set so that the upper plane is slightly in advance of the lower. A windshield on stream lines protects the occupants of the aeroplane.

CHRISTMAS MONEY CONTINUES TO FLOW

Meeting of Community Committee Tomorrow Night at 7:30.

Contributions for the Community Christmas fund continue to pour into the hands of Treasurer DeWitt Hubbell at the Plainfield Trust Company, so that when the committee meets tomorrow night she will be able to report the receipt of over $600, and possibly more. Because of the oratorio which is to be given at the High School under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee, the meeting of the Community Christmas scheduled for tomorrow night at the Y. M. C. A., will be held at 7:30, instead of 8:15, as originally announced. President Claybrook hopes to see a large number in attendance, as there are important matters to discuss.

This morning Mr. Hubbell received a letter which said, "I am a little girl, 12 years old. My father has five grandchildren to feed and care for, beside me, and my father said I won't be able to have any Christmas and I like to be remembered. (Signed) Margaret." It is needless to say that Margaret will not be forgotten by Saint Nick.

Contributions received since Saturday have come from Tuesday Afternoon Auction Club, Mrs. W. W. Rowley, Louis A. Viviano, Samuel T. Carter, Sr., Samuel T. Carter, Jr., Thomas M. Day, H. V. Carpenter and Mrs. Albert Zerega.

MAY ROBSON APPEARS AT PLAINFIELD THEATRE

May Robson, who is admittedly our best character actress, will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre, this afternoon and evening, in a superb revival of her perennial success, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," with a thoroughly capable cast and an elaborate new production. That she will receive a warm welcome goes without saying. To entertain is the object of the play, and since this object is attained, its mission is fulfilled and the play justified, thanks mainly to the breezy presentation of the central figure by Miss Robson. A capable company and a brand new production afford the comedienne fitting surroundings.

BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS ADVANTAGE OF ONE-PRICE

"Our Price" was the subject for discussion at the dinner of the Round Table at the Hotel Waldorf today. The club was disappointed in not having a regular speaker, but the time was profitably spent in discussing the value of co-operating on the basis of one-price and advertising.

Instances of the great advantage of advertising were recalled by the various merchants, and many cases of direct benefit were cited. It was strongly urged that the merchants lend every effort to a co-operative plan whereby the best results could be obtained.

Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, addressed the gathering and urged the attendants to help their stricken relatives in the warring countries, and gave a short history of the Polish people.

During the meeting a report was made that $150 had been collected to be sent to Central Relief Committee in Switzerland for the benefit of the orphan children of Poland. At the conclusion of the meeting all the attendants sang the Polish national hymn. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion, American and Polish flags being used throughout.

AN ODOR OF GAS FILLS ENTIRE CITY

No Leak in Mains and Its Presence Remains a Mystery.

Plainfield was a city of obnoxious odors last night. From some mysterious source the sleep-producing gases came, and they filled the entire city so that the Public Service office received complaints from all sections and almost all streets.

Citizens thought their gas mains were leaking and early in the evening experts of the company were searching many different sections of the city for broken mains, but no defects were found. The presence of the gas has not yet been explained, but it is believed that the unpleasant odors were borne to Plainfield on the waves of a wind that came from the east.

BILL TO PREVENT WAR SHIPMENTS

Senator Kenyon Would Declare Embargo on All Munitions.

FIGHTS PREPAREDNESS

Also Introduces Resolution Taxing Manufacture of War Materials to Provide Army and Navy Fund—Greece to Protect Allied Armies.

Washington, Dec. 13.—Senator Kenyon opened fire on the shipment of war materials to belligerents when he introduced a bill today declaring an embargo on munitions of war. His bill denies clearance papers to any vessel bearing munitions of war abroad if, in addition to said cargo, it carries passengers from this country to foreign ports, and would mend the existing law so as to make it imperative that ship owners declare such cargoes. Senator Kenyon also led in a general assault on the war revenue program advocated by President Wilson in his address to Congress by introducing a resolution to levy taxes on the manufacture of arms and munitions of war to such an extent as to produce sufficient revenue for any defense program.

HARD LUCK MAN IS PUT IN BED AGAIN

LeRoy Smith, of Dunellen, Has Ankle Broken in Accident.

LeRoy Smith had his left ankle broken at the plant of the H. W. Johns Manville Company, at Manville, Saturday. The accident happened while he was transferring a push car from one factory room to another. Behind Smith a fellow employe was pushing another car. The contents of the latter car weighted 800 pounds. Smith did not know of the presence of the car behind him until the man who was pushing it yelled for him to "look out." Smith turned agound in such a way as to swing his left foot over the track. As he did so the foot was caught between the two cars.

Smith has had a series of accidents during the past four years. The ankle which was broken Saturday was fractured by a fall seven months ago While in the employ of the Levgar Structural Company he was laid up four weeks with a dislocated shoulder; one week as a result of cut plates falling on his toes; one week with a sprained ankle, and two days with a cut leg.

While in the employ of the Loizeaux Lumber Company he lost a month's time as a result of a pile of timber falling on the same left foot and spraining his ankle. On top of all this he suffered an attack of appendicitis a year ago last June.

STOLEN AUTO PROVED TO BE A CASE OF "JOY RIDER"

The auto jitney of Hiram J. Scandell, proprietor of the Park Hotel livery, which was reported on Saturday morning as having been stolen, is at present undergoing repairs in a nearby garage. It was not stolen but merely borrowed by several of Mr. Scandell's employes, who presumed to take a "joy ride." They came to grief near South Plainfield, when the one who was driving the jitney lost control of the machine with the result that it went into a ditch and was wrecked.

Thinking of no other plausible way out of their scrape, the young men decided to make it appear that the jitney had been stolen. So on their return to the borough without the machine, it is said, they went to the barn from which the jitney was taken and smashed a window.

In their plans, however, the young men failed to take into consideration the fact that one of their number had sustained a injured hand. Marshal I. V. Smalley was attracted to the wounded hand of this young man. This was his first clue. He ran into his second clue when he was made aware of the fact that a jitney of the same color as the missing one was lying wrecked along the roadside near South Plainfield.

Mr. Scandell, at the time that Marshal Smalley entered the livery office, was engaged in making long distance telephone calls in the hope of obtaining some trace of his missing vehicle. Seated near Mr. Scandell and giving him timely advice as to what to say, were two of the employes, who Marshal Smalley had reason to believe had been on the "joy ride." He confronted them point blank with the charge and they confessed.

They entered pleas of guilty and were sentenced to fines of $5 or ten days in New Brunswick. The fines were paid. In dismissing Lester, the court said: "Cut the rum out; as long as you play the game you must expect the consequences." In fining Lempke, who said that he had never been arrested before, Judge Campbell said, "We have had more rowdyism from your corner than any part of the borough and I am determined to put a stop to it. You happened to be caught in the net and I must fine you in spite of the fact that this is your first appearance in court."

The addition as planned would enlarge the lecture room so that Sunday-school, which is now held in the main part of the church, could be held there, and would also make room for a kitchen. The officials also favor the purchase of a pipe organ for the church. These propositions will be presented at the annual meeting of the congregation to be held in January.

WHEN THE BLOOD IS PURE.

Then Disease Germs Are Rarely Able to Infect Our Tissues.

The popular notion that the prompt healing of a cut or other wound is an evidence of purity of blood has a sound scientific basis. When the skin is broken germs in large or small numbers are thereby admitted to the sacred precincts of the tissues from which they are ordinarily excluded by the dense structure of the skin. When the tissues are maintained in a healthy state by pure and vigorous blood the few germs which enter are quickly destroyed, so that the formation of pus, or so called suppuration, does not occur, but when the blood is not pure, so that the serum and the cells are not able to make the necessary active defense, the germs grow and develop, suppuration occurs and the wound, if large, may require a long time to heal.

We might represent this by picturing in our mind a glass globe filled with water and fishes and other small creatures swimming about in it. Now imagine that indigo, ink or coloring matter of some other sort is dropped into the water. It will immediately become tinged, and if the coloring matter is of a poisonous character the fishes will soon show uneasiness and unless relieved by a replacement of the impure water by a fresh supply will soon die. This is just the condition of the living cells of the body when bathed in impure blood. The stomach cells which secrete the gastric juice, the muscle cells which contract, the liver cells which make bile, the brain cells which think—every one is definitely and seriously injured by the impurities brought in contact with it. Impure blood, then, must be regarded as the foundation of a large portion of all the diseases from which human beings suffer.—J. H. Kellogg, M. D., in Good Health.

Sending a Man to Coventry.

The expression "sending to Coventry" had a military origin. It arose, so it is said, in the days of Charles I., when the inhabitants of Coventry strongly objected to any intercourse with the military quartered in their town, and a woman known to speak to a man in a scarlet cloak was at once the subject of a scandal. So rigid were the natives that the soldier was confined to the mess room for conversation. Thus the term "sending a man to Coventry" if you wished to shut him from society took root in the English language.—London Chronicle.

Progress In Lunacy.

A few months ago, at a council meeting in a certain small town, a well known alderman astonished the members by saying:

"Gentlemen, we have been sending our lunatics to asylum for a long time no has cost us a great deal of money, but I am glad to be able to tell you that we have now built an asylum for ourselves."—Chicago News.

Some Hope of Finish.

"Which do you prefer, a preacher who preaches extemporaneous sermons or a preacher who reads his sermons?" asked Smith.

"I prefer the preacher who reads his sermons," replied Brown. "He can tell when he gets to the end of his sermon."—Spokane Review.

A Fatal Omission.

"This," said the editor, "describes the invention in graphic style, but you haven't made it complete."

"No," said the reporter.

"No. You haven't said that it is destined to revolutionize the industry."—Boston Journal.

MEREDITH TO TAKE HAND IN BERNARDS

Assistant State Commissioner Asked by Board Member to Make Recommendations.

Bernardsville, Dec. 13.—For the purpose of determining the reason why forty-eight of the 216 pupils of the local high school are conditioned in their studies, Assistant State Commissioner A. B. Meredith, of Plainfield, in charge of high schools, will come here soon to spend several days investigating conditions, it was announced Saturday by James E. Hulsizer, a member of the Board of Education. Mr. Meredith will be asked to submit to the board suggestions for the bettering of the school.

Constructive criticism of curriculum, faculty and system will be made by Mr. Meredith, Mr. Hulsizer said. The issue is to determine is too exacting or whether there is an unusual number of backward pupils.

Mr. Hulsizer said that he alone was responsible for the invitation to Mr. Meredith. Not long ago the assistant commissioner conferred with the board. It is known that the other members of that body are in accord with Mr. Hulsizer, who, at a meeting Wednesday, stressed the fact that nearly a fourth of the pupils are conditioned.

Mr. Hulsizer brought out the State of affairs by questioning Supervising Principal Lester Meseroll. It chanced that Mr. Meseroll had drawn up a report on the point in question, having made the percentage of deficiency the basis of a request that he be permitted to hold make-up classes after hours in the school. Permission to carry out his plan was given Mr. Meseroll.

Mr. Meseroll's requests was necessitated by the fact that many of the high school pupils come from neighboring communities and their transportation is arranged for by the board.

WORKERS ON SEWER BEDS OUT OF JOB

Are Laid Off Until Spring—Injunction Hearing On Tomorrow.

A large part of the work in connection with the sewer beds at the purifying plant of the joint sewer system of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen was stopped Saturday. Because of the cold weather it is impossible to do concreting and all men engaged in this work have been laid off. Work will be resumed in the spring. The sewer beds are being built at the foot of the Watchung mountain, near Dunellen, and more than 100 men have been employed in this work. It is announced from the office of the George W. Fuller Company, engineers in charge of all joint sewer work, that only the forces of Contractor Bader engaged in putting in concrete have been laid off. SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS DECISION PROHIBITING THE WILLARD-JOHNSON FIGHT FILMS

Washington, Dec. 13.—The United States Supreme Court today decided that the Federal law prohibiting the importation of moving picture films depicting prize fights is constitutional, in passing upon an injunction test case brought by Lawrence Webber, of New York, who attempted to bring into the country films of the Willard Johnson prize fight taken at Havana several months ago.

The Proctor Theatre in Plainfield had made arrangements to show the much sought fight films in this city but the Supreme Court decision today makes it impossible for the film to be shown in Plainfield.

QUEEN CITY SEVEN READY FOR SEASON

Local Hockey Players Held First Practice Yesterday on Tier's Pond.

The Queen City Hockey Club held its first practice of the season on Tier's Pond yesterday afternoon, nine men answering the initial call. Those reporting to Captain Walter Southard were Willie Simon, Harry Meyer, Charlie Woodruff, Charlie Southard, Aleck Campbell, George Van Doren, Leslie Sharpe and Henry Brynairski.

The team was scheduled to open its season yesterday at Westfield against George Warden's Westfield club, but the match had to be called off because Lambert's pond, on which the game was to have been played, is dry.

Manager George L. Simon is preparing a schedule of games. One challenge, from the New Brighton club, asked for dates in November. It was later learned that the New Brightons play field hockey.

The Queen City sextet played through a successful season last year and with favorable weather, expect to play many more games this winter. Any teams wanting games should address George L. Simon, 197 North avenue, Plainfield, N. J.

TABS' ALLEYS READY; TO OPEN SATURDAY EVENING

Work on the new bowling alleys in the addition to the clubhouse of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society was finished Saturday. The formal opening will be held Saturday night.

Arrangements are already being made for match games on the alleys. One to take place the first week in January is scheduled with the Elizabeth Tabs, and a home-and-home series with the Eagles and Knights of Columbus teams will be arranged.

MUTINY ON BOARD GOOD SHIP OSCAR

Peace Party Has Row Over Resolutions Against Preparedness.

On board Steamship Oscar II (via wireless), Dec. 13.—Introduction of resolutions opposing American preparedness caused a split in the Ford peace expedition today. Efforts are being made to patch up the differences that arose, but it is possible that some of the delegates will leave the vessel at the first opportunity after reaching Europe. Eight members of the delegation refused to sign the resolutions.

Henry Ford signed the resolutions and defended them in the debate that followed their introduction, but said that the delegates who refused to accept them would nevertheless continue to be welcomed guests on the ship.

GAINED 21 POUNDS WHILE IN GERMANY

Otto M. Schulte Denies That There is Food Shortage There.

Reports of a food shortage in Germany as a result of the English war embargo on all foodstuffs was denied by Otto M. Schulte, who recently spent two months in the country as special representative of the Newark Sunday Call, in an address delivered to members of the German Reformed church at the evening service yesterday. As proof of the fact that there is plenty of food in Germany, Mr. Schulte offered the statement that he gained twenty-one pounds during his two months there. He said that the German people were united and that even the women were ready to go to war if necessary to win. A good crowd heard the address of Mr. Schulte and more than $100 was given for the benefit of the war sufferers of Germany and Austria-Hungary.

EFFORT EO REDUCE INFANT MORTALITY

State Health Board and Federation of Women's Clubs to Observe "Baby Week."

Trenton, Dec. 13.—The State Department of Health has accepted an invitation from the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs to co-operate with that organization in the observance of "Baby Week," which has been set for March 4 to 11. During this week an effort will be made to emphasize the importance of the health of babies and to bring the matter to the attention of the people of the State in the hope that some of the 7,000 babies under one year of age which die annually in New Jersey may be saved.

In response to demands for work along this line the State Department has created a new division, known as the Division of Child Hygiene and Nursing. The activities of the department in connection with the observances of "Baby Week" will be carried on by this division.

According to an announcement in Public Health News for December, issued Saturday, any community can control to some extent its infant mortality rate, as shown by the experience of a number of cities in New Jersey and elsewhere, where the rate has been reduced to about half the average rate for the State. The State rate last year was 114 deaths to babies under one year of age per 1,000 births. The real work of reducing the infant mortality, as viewed by the State Department, is to be done by mothers after instruction by visiting nurses and at infant welfare stations established by the various communities.

The part to be taken by the Department of Child Hygiene and Nursing of the State Department of Health is educational in character. It is planned to carry on a general educational campaign in order to arouse communities to the point of taking up the work.

DR. WILBERT WHITE GIVES STIRRING BIBLE DISCOURSE

There was much enthusiasm in Dr. Wilbert White's Bible class yesterday. Dr. White is at the head of the Bible Training Class in New York, and the opportunity to hear such a man in Plainfield is greatly appreciated by the people of Crescent Avenue church as well as others who have taken advantage of these talks.

Dr. White's method of teaching is original, and his outlines and charts make the work definite and concrete. He has a very large view of the purpose of the Gospel of John, and in each lesson much study is done with these points in view, namely, the development of belief and unbelief among Christ's followers; the claims made by the Lord; and the signs wrought by Him. Early in the lesson, there was a request made for people to state the most interesting points in the seventh chapter. The ready response showed that the lesson had been prepared with enthusiasm and intelligence.

A chart was then made from Leviticus xxiii, showing the Hebrew feasts, days and ceremonials. This had a very close connection with the lesson, since the background for the gospel is found in these celebrations. The point was made most strongly that Christ was closely associated with these ceremonials; but at each Hebrew feast He put forth the claim that He was come to make these celebrations spiritual rather than material ones. "I am the bread of life;" "I am the lamb;" "Ye must eat my flesh and drink my blood."

In the light of the Passover, John's words, "Behold the lamb of God," took on new meaning. The class was then asked to note the chapters in John, where Christ was said to have attended Hebrew feasts.

Dr. White presented a vivid picture of Christ at the Feast of Tabernacles, when the Jews were celebrating the time when water gushed from the rocks. When Christ saw that the people regarded only the material ceremony, He cried aloud, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink;" "From within him will flow rivers of living water;" "But this He spoke of the Spirit."

The seventeenth verse in the chapter brought out many interesting thoughts regarding the knowledge of God—intellectual satisfaction regarding Christ will not make a Christian. The intelligence is of use only as far as it challenges one to act and do "the will of the Father." "We are not asked to understand God, but to use Him," he said. Dr. White's course of study will end with next Sunday's lesson, as he cannot arrange to give more time to Plainfield, but Miss Palmer, of the same school, will conduct a class in January.

Miss Maud Casselle, of East Orange, and Miss Grace Winnie, of Roslyn, Long Island, have returned after spending the week-end with Miss Ruth Day, of Grove street.

—It there's a new owner in charge of the little store down the street, the chances are that a "Business Opportunity" advertisement has been "at work."

"MAIN LINE" TO BE KNOWN AS "UNION" AFTER JAN. 1

Announcement has been made by Public Service Railway Company that on and after January 1 next the name of its "Main Line" will be changed to "Union." The route of the line lies principally in Union county, serving a number of municipalities, and "Union" is regarded as the more appropriate title. Furthermore, the use of county names as designations for long distance car lines obtains in Passaic, and will be put into effect in Bergen county, where the "Bergenpike" line will become "Bergen."

The company has also decided to change the "Plank Road" line to "Newark," the "Turnpike" to "Jersey City," the "Bergenline" to "West New York," and the "South Orange and Maplewood" to "Montrose." All the changes will go into effect the first of the year.

REV. JOHN C. WHITING GIVES IMPRESSIVE SERMON

A large congregation greeted Rev. John C. Whiting, at the Congregational church yesterday morning, when he occupied the pulpit for the morning service. He was a former Plainfield boy and many of those who heard him were friends and acquaintances of other days. He preached an excellent and impressive sermon, taking as his subject, "The Ideals of Manhood." From this he described what sort of men should be emulated in order to be successful and attain one's ideals.

Mr. Whiting also made a special address to the children of the congregation just previous to the church service, it having been his custom in previous years to make a specialty of juvenile work. Mr. Whiting was for a long time pastor of a church in upper New York but more recently has been engaged in special Y. M. C. A. work in various cities throughout the East.

KITTY CHEATHAM'S ART APPEALS TO THE EYE

Kitty Cheatham, who has a country-wide reputation as an entertainer of children in both song and story will give a children's matinee at the Plainfield High School, Tuesday afternoon, December 28, under the direction of Charles Prescott Poore. Musical American, in speaking of Miss Cheatham's work, says:

"One who observes carefully Miss Cheatham's art will notice how strong is her visualizing faculty. The immobile splendors of the stage setting were as nothing to her power of gesture, movement and pose. She creates an appropriate picture for every passing thought in her songs and recitations—sometimes by a characteristic attitude, sometimes by a mere motion of arm or hand, or by a smile. In her art, this appeal to the eye, which includes personal grace and beauty, is combined with a singing and speaking voice of much charm, a delicate wit—wild flowers of satire—in her original prefaces to her songs, and, above all, with a spirit which can reveal with perfect sympathy that wonder-world which is the home of the child mind.

If you are not suited you can make a ready exchange.

You will save time, car fare and shoe leather.

And you can buy just as cheaply, if not cheaper.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The Proctor vaudeville and photoplay house has taken advantage of the times and conditions around the holidays, and have arranged for special holiday bargain entertainment keeping the low admission in mind, so that the patrons will also have enough left to pay for their Christmas shopping, and it is just possible, and the natural thing to suspect, that that tired business man and the tired women shoppers will be pleased to drop into Proctor's for recreation after visiting the stores. There will be four acts of vaudeville on the bill this week in addition to the Triangle films. These features and the Keystone comedies will include, starting today and continuing Tuesday and Wednesday, "Old Heidelberg," the big dramatic hit featuring Dorothy Gish, and the Keystone comedy, "Fickle Fatty's Fall," featuring Roscoe Arbuckle. The vaudeville is of the snappy kind, that does not lag for a momonet, and includes the Cullen Brothers, speedy dancers; the Classy Trio, instrumentalists, and others, forming a variety of entertainment that is sure to please. Wednesday has been set aside for bazaar night as usual. The Triangle programs for the last half of the week will present "The Coward," starring Frank Keenan, and the Keystone comedy, "A Favorit Fool, starring Eddie Foy and the seven little Foylets, in a circus comedy replete with sensational surprises, that are just crammed with fun and laughter. The photoplays are of the kind that cannot be duplicated owing to the fact that the management have exclusive contracts for same, and they cannot be seen elsewhere. After "The Coward," and Eddie Foy, in "A Favorite Fool," the Triangle Plays will bring "The Martyrs of Alamo," and "Her Painted Hero," both big New York Film successes, and features that cannot be seen elsewhere.

TAKE A TIP FROM PLAINFIELD.

George Rippe, a saloon keeper of West Hoboken, is dead. He never knowingly violated the excise law. He opened his place at 7 a. m. and closed shortly before midnight, no matter how many might be there. He never sold to minors or women, or to men whom he judged to have "had enough," and he conducted his place with what he considered a due regard to law and business propriety. Some years ago Charles Wirsching conducted a saloon in Elizabeth on exactly these lines. He too, is dead. There are some people who believe it impossible to conduct a saloon in an ideal way, but this much is certain, if the methods of George Rippe and Charles Wirsching were extended to control nine-tenths of the saloons, wherever located, the liquor problem would be far less acute than it is now.—Newark Evening News.

All of which is very true. Plainfield liquor dealers have done all the things which the News sees fit to commend and they have done it willingly for many years. There is not a Plainfield licensee who would want to see things otherwise, and at that they pay the highest fee in the State—$1,200 a year. There are holidays on which some of the places are voluntarily closed, such as Christmas and New Years, although the law does not require it, and the police do not request it. When it is considered that there are only seven retail places in Plainfield, this condition is one that is even more remarkable than the instances quoted in the News. It also goes a long way toward showing that the only ideal handling of the liquor question, short of nation-wide prohibition, is by the Plainfield method—high license, few places and a strict observance of the law required, with the understanding that if the latter is not done the license will be revoked.

A SPECIAL FROM THE ARK.

The following is from Merbie Templar, the daring special correspondent of The Press, who sailed on the Ark:

(On board the good ship Oscar at sea, Dec. 13).—There is universal sorrow on the Ark. Our beloved little mascot, that came to us just before we sailed, is dead. The little squirrel died of starvation, and we cannot understand it. We fed it bread crumbs all day long, but it refused them, and just stood and looked at us with pathetic longing. We all wanted to turn back but our intrepid leader appeared before us in his darling fur uniform, wearing a white feather in his cap, and heroicly declared: "On, my good soldiers of peace! We have no time for mourning, and grief shall not deter us. Remember our slogan, 'on all the front pages 'till Christmas.'" And we went sailing on.

Rumors that President Wilson will oppose the candidacy of Senator James E. Martine for re-election are without any foundation on fact and are to be given little credence. President Wilson could not be guilty of such an inconsistent act, no matter what his personal preference might be in the New Jersey senatorial race. He elected Martine to the senatorship and he knew him before this election was brought about. Those who know the Plainfielder can bear witness to the fact that a senatorial toga has not changed his appearance, disposition nor opinion on any public question. He is the same as Senator Martine that he was as "Jim" Martine, and if he was the choice of President Wilson six years ago, what logical reason can that executive give for opposing him now. Our country's chief executive has been oft accused of inconsistency, and he can hardly afford to have this proven in the New Jersey case. If he does not lend his support to Senator Martine, he will not openly oppose him, no matter what State political leaders would have the people think.

If we did not have Belgium, Alsace Loraine, Poland and Serbia, the case of Greece alone would stand out as adequate proof of the horrors of war. After more than a year of valiant efforts to preserve the peace of his country King Constantine is about to be plunged into war. He has balanced his people on the greased plank of neutrality to the end of human endeavor and now he must fall. The only choice left is the selection of the lesser of two great evils. He can begin his voyage over the river of blood in the boat of the Allies or that of Germany, but there is little cause for thanksgiving here, for both are doomed to go down before the voyage is over.

A STRONG NOTE.

The note of this government to Austria-Hungary on the Ancona sinking should satisfy all those persons who accused President Wilson of lack of strength in the Lusitania case. There is only one thing that Austria can do to keep the friendship of the government of the United States, and that is to either disavow the act of the submarine commander or pay indemnity. The action of President Wilson and Secretary Lansing will undoubtedly have the approval of every red-blooded American.

Any newspaper man's idea of a good job is to be appointed special correspondent of the New York Herold, so he can clip stuff against the Germans from his home paper and get paid space rates for it.

France is stopping American ships and searching them for German soldiers. If she wants them that bad, we suggest that a number might be found in Serbia.

We beg to be allowed to remind the Kaiser that he has a date in Paris just twelve days from today. A turkey dinner will be prepared for him.

Belgium is in an awful fix. Its largest munition plant was blown up the other day and it can not send home the German attaches.

NEW ENGINE CRANES.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad has just announced the purchase of six new locomotive cranes. Aside from the purpose for which they were originally designed, the management of the Lehigh Valley has found the locomotive crane its best asset in laying rail for new tracks and in picking up old rail. Recently during the congestion at the port terminals, the cranes have also been used to excellent advantage in the unloading of heavy freight. The Lehigh Valley now has a battery of 32 of these cranes at work.

COURT PLAINFIELD TO ELECT.

A proposed change in the bylaws will come up for discussion and members are requested to attend this meeting as important matters relative to the order will come before the court.

Fire Escapes

In most of the hotel rooms one is incarcerated in, are some sort of rope halters hanging by a window. These are marked "fire escapes." Usually these have a sort of board attachment that serves as a spool to wind them up on.

Frequently when in hotels equipped with these mysterious puzzles, we have worked until away along in the night trying to find how the thing worked.

We have always given them up.

We have given this rope puzzle much thought, while doing time in hostelries in various states, and have come to the definite conclusion that if any hotel takes fire while we are a part of its contents, and if it come to a square decision between burning up and trying to use that thing before a lot of strangers, we should stay in the room and incinerate.

O Death, where is thy sting!

We dare you, old Death, to show anything as unpleasant as trying to solve one of those clothes-line fire-escape puzzles.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

For Services Rendered

YOUR doctor's bill, as a general rule, reads: "For Professional Services Rendered." That means that you are to pay for work done, and not for miracles performed. If you hire a doctor to attend you in sickness, you enter a contract to pay for his expert services whether he succeeds in curing you or not. It would be unfortunate for both parties in the contract if the terms were otherwise. For instance:

A shrewd son of Erin had a wife and couldn't keep her from running to the doctor with every little ache or pain. So he made up his mind to hit off a bargain with the doctor. He persuaded the doctor to take care of his wife by the year, agreeing to pay a fixed annual subsidy for the doctor's services, instead of a fee for each visit.

Well, the arrangement worked beautifully for a time. Then the woman died. The bereaved husband was inconsolable. But of course that was no concern of the doctor's. In fact the doctor sent in his bill the day after the funeral; the amount seemed exorbitant to Larry under the circumstances. He called to talk it over.

"Now, doctor," he began, "you agreed to take care of her whenever she called you, didn't you?"

"I did," said the doctor.

"And you were to charge me $200 a year for your professional services, kill or cure, were ye not?"

"Certainly, that was the bargain," said the doctor.

"Now, doctor, you don't mean to say you cured her?" queried Larry.

"Why, no, I couldn't——"

"Well, are you ready to swear you killed her?"

"Hardly. You see——"

"Then you may whistle for your pay, doctor!"

As a whistler, the doctor proved a great success. The next term of Supreme Court considerately added interest and court charges to the original bill, and Larry had to pay for the music.

Two things are not yet clearly understood by some people. First, a doctor's fee is collectable. And second, a doctor is not legally bound to attend anyone under any circumstances unless he wants to. You can't make a doctor work for a contingent fee, and you can't make him work at all if he chooses to refuse his services.

BY GEORGE FITCH

Husbands

A HUSBAND is the dream of maidens, the hope of single ladies and a stern reality with married women.

A husband is about one-eighth of a married couple. Being a husband is a serious business with most men and it requires most of their time and all of their money to make good on the job. Men become husbands at the age of twenty-one or thereabouts and continue during life or good behavior.

Being a husband is a great privilege and most men make several frantic efforts to go into husbandry during their early youth before they finally succeed. To become a husband one must acquire the unanimous consent of some girl. This requires from ten minutes to ten years according to the amount of sense possessed by the girl. Some girls will spend four days picking out a husband and four weeks picking out a wedding dress. But girls of this sort are very apt to make several selections of husbands before finding a perfect fit.

The duties of a husband are to come home on time for meals, to pay the bills, to exterminate burglars at night, to go to parties and remain happily around until called for, to hook up dresses beneath his breath, to eat the tough end of the beefsteak at dinner, to go back to the house after handkerchiefs and gloves, to admire the latest misdemeanors in millinery, to make his last year's overcoat do a few years longer, to put his collars in the laundry bag, to mail at the earliest possible minute a letter written in answer to one received last year and to enjoy conversation served hot or cold at all hours. Ther are no perfect husbands and the usual success in accomplishing these duties is about 33 per cent. The husband business has as many failures as any other life work, but this does not deter callow youths from rushing blithely into it equipped for the job only with a good appetite and a firm determination to hold a rocking-chair down in its proper place.

There is a large demand for domestic or American-born husbands in this country. They are as a rule durable, easy to run and yield larger returns than any other brand. Women fond of luxuries, however, often import husbands at a cost of from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000 apiece. They are showy goods and will wash, but many of them are returned because of other defects. Husbands who are treated kindly and are not fed soggy biscuits or conversation will frequently last a lifetime. Fresh husbands are undesirable, but not as much so as those who are pickled in alcohol.

Views Of The Press

Genius Writ In Plaster

PLASTER decorations of ceilings, walls, mantelpieces, cornices, chimney shafts and other portions of the interior of houses were once regarded with great favor, and yet to-day they add to the attractiveness of many old mansions.

Even in their simplest forms, when they consisted of nothing except raised rings, ovals, scrolls and moldings, decorating the ceiling, they provided effects of light and shade very agreeable to the eye, and when a really artistic hand shaped them into garlands of flowers, or geometric or arabesque figures, or other designs, they gave character to rooms such as could not be imparted by paint or paper.

The sixteenth and seventeenth centuries seem to have been the most flourishing periods for the artistic plasterer. From Holland the art was introduced into England, or at least made popular in England in the reign of Henry VIII. and it continued to develop through the reign of Elizabeth, until, in the time of James I., it flourished to such a degree that it had become known as "Jacobean work," James being a variation of Jacob.

A great deal of this Jacobean house decoration still exists in England, while a great deal more has been destroyed, and the specimens that can still be found are among the most interesting and often beautiful examples of architectural artistry in existence.

The "motives," that is, the ideas that moved the artists in designing their work, were chosen with great skill and appropriateness. The figures on the walls, ceilings and chimney-pieces gave a liveliness and vivacity to the interiors of houses which increased their attractiveness as social centers.

A company of men and women assembled in a cold, barren, barnlike room cannot have the same spirit of sociability as that which enlivens them when they are surrounded and canopied by beautiful architectural and sculptural forms.

The Jacobean artists in plaster had the skill to make their work accordant and harmonious with the social instincts of the time. Sometimes the figures employed were grotesque, though never repellant, but generally they were remarkable only for their beauty and pleasing suggestiveness.

Antiquarians have found that certain designs were repeated in different houses, sometimes with variations in details which did not conceal the underlying identity of the artist's plan, and it has been concluded that there were a few artists in plaster who must have enjoyed considerable reputation and prosperity in their day, although it is difficult now to discover their names. The material used was mainly lime, plaster and sand, but the models were furnished in the form of moulds.—St. Louis Star.

What Becomes Of French Criminals

In France a criminal who is classed as incorrigible is either sent to the Islands of Safety, off the Guiana coast—of which Devil's Island, where Captain Dreyfus languished, is one—or to St. Laurent or St. Jean, a little higher up the river. In this terrible climate, with the scorching sun beating down upon them, the criminals are made to work in the gold mines, or opening up the jungle, and as the officers in charge have virtually unlimited power over them, they are often ill treated. The inhabitants of these prisons range from murderers to the worst type of professional thieves and desperadoes. About one-fifth of the criminals are women, and—a thing that seems incomprehensible—were permitted to marry the male convicts. In some cases wives had joined their convict husbands!

Escape is the one thought of the convict. The doors leading to the jungle are not guarded any too well, and the officers in charge do not seem to care if a criminal escapes into the forest, knowing very well that men seldom get away alive from this terrible region of deadly malaria and ferocious wild beasts. Fugitives have also to reckon with the natives, to whom the hunting of convicts is great sport.—Wide World.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Letting The Devil In

Q. A lease provided that the landlord's written consent must be secured before there could be an assignment of the lease. Later the lease was assigned without such consent, but the landlord accepted rent from the new tenant after having been informed of the transaction. What effect will this have?

A. The landlord's act in accepting the rent, with knowledge of the assignment, amounted to a waiver on his part.

Incompetent Agents

Q. The directors of a corporation have been negligent in the management of its affairs and have entrusted the conduct of the business to agents who are lacking in experience and judgment. Does the law impose any liability for such negligence?

A. The circumstances outlined by you would indicate gross negligence. If the business has been handled in this manner, there will be a liability for loss traceable to a breach of trust or to negligent acts on the part of the agents.

An Infant Wedding

Q. When a boy is eighteen years old and a girl is sixteen, is there anything in the law which prevents them from marrying, provided they have the consent of parents or guardian?

A. The provisions of the law, with reference to this subject, vary in the different states. Under the law in some states, a boy of eighteen and a girl of sixteen may marry if the parent or guardian gives consent.

Work

Work is a distinctly human thing. The man without Work in his soul is an idler of the worst sort. And this planet begrudges and growls at the space given to him who finds Work a burden.

The Worker is the one who Scores.

True, he is sometimes "out" because of a "caught fly"—but he always has stored away somewhere in the end of his "bat" a few odd "home runs." And it is "home runs" that win in the Game of Baseball and of Life.

Work gives exercise to both Mind and Body. And it attracts the eye of Opportunity.

But Work without Wisdom—Work without Will—Work without Purpose—is worse than to do no Work at all. Work is for Achievement and for an End that counts for Usefulness.

Work, then, while the blood is warm and the bones are elastic. Work while the muscles are supple and the head is clear. For there always comes a time when your tools must be set aside and your step will slacken and the messages of your brain will come slow and sluggish and the day will darken and your life will seem to want sleep.

Work while yet there is time and inclination and a happy spirit. Work your best this very day.

For, after all—it's Fun!

Serbian War Song

The following translation of the Serbian National anthem is by Elizabeth Christitch:

Srpskog Kralja Srpski Rod
God of Justice! Thou who saved us
When in deepest bondage cast,
Hear Thy Serbian children's voices,
Be our help as in the past.
With Thy mighty hand sustain us,
Still our rugged pathway trace;
God, our hope! protect and cherish
Serbian crown and Serbian race!

Bind in closest links our kindred,
Teach the love that will not fail,
May the loathed fiend of discord
Never in our ranks prevail.
Let the golden fruits of union
Our young tree of freedom grace:
God, our Master, guide and prosper
Serbian crown and Serbian race!

Lord! avert from us Thy vengeance,
Thunder of Thy dreaded ire;
Bless each Serbian town and hamlet,
Mountain, meadow, hearth and spire.
When our host goes forth to battle,
Death or victory to embrace—
God of armies, be our leader;
Strengthen then the Serbian race!

On our sepulchre of ages
Breaks the resurrection morn,
From the slough of direst slavery
Serbia anew is born.
Through five hundred years of durance
We have knelt before Thy face,
All our kin, O God, deliver!
Thus entreats the Serbian race.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — The Story of a Wonderful Big Cave.

"And I am Polyhemus," he cried.

"YOU promised, daddy," cried Evelyn, climbing on his lap.

"I promised you the story of the Cyclops cave," said daddy, "and here it is: When Odysseus, the wanderer who had sailed away from the siege of Troy, went ashore with his picked men they took along a jar of excellent wine for the natives. They had been treated so roughly that they imagined a nice present might make the Cyclops friendly, you see. The first thing they saw worth while was a large cave.

"There was no one in it, but it was filled with every good thing that rich flocks of sheep could give—quantities of excellent cheeses, pails and bowls of sweet milk and little lambs and kids playing in interesting pens. All these things, neatly arranged, looked very good to the hungry Greeks, you may be sure. Soon they heard a shuffling noise outside the cave and saw a huge old giant stumbling up, carrying an immense bundle of firewood, which he threw down at the mouth of the cave. Next he drove into the cave all his sheep and goats to be milked, entered himself and rolled against the mouth of the cave an enormous rock, so big twenty oxen could not draw it.

"The Greeks kept very still and watched him. First he milked his herd, keeping some of the milk for cheese and the rest for his supper. His work done, he rolled his one huge eye about the cave and discovered the strangers.

"'Who are you?' he growled at them.

"'I am Noman, and these are the brave Greeks who fought with so much glory at Troy. We are now on our way home, and we beg your hospitality.'

"'And I am Polyphemus, the master of this cave!' roared the giant. He reached out his huge fist, hurled two brave Greeks against the walls of his cave, killing them. Then right before the eyes of their comrades he ate them for supper, stretched out his great body full length on the floor and slept like a bowlder.

"Odysseus was tempted to seize his sword and slay the giant while he slept. Then he remembered that this surely meant death for all of them as soon as the other giants heard of it. And, besides, the great rock in front of the cave was far beyond their power to lift. So he decided to let Polyphemus live until the cave was open again. All that night the Greeks took turns watching the giant, lest he wake up, and in the morning, when he did, he killed two more Greeks and ate them for breakfast. Then he stretched, rolled away the rock from the door, drove out his flocks, went out himself and carefully placed the rock in front of the cave," said daddy, with a hug.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"A House Is Not Made Up of Furniture," the Ellsons Decide.

"Oh, John, I am not a bit sleepy. It is so late that another hour will not make any particular difference in your feelings tomorrow; will it?" Molly hung her coat and hat in the closet as she spoke.

"Not a bit. I couldn't sleep if I went to bed. What do you want to do?" asked her husband.

"Just stay up and visit; talk the thing all over and enjoy it." Molly smiled into her husband's face.

"We will sit in front of the baseburner with its cheerful red face." He drew up an easy chair.

"Turn out the light; it is more cosy without it," suggested Molly.

John drew his wife onto his knee and she curled up with a contented little sigh.

"Do you know," she began, "it seems wicked to sleep when one is as happy as we are tonight. We want to sleep to forget sorrow, but it is a wicked waste to sleep when we can spend the time being happy."

"We are certainly happy, all right. I feel as if I need ask nothing more of fate. I've got you and health and my good name. When I felt the terrible net tightening around me, and saw no way of escape, I was convinced that if I was actually branded as a thief and cast aside, it would kill me. I do not mean kill my body necessarily, but me. I should never have been able to hold up my head again." He swayed softly back and forth and silence fell between them.

"Do you realize that as far as worldly possessions are concerned, we are exactly where we were six months ago? Our debt is the same, for my sickness put us back to the old figure in spite of all our hard savings. Then we thought we were very miserable, and now——"

"We are as happy as kings," interrupted John.

"The only difference is our changed attitude toward it all," continued Molly.

"After all that is everything. I did not appreciate you. I had almost to lose you before I could be brought to my senses."

"It is so good that we have found each other, before it was 'too late,'" chimed in Molly. "Now we are ready to begin again with knowledge enough to help us make a go of it. We have found that money is not essential to happiness. Dear Mrs. Morton said the trouble today is, young people think they must begin life where their parents left off or even beyond it. She said she thought one hundred dollars would cover all the furniture she had to begin housekeeping with, and they had not their farm paid for. 'But I know no bride with the costliest home ever took more pride in it than I did in mine,' she told me; 'and every new piece of furniture was an event; every payment was a source of pride. I felt that I was helping make the home. Girls today want to do nothing but receive, and they lose the pleasure of giving, of service which is the richest pleasure in life.' It was a new view of life. I am glad it is not too late for me to help you. I am glad I can have the chance to show you that a home is not made up of furniture."

John bent over and kissed her before he said:

"Anybody who could fail with a wife like that must be made of pretty poor stuff, and we have gained this from the disagreeable experience. Jaynes is my friend now. Before I was only 'a man on the payroll,' nothing more. That will count for something."

"I hate to suggest it, but I really feel that as you must report for work tomorrow we must go to bed," said Molly after they had rocked in silence for some time.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

Life in the Trenches

A series of letters written by Canadian Officers now in Belgium, who are relatives of Councilman Allan Cowperthwait, of North Plainfield, have been received by him. The series gives such a graphic description of the life which the Canadian contingent is leading in Belgium, that the Daily Press has secured permission to print the letters in serial form.

Somewhere in Belgium,
Oct. 23, 1915.

My dear Kid—

As it's raining to beat the band and very muddy and cold, it's a good day to get caught up in my correspondence. This dug-out is high and lofty, situated in the woods, and ideal for summer weather, but unfortunately, too airy for this October weather. However, by the aid of candles, a splendid little lamp that Helen sent me for boiling water or making cocoa in, we get a certain amount of warmth in the place, but as we are only going to be here a few days, we won't bother to build a fire-place. The men are quite ingenious in building fire-places in their dug-outs, using biscuit tins for a stove, bully beef cans for chimneys and sometimes old bricks with clay for mortar. And then they pile in like sardines and soon warm the place up. Of course, ventilation is sometimes rather a second consideration.

Yesterday we had a church parade—rather unique. The Padre's voice was frequently drowned by the roar of our batteries in rear, and we only sang, 'God Save the King'—and that very quickly, and immediately after the funeral of two of our boys who had been killed the day before by shell fire while digging trenches. There are, of course, cemeteries all over the place and graves right in the trenches outside of the dug-outs—some with crosses without names, but lately they have been trying to keep them well back from the trench line, and the pioneers have been making some very nice wooden crosses, painting the record on. Some of the oldest graves here have French and Belgian soldiers' hats on them, religious pictures and crucifixes and bottles with the record in them. Part of my company's dug-outs are right beside an old graveyard, sadly neglected, and I have had the boys cleaning it up and putting it in good shape. They have a system now of registering the graves: a metal tag is nailed on the cross with the register number. I don't know why I write you all this; I suppose it is uppermost in my mind. You doubtless have seen heaps of pictures of these places.

Yes, the trenches are smelly places, but there has been very little sickness so far—no grouching at all. It's simply splendid and everybody cheerful, making a joke of it all. I have splendid subalterns who kid each other all day long and instead of a grouch there's a witty remark that brings a laugh.

So far all our cooking has been done by platoons; that's one cook for about fifty men. The next trenches we go to it will be individual cooking, each man or two or three messing together and they like it because they can make toast and fry cheese and do all sorts of stunts, and their friends in England send them all sorts of eats and they have fine times.

My pack shoes that Frank gave me are fine and I am the envy of the bunch and they are all ordering them. My batman has found a brasier and made a lovely fire and we sure are enjoying it—just sizzling ourselves—becoming smoked is a small part of the game. My friend stick their heads in the door—their eyes water, they sneeze and depart with many expressions unfit for your ears, my dear girl. Their respect for me as major is gone; they depart addressing the sand bag walls as they go.

Our friend battery in rear is starting a little afternoon hate just to make Fritz keep his head down. We naturally are anxiously watching progress in Servia. Things are assuming unusually large proportions. There sure will be something doing some of these days. I don't know how somebody likes his nephew but senior to him, but the nephew is an attractive soldier and will make good, I am sure. He is quiet, cool and seems to have other qualities that count.

There are so many things I would like to tell you, but cannot. Major General Censor would give me 'I don't know what' if I did. I am feeling fit as a fiddle, and hope to continue so, Allah willing and with a bit of luck hope to carry on until my turn comes for seven days' leave. They may start it before the three months are up and perhaps married men may go first, and won't that be joyful eh what? Now Kid, dear, I must do some more letters. Hope you are all well. I was glad to get mother's first letter dated Oct. 18, received last night and hear all the news. I like to get letters, don't forget that, and if you would like to mail me a few packages of Canadian Sweet Caporal and a few Murads I would enjoy them. You bet those apples Frank is sending will taste good. I had one the other day and it is sure the best thing I have tasted since arriving in this country. Now I must close. Helen and the boys are well and seem happy. Peggy sure is a brave little brick. An occasional illustrated paper would be appreciated. Heaps of love to all.

"MORGAN."

Household Hints..

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To Freshen Furs—Furs when taken out in the fall are often found to have a mussed, crushed appearance. They can be made to look like new by the following process: Wet the fur with a hair brush, brushing up the wrong way of the fur. Leave it to dry in the air about half an hour, then give it a good beating on the wrong side (do not beat the fur) with a rattan. After beating it, comb, combing it up the right way of the fur.

Easy Window Cleaning—Buy a chamois and use clear water with a tablespoon of ammonia in it. Dip chamois in water, wring lightly, rub over window once, dip in again, wring dry and wipe window. When the window gets dry it will be clean and shine beautifully.

If apples will not cook in pies, sprinkle them with one teaspoonful of vinegar to a pie.

Many women find moving hard on account of house hunting. To make this easy: first write down just the kind of a house you want, how many rooms and conveniences, locality, amount of rent you can pay (no woman has a right to pay more than one week's pay of her husband for a month's rent), then hand this itemized slip to one or more good real estate agents. The moving will be half done. Pack up and get ready by degrees.

THE TABLE

Cream Cheese—Half pound cheese and one tablespoon butter; run through food chopper. Fine for either table use or sandwiches. Will keep much longer than the dry cheese.

Economical Use of Lamb Chops—Rib lamb chops "Frenched" are costly. To broil the lower ends with their scant flesh is to char them into uselessness. A savory luncheon dish, however, may be made of these lower or rib ends. Have the butcher crack the bones close up to the main, meaty part of the chops, so they may be easily detached. Stew these gently for an hour, adding salt and pepper at the last, and set away to cool. Next morning remove the fat which will cap the top; slip bones from meat; cut meat into inch lengths, removing superfluous fat; reheat slowly in their own liquor. Cooked vegetables may be added, such as onions, peas, carrots, mushrooms or boiled potatoes. Thicken with butter and flour before serving. This is good on toast or as the center of a bowl of mashed potatoes.

Spanish Macaroni—Cook enough macaroni in salted water so as to have one pint when cold. Cut two slices of bacon in small pieces and fry; add one or two minced onions to this, let brown, then add one small green pepper finely chopped, in this stir pint of tomatoes. When hot remove from fire. Butter baking dish, put in a layer of tomato mixture, then a thin layer of cold minced meat, then a layer of macaroni, seasoning a little. Repeat this until dish is full. Pour over this some milk and place a little butter on top; place in oven until well baked or browned.

Fried Apples—Put bacon fat in frying pan (if preferred to butter). Cut apples in thin slices after cores and skin have been removed, put in frying pan and let cook slowly until thoroughly done. Before serving, sweeten to taste with sugar. This makes an appetizing dish and can be used in place of vegetables.

French Fried Potatoes—Pare potatoes, cut them in balls or any fancy shape. Soak in cold water one hour. Then dry on a towel. Drop quickly into fat hot enough to brown them by the time they come to the surface. They are done when they float. Skim them from fat, drain or brown paper, salt and serve at once.

HALF MILLION VOTED TO ENLARGE PERMANENT HIGHWAY SYSTEM WHICH RADIATES FROM RE-BORN CITY OF DAYTON

SURVEYOR SMITH LAYING the FIRST BRICK — The CINCINNATI-DAYTON ROAD

A one mill levy for permanent road building has been voted by Montgomery county electors, following a two-year construction program in which twenty-five miles of brick highways have been built. This vote insures $230,000 a year for two years, which will be augmented by state aid and by assessments upon specially benefited lands.

Dayton's highway program is part of the general awakening that followed the disastrous flood of 1913. With a tremendous task of rebuilding before it, ordinary political considerations were thrown to the winds, a city manager installed and a sentiment for thoroughness in public work engendered, which has brought Dayton to the very front of American cities of its size.

Credit for interpreting this spirit in terms of road improvement is given County Engineer Victor C. Smith and Commissioner Charles F. Brenner. They figured it would be good economy on the long run to build highways of the most substantial character. Six brick highways now radiate in every direction from the city limits.

Dayton is located at the intersection of two projected national highways, the rebuilt National Pike and the Dixie highway, both of which are to be paved their entire length in Montgomery county.

WHAT DID THE KAISER SAY? BEVERIDGE WON'T TELL THEM

SENATOR BEVERIDGE at FRENCH FRONT

GENERAL von HINDENBURG — BEVERIDGE with GERMAN OFFICERS

What did the Kaiser say? That's what official Washington would like to know.

Albert J. Beveridge, schooled in statecraft, through years of membership on the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate, talked with Emperor Wilhelm II. for two hours. But not a single word of what was said is known. American state department officials would like to know what the Kaiser said. He must have said much that might guide Secretary Lansing.

The Indiana statesman, confidant of American diplomats and presidents, interviewed other leaders in the great conflict whose word has often meant war, or peace. These important interviews he has just published in a book he calls "What Is Back of the War." (Bobbs-Merrill, Indianapolis.) [illegible] now in the American state department archives, is, in the opinion of men in Washington whose names it would not do to use, the most notable "inside-information" document issued since the war began.

The former Senator interviewed not only powerful German statesmen, but their war leaders. Von Tirpitz, the man responsible for the submarine warfare that sent the Lusitania with its cargo of American souls to the bottom of the Irish Sea, confided to the American statesman his ideas of fighting. Von Hindenburg, conqueror on the eastern war front, took time between attacks to unbosom himself through Senator Beveridge to America.

Then Beveridge went to France. There he interviewed Gabriel Hanotaux, publicist, General Franchet d'Esperey and other great generals whose shells had been falling into the very German trenches Beveridge had so lately left. Then over to Great Britain where Viscount Bryce, Lord Newton, Charles Trevelyan, Bernard Shaw, Sir Gilbert Parker and others recited the real reasons why England went to war.

Senator Beveridge also tells, with graphic description, of how he and his party were "specially shelled," how men were blown to pieces before his very eyes and of the calm demeanor and of the fatalistic attitude of men who knew they would be "the next." He tells of how the fighting men are no more concerned than if they were at ordinary day labor, how soldiers and officers, after a few days, "think no more of taking part in an artillery duel or trench fight than of plowing, bookkeeping or blacksmithing."

But the feature of the book attracting attention in Washington is the intimate inside views and thoughts of the men who are making the war—even the men who would make war on us, if the United States should become entangled. Senator Beveridge has recorded faithfully all that was said to him by these men.

But on what the Kaiser said in his two-hour talk he is strangely silent.

If you mix knowledge and industry,
The product will be success.

GRENDA AND HILL WIN SIX-DAY BIKE GRIND

Alfred Grenda, of Australia, and Fred Hill, of Boston, won the annual six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden, Saturday night, with Reggie McNamara and Robert Spears, of Australia, second. Magin and Lawrence and Ryan and Thomas tied for third and fourth places. Egg and Dupuy were fifth, Eaton and Madden sixth, Moran and Walthour seventh, Hanley and Halstead eighth, Drobach and Corry ninth, Seres and Linert tenth and Mitten and Hansen eleventh.

The race ended amid the wildest excitement ever seen at an affair of this kind at the Garden. It took sixteen separate mile and a half spriuts to decide the winners, and a new world's record was created, the riders covering a distance of 2,770 miles and eight laps. The old figures, made last year by Goullet and Grenda, were 2,759 miles and 1 lap.

MT. ST. MARY GIRLS OPEN COURT SCHEDULE

Playing Under Handicap, Team is Defeated by N. P. H. S. Maids.

The girls' basketball team of North Plainfield High School continued its winning pace Saturday afternoon, by defeating the Mt. St. Mary aggregation by the score of 44 to 3, on the latter's court. This victory marked the sixth consecutive win for the borough maidens.

The home team was playing under a decided disadvantage, having been accustomed to playing boys' rules, while the contest Saturday was played with lines. This necessitated the calling of many fouls for offenses that are permissible in boys' procedure. This was the first contest scheduled by the losing players, and although they suffered a severe defeat, they gave evidence of latent ability which, with practice, should produce better results.

Miss Burtis and Captain Lillian Spencer once more proved a combination that cannot be restrained, shooting nineteen field goals, the former being credited with twelve while her teammate shot the remaining seven. The N. P. H. S. guards were not overladen with work, the ball being continuously in the visitors' territory, while the home forwards were given little opportunity to display their abilities.

The score:

WALT CAMP'S ALL-AMERICAN TEAM, JUST OUT, A SURPRISE

Walter Camp's All-American football selections will appear in Collier's Weekly in next Saturday's issue. The list, which is regarded generally as the official climax of the football season, has its usual surprises. The stars upon whom practically everyone agreed—Gilman, Spears, Shelton, Barrett and Mahan—appear on his first team, but Baston, Minnesota's end, Halfback Macomber, of Illinois, and King, of Harvard, the speedy back, are surprises.

In the whole list only two Princeton men appear—Hogg and Tibbott—both being placed on the second eleven. Talman, of Rutgers, is again listed on the second team, but the brilliant Rutgers tackle, Nash, is not named. Only one Yale man is mentioned, he being Black, the guard. No Pennsylvania, Michigan or Navy man is named.

Camp's choices follow:

First Team.	Second Team.
Baston, Minn. end	Herron, Pitts.
Gilman, Harvard tackle	Buck, Wisconsin
Spears, Dartmouth guard	Hogg, Princeton
Peck, Pitts. center	Cool, Cornell
Schlater, Syracuse guard	Black, Yale
Abell, Colgate tackle	Vandergraaf, Ala.
Shelton, Cornell end	Higgins, Penn St.
Barrett, Cornell quarterback	Watson, Harvard
King, Harvard halfback	Tibbott, Princeton
Macomber, Illinois halfback	Oliphant, W. P.
Mahan, Harvard fullback	Talman, Rutgers

PLAINFIELD ELEVEN MADE MOST POINTS ON METUCHEN

Only 20 points were scored this year on the Metuchen Field Club eleven, and fourteen of these were made by the Holy Cross team, in the game played in this city. The Metuchens lost to only one other team besides the Plainfield club, and finished the season with a 6-0 victory over the Sons of Rest, of New Brunswick.

SUMMIT CHAPEL EASY FOR LOCAL Y. M. C. A.

Plainfield Basketballers Put up Excellent Passing Game and Win by 54-17 Score.

Good practice was all that the Chapel Club, of Summit, gave the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. five here Saturday night, the locals making more than three times as many points as the visitors. The one-sided tilt ended 54 to 17.

The Plainfield boys outweighed and outplayed the Summit lads, but the latter showed heaps of fight. The home players gave a display of stellar passing, and moved up the floor like a quintet practicing by itself. Bill Taylor turned in eight field goals. Al Manley made five in the second half. Voegtlen was the best man on the losers' side.

TRAVERS IN FAVOR OF MEDAL PLAY TOURNEY

Max Marston Going to New York—Other Golf News of Local Flavor.

Jerome D. Travers has come out in favor of medal play instead of match play in the national amateur championship. The famous Jerseyman believes the luck of the draw plays too important a part in match play.

Max Marston will soon go into business, where he will not have the opportunity to play as much golf as he did this last summer. But before taking the plunge Max set a tournament mark that will stand for a long time. He started early in April and was still winning cups over greens whitened by November's frost. The only wonder is that he could play so much golf and still hold his game at such a steady level. This could be accomplished only through a set of wonderfully steady nerves.

The dinner to be given to Max Marston and Eddie Wild, of Cranford, at the Whitehall Club, on Friday night, is assuming the proportions of a national celebration. Most of the leading golfers in the metropolitan district will be there to "here's how" the two Cranford stars. Mayor Calkins, of this city, will be one of the speakers.

George M. Church, the Princeton tennis star, who played there last summer, has gone keenly into golf the last few weeks, playing very well for one who gives so much of his time to another game. Church has a good, healthy wallop off the tee, and so far as distance goes, can hold his own with most of them. Church leaves Wednesday for California.

Speedy Rush played his first round in seventeen years at Englewood recently, and while he refused to announce his score, George Church makes affidavit to a Rush drive of 318 yards from the second tee.

COLORED PLAYERS TO PUT ON MIXED DOUBLE-HEADER

Colored basketball players will hold sway at the Plainfield High School tomorrow night. The Athenians, of this city, will take on a boys' aggregation from New Brunswick; while a preliminary between teams of Plainfield girls will also be played. A team of girls from this city will go to New Brunswick Thursday night for a game. Dancing will be in order after the double-header tomorrow evening.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Miss Emily Stevens, now starring in "The Unchastened Woman" at the Hudson Theatre, New York, will be the featured principal in "The House of Tears," a splendid metro production in five parts. Miss Stevens, who is a niece of the noted Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, has many admirers in Plainfield, and it is safe to say that all will turn out to see her on the Astor screen. "The House of Tears" affords Miss Stevens a part which is similar in many respects to that which she is now playing in the New York production. Wednesday and Thursday the principal subject will be "Nearly a Lady," featuring Elsie Janis, who also has a large following among Plainfield theatre-goers.

MOTORISTS TO GATHER IN BRUNSWICK FRIDAY

Good Roads to Be Discussed—Road and Auto News of Interest.

Lights on autos must be lighted not later than 5.04 p. m. this week.

Two important good roads meetings are scheduled for this week. One of these is on Friday night at the Hotel Klein, New Brunswick. The occasion is a dollar dinner, and those who will assemble are motorists and taxpayers of Middlesex county. This event will be for the purpose of discussing automobile legislation and the maintenance of good roads and proper bridges in a manner combining results and economy.

The Monmouth county freeholders stated lsast week that the Keyport-South Amboy road improvements were up to the State of New Jersey, and and that the work required State money. The State road department was also blamed for the delayed action on the contract awarded for the improvement of a section of Riverside drive, in Middletown township. This was awarded May 5, but work has not been begun. Joseph F. Burke, of Burke & Bonham, of Plainfield, contractors, made a statement in reply to a question from the Board. Neither the contractors nor the freeholders are to blame for the delay, it was claimed. Rather, it was up to the State road department, which, it was said, did not have the money to do the work at this time.

The bridge between Bound Brook and South Bound Brook, over the Raritan River, has been condemned by experts employed by the borough of South Bound Brook. They report the bridge a menace to travel.

After three years of work the road connecting Summit with the Cranford-Westfield road and the Plainfield-Springfield road has been completed. The new road is five miles long and is of amiesite.

That the Union county Board of Freeholders will soon take action toward widening the amiesite pavement on North Broad street through Hillside township was stated last week by Freeholder P. H. Meisel, a member of the road committee of the Board. Mr. Meisel said that the county authorities, he thought, would not heed the request of the Hillside Township Committee to have the pavement cover entire width of the road, but stated that in his belief an extra three feet would be added on each side of the pavement from Springfield to Elmwood avenue. A Mr. [illegible] he thought the pavement could be put down [illegible].

GINNAN WINS DUCKS AT CLIMAX RANGES

Captures Two of Three 15-Bird Events—Shoot at Metuchen Saturday.

Fred Ginnan was the leading winner at the Climax Gun Club traps Saturday, when three 15-bird events for ducks were held. John Terry won the first event, breaking 14. A triple tie resulted in the second event, the deadlock being shot off in the third event, which was a handicap affair. Ginnan, Albert and John Terry were in the tie, and Ginnan broke 14 in the shoot-off. A. D. Honeyman, with a handicap of 4, also won a duck.

A 10-bird sweepstakes was also held, John Terry winning with a score of 9. Other scores were Ginnan, 6, and Ord, 7.

Next Saturday the Plainfielders will go to Metuchen for a prize shoot. An all-day prize shoot will be held at the Climax traps Christmas.

Plainfield Knights moved up to a forth place tie in the Columbian League, when they wrenched three victories from Jersey City, on the Columbus Club chutes here Saturday night. In every game, the Watchung Council pinners surpassed the previous high score for the K. C. League this season.

The local team was strengthened by the addition of Frank Blatz and Chief Kiely, who have been unable to roll with the team before. George Taylor was high man, the anchor averaging 198.

The first game was easy, but the winners had less than a dozen pins to spare in the second. The final was decided by 74 sticks.

Kiely rolled 209, Taylor 2[illegible] and 198.

OLD MAN HARD LUCK ON TRAIL OF BOROUGH FIVE

Misfortune apparently has its eye cast on the North Plainfield High School basketball team this season, the borough team now having three men out of the line-up. The first serious blow was received when Ronald Coore was attacked with appendicitis, which will keep him idle the entire season. Cecil Pitts will be laid up the rest of this month, having sprained [illegible] shoulder [illegible] right [illegible] in the [illegible] last Friday evening received an injury to his leg. TABS' MEN WIN AT HOPE CHAPEL

Finish First Half Well in Front, But Lead by Only Two Points at Finish.

36 FOULS ARE CALLED

Close Guarding Makes Field Goals Scarce, Especially in Early Part of Game—Large Audience Watches Exciting Tussle.

St. Mary's T. A. B. S. basketball team scored a 24-22 victory at Hope Chapel, Saturday night. A lead stowed away in the first half won for the Tabs, the winners being outscored almost three to one by fresh players the home side injected in the line-up in the second half.

The game was one of the prettiest battles seen on a local court this season, and had a large crowd of rooters on edge throughout. The climax was specially exciting, but one point separating the teams half a minute before the contest ended.

Not a single field goal was made during the first ten minutes of play, which period was marked by very close guarding. The Tabs took the lead on fouls, Kyle dropping in a string of one-pointers before the home boys broke into the scoring column. The half ended 18 to 9 in favor of the Tabs.

In the second half, Porter and Marsh went in to play the forwards for Hope, and Ted Snyder was sent in centre. The new combination proved to be a big improvement, and the Chapelites began to draw near their opponents. With the score 18 to 23 against them, the Hopes came within one tally of tying the score when T. Snyder and George Leighs dropped in field goals, Leighs' basket being almost the length of the floor.

With but half a minute left to play, a foul was called on T. Snyder, and Art Kyle made good from the 15-foot mark, giving his team a winning margin of two points.

The new rules seemed to bother the players, especially the Hopes. Three dozen fouls were called, two-thirds of them on the home troupe. The Tabs turned 12 of their 24 chances into points, while the Hopes made good on 8 of their 12 free throws.

HOT WATER THE BEST LIVER AND BOWEL MEDICINE

Says glass of hot water before breakfast washes poisons from system.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash the poisons, waste, gases and sour bile out of the bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Follow soap and hot water cleansing and limestone phosphate with the glass of hot water, so hot water and limestone phosphate may act on the digestive organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste, have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach, others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

CLEAR OFF SNOW BY SIX O'CLOCK

Those Who Fail Will Be Prosecuted, Says Mayor Calkins.

POLICE ARE WARNED

If Property Owners Do Not Act at Once Street Commissioner Will Clear Walks and Cost of Work Will Be Added to Fine.

Snow must be cleared from the sidewalks by 6 o'clock tonight, according to an official order issued by Mayor Leighton Calkins this morning, and those who do not comply will be liable to prosecution under a city ordinance.

Mayor Calkins issued the following statement with his order:

"Property owners and tenants or other persons having charge of property bordering on sidewalks are reminded that they must remove snow and ice within twelve hours of daylight after same falls or forms. The police have been instructed to report all violations tonight. The ordinance provides a fine for each offense. Winter is here, and we may as well know what is expected of us in this matter.

"The ordinance also provides that the street commissioner shall as rapidly as possible clear the sidewalks where owners or tenants neglect to do so. This is done at cost, and the amount is certified by the street commissioner to the tax collector, and will be included in next year's tax bills.

"Property owners should understand that the law does not give them the choice either of clearing off snow or ice themselves or reimbursing the city for doing it. Owners or tenants are subject to a fine for neglect to keep the sidewalks cleaned; and, in addition, owners will find that the cost will be charged up to them on their tax bills if the walks are cleaned by the street commissioner.

"It should be unnecessary to say that the law will be reasonably enforced. In case of a succession of storms one after another, or very cold weather immediately following a wet storm, with a good deal of ice formation difficult to remove, a prompt and technical compliance with the law would be almost impossible, and due allowance, of course, will be made for such conditions. But with good weather such as we have today everyone has an opportunity to clean his walks.

TELLS OF MISSION WORK IN THE ORIENT

T. Guthrie Speers Gives Stirring Talk at the Crescent Avenue Church.

T. Guthrie Speers, who accompanied Dr. Robert E. Speer on a missionary trip to the Orient, addressed a large and enthusiastic audience of women at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday afternoon, telling of his experiences. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Westminster Guild, and Mrs. Margaret Neal presided.

Mr. Speers on his missionary tour visited Siam, the Philippines, Korea, Japan and China, and he was able to bring fresh news of the progress being made there in mission work. He said that he found that old Japan did not exist any more, a new Japan now being evidenced by modern civilization.

The speaker dwelt at some length on conditions in China, telling how the Gospel of Christ is being carried to all parts of that country. He found thousands of natives worshipping the same God that Americans do. Referring to Siam and Korea, Mr. Speers said that he was surprised at the devout spirit of the natives, even those who are ill with leprosy, and was impressed with the pure naturalness of the Christianity of the people of Korea. Many, he said, who have become converted are helping to spread the gospel and were of great help to the American missionaries.

RESUME OF BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

Council Meets to Receive Annual Report and Resignation of A. E. Beals.

SCOUT CAMP LEASED

Boys Make Application for Appointment as First-Class Scouts—Other Business is Deferred Owing to Small Attendance.

The resignation of Allen E. Beals as scout commissioner of the Boy Scouts of Plainfield received at a meeting of the Scout Council at the Y. M. C. A. last night, was the principal business to be considered. Owing to the storm the attendance was small and those present decided to lay Mr. Beals' resignation on the table until the next meeting, which will probably be held next week. All expressed deep regret that Mr. Beals felt obliged to give up the position which he has filled so acceptably and there was nothing but words of praise for his untiring zeal and interest in the work.

The application of several boys for appointments as first class scouts were presented and they will be acted upon later by the council. Among them was that of Edward Campbell, of Troop 11. All other business was laid over until the next meeting.

Mr. Beals, in presenting his resignation as scout commissioner, incorporated a resume of the past year's work, together with several recommendations which, it is believed, will be favorably acted upon. Mr. Beals report follows:

"In making my report as commissioner of the Boy Scouts of Plainfield for the month just closed, I forward herewith $71.28, being the amount contributed by a friend of the scout movement, covering the cost of in-

"NATIONAL DEFENSE" WILL BE DISCUSSED

Fraternal Orders and Craftsmen Will Attend Meeting in Columbus Auditorium.

The question of "National Preparedness," which is being agitated throughout the country, will be fully discussed at a meeting to be held at Columbus Auditorium, tomorrow night. The speakers will be Dr. William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, and Henry A. Wise Wood, both of whom are members of Secretary Daniel's Naval Advisory Board. They are well versed on the subject and have announced that they will be prepared to answer any questions pertaining thereto.

Unusual interest has been aroused in the meeting by reason of the fact that the members of the city and borough councils, together with all the fraternal orders and Building Trades Council have been especially invited to attend. They have accepted and it is expected that the attendance will be large.

There are many Plainfielders who are both in favor and against the plans of preparedness for national defense, but in fact have no direct knowledge on the subject. The speakers for Thursday night's meeting will be able to impart that knowledge and their talks will be both interesting and instructive as well. The public is cordially invited to attend the meeting.

SUPPERS TO BE RESUMED.

Commencing tomorrow night, hot suppers supplied at a nominal sum, will be served at the Y. W. C. A. every week-day night until Christmas. The meals will be served from 5 until 7 o'clock and will be principally for the business girls who will work during the Christmas season rush as well as for the shoppers. Food furnished is nourishing and wholesome, being prepared by an excellent cook at the association.

TRAFFIC STAYED BY HEAVY SNOW

Wires and Poles Down, Lights Out, and Street Cars Stopped.

VERY FEW ACCIDENTS

City and Public Service Corporation Busily at Work Today Repairing Damage and Removing White Blanket That Covers Plainfield.

Snow that fell incessantly during all of yesterday and far into the night left Plainfield and its environs covered with a six inch blanket of white this morning, and seriously crippled traffic of all kinds.

Wires, poles and trees are down in all parts of the city and the telephone and electric service suffered. An army of linemen and repairmen labored through the entire night for the Public Service Corporation and much of the damage has already been repaired.

The Gamewell alarm system at police headquarters was damaged by falling wires so that about one-half of the alarm boxes are out of use.

No serious accidents occurred during the night or morning, but everywhere there were trucks stalled, automobiles discarded by the roadside and for hours last night street cars were unable to move. The greatest inconvenience was felt near 6 o'clock last night, when employes in the factories getting through with their day's work were unable to get home because of the snow covered streets. Jitneys that were provided with chains did a rushing business.

A falling wire set fire to a tree on East Front street, but the blaze quickly died out.

A telephone pole on West Front street broke down under its burden of snow and ice and fell into the street. Men from the Public Service removed it.

A tree fell at the corner of Front street and Norwood avenue and stopped traffic there for a short time.

Six hundred telephones in the Plainfield district were thrown out of service by the storm. Not all of these are in the city proper, as this district includes Bound Brook and Somerville, but a greater part of the number effect local trade.

The firm alarm system was crippled. Early yesterday afternoon boxes began to fail and by 6 o'clock many stations could not be heard from. Chief Doane had a crew of repairmen at work as soon as the breaks were reported and by 11 p. m. the boxes in the business section had been repaired.

Street Commissioner Gavett was at work early this morning with a force of ninety men and fifteen teams and wagons, clearing the downtown streets. By 2 p. m. they had made good progress on Front street, Park avenue and others where the heaviest traffic passes, and the entire city will soon be cleared.

"MESSIAH" WILL BE GIVEN AT HIGH SCHOOL TONIGHT

The "Messiah" will be given this evening at 8 o'clock at the High School Auditorium by the Choral Society. This will be one of the best oratorios given in Plainfield. The chorus which has been under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, has received the best training, and the singing will be excellent. The four soloists, who have sung in concerts, musical festivals, and oratorios all the over the country, have voices of unusual quality and sweetness. Tickets will be on sale at the High School this evening.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, will meet tonight to elect a financial secretary to succeed C. L. Kling, who has resigned.

PORTABLE HOUSE HAS BEEN ORDERED

Belgian Relief Committee Has $1,900 Toward Fund of $2,685 Which is Needed.

TO SHELTER ORPHANS

Plainfielders Have Given Generously to Fund—Committee Buys Blankets and Will Get Beds as Well—Hope to Transport House Free.

A meeting of the Plainfield Belgian Relief was held at Mrs. F. W. Wallace's on Hillside avenue yesterday to decide on the various plans submitted for the portable house to go to Belgium for the hundred orphan children who are at La Panne with the queen.

The chairman explained that the reason the sum first thought necessary was not adequate was because it was found upon investigation that the first estimate submitted was for unassembled parts only. The estimates on houses in sections easy to be put together or taken apart in case of necessity are much higher and reaches a cost of $2,000 and upwards. After spending a fortnight considering eleven plans and discussing details with reports, Mrs. Wallace had chosen as most satisfactory the plans submitted by Hodgson & Co., of Boston, at almost cost price. These call for a house 150 ft. long by 22 ft. wide, with four outside doors, 54 windows and two ventilators in the roof, the material of the roof and sides to be red cedar, and the floor of hard pine, the hardware of the best. The price of the house unlined is $2,055; lined with double floors, $2,685. As the lining will make a great difference in the warmth the society voted to order the house lined at a cost of $2,685. The house is in sections of 6 ft. and

DEATH SUMMONS MRS. G. M. CONOVER

Former Plainfield Woman Passes Away at Her Home in Asbury Park.

Mrs. Josie Elliott VanArsdale-Conover, wife of the Rev. Garrett M. Conover, of Asbury Park, died at her home last night, after a long illness. Many friends in this city will recall Mrs. Conover, the eldest daughter of the late John K. VanArsdale, of Grove street, the borough, a happy student in the local schools, an active participant in church work, a loyal friend and a willing helper in every case of need.

Mrs. Conover was married in 1895. Her maturer years were marked by the faithful service of a pastor's wife, the devotion of a mother and active interest in many phases of Christian and philanthropic work. Her spiritual outlook rendered her life work effective and transformed the common-place into ideal beauty.

There survives a husband, who is pastor of the Dutch Reformed church in Asbury Park; two sons, Elliott and Earle, and a daughter, Jassamine. She is also survived by her mother, Mrs. John K. VanArsdale, of DeLacy avenue, and two sisters, Mrs. Clarence Brokaw, of DeLacy avenue, and Mrs. William T. Stokes, of Ridgewood. The funeral service will be held at her late home in Asbury Park on Thursday and another service will be held in the borough, at the home of her aunts, the Misses Elliott, 120 Grove street, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

PLAINFIELDERS BUY SOMERVILLE PROPERTY

Samuel Schwartz, of 916 West Front street, and Symon Hirsch, of West Fifth street and Watchung avenue, today closed the deal whereby they become the owners of the Alvah A. Clark business block on Main street, Somerville. The property, which is considered one of the most valuable in Somerville, has a frontage of 62 feet and is 300 feet deep. It is occupied with offices and stores. Mr. Schwartz and Mr. Hirsch purchased the property for investment purposes.

ONLY FIVE BRAVE STORM.

Only five borough citizens braved the storm last night to attend the meeting of the Local Option League in Grace M. E. church. Election of officers and important business that was to have been transacted was deferred until the next meeting. While the meeting was in session the lights went out, and the delegates had to find their way out in the dark

INCENDIARY FIRE DAMAGES HOMES

Four Buildings on Randolph Road Afire During Big Storm.

LOSS REACHES $2,500

Blaze Started in New Building of K. and G. Company—Firemen Smell and See Oil—Snow Saves Adjoining Property.

What was undoubtedly a fire of incendiary origin caused $2500 damage last night to four new buildings being erected at Arlington avenue and Randolph road by the K. and G. Company, of New York, of which Emanuel Kapelsohn, of West Front street, this city, is the New Jersey manager. The flames broke out on the second floor of the first structure at 1,094 Arlington avenue, which was all enclosed and would have been completed in two weeks. From here it spread to a twin building at 1,094B, thence to two others directly south, numbered 1,096A and 1,096B. The latter two houses, however, were burned only a trifle about the cornices.

The blaze was discovered at 9:30 by Emil Bays, who lives at 1,092 Arlington avenue, and who telephoned an alarm. The heavy storm was at its height, but despite unbroken drifts and gales of wind the fire apparatus was on the scene without delay. When the men started to fight the flames at 1,094A they found that they were practically all above the first floor, and when water was first thrown on the flooring, coal oil could be distinctly seen trickling away. The upper part of the first structure was destroyed and the partitions were burned away from the second building. Mr. Bays' home was in the danger zone, and a bay window was so close that it was badly scorched. The fact that it was covered with snow was all that kept it from starting a smart blaze in the other direction. Citizens who watched the firemen at work are loud in their praises declaring that it was little short of a miracle that a general conflagration was kept back. The buildings are all close together at this point, and the wind most of the time was blowing a gale. It was a few minutes before midnight when Chief Doane declared everything out and sent the apparatus home.

The K. and G. Company is an incorporated concern which does a general real estate and building business throughout the metropolitan district. An effort was made by a Daily Press reporter this morning to interview Mr. Kapelsohn, but he could not be located. His son spoke for him and said no idea could be advanced beyond that of incendiarism as to what started the fire. A stove was left burning on the ground floor of 1,094A, but, as stated before, the firemen found the flames all above that. The loss, Mr. Kapelsohn said, was partially covered by a policy which amounted only to the mortgage money spent on the buildings, as far as they had been advanced. The damaged structure, he said, would be completed as soon as all matters were adjusted.

SILVER WEDDING OF MR. AND MRS. DAHL

Plainfield Couple Entertained In Honor of Happy Event.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Dahl, of 770 Woodland avenue, entertained a company of fifty friends at their home, last night, in honor of the silver anniversary of their wedding. The guests were from New York, Chicago, Brooklyn, this city and other places. Fred Ludeking, of Elizabeth, furnished music for the occasion and the hours were spent in the enjoyment of dancing and other diversions. The celebrants received many handsome and useful presents to aid them in remembering the event in years to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Dahl were married in Brooklyn on December 13, 1890, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Erastus Pierson, pastor of the Brooklyn Congregational church. Mrs. Dahl was Miss Severine Emily Peterson. Both she and her husband are natives of Norway. The couple came to this city sixteen years ago and Mr. Dahl engaged in the contracting business, a pursuit in which he has been very successful. One of his most recent achievements was the completion of the addition to the Plainfield High School, which was given up by the original contracting firm through business reverses. Mr. and Mrs. Dahl have one son, Edwin Dahl, of Central street, who is also engaged in contract work.

ARMIES TO CARRY WAR INTO GREECE

Next Battle Will Be for Possession of Salonki, is Belief.

GERMANY GETS READY

Kaiser Sends Official Query to King Constantine—Allied Troops Are Throwing up Defences Around Greek Port.

Athens, Dec. 14.—Before beginning her attack on the Allied forces that have retreated into Greece, Germany has directed an official communication to King Constantine asking whether or not new facilities have been granted to the Allies. The query, as unofficially reported, intimates that protection of English and French troops on Greek soil will be considered a violation of the neutrality of the nation, and that unless the Kaiser is assured that the retreating armies will be disarmed his forces now mobilized on the Serbian and Albanian borders will begin at once their invasion of this country.

The confident belief is expressed here that the next contact of importance between the armies of the Central Powers and the Allies in the Balkan theatre will occur in the outskirts of Salonica. The Anglo-French forces have successfully ended their retirement from Serbia and are falling back to the sea without opposition, due to the thoroughness with which the work of destroying roads and railways was done. The handicap thus placed on a pursuit combined with the delicate situation in Greece, which may act to prevent the Bulgars crossing the frontier, have enabled the Allies to get clean away.

Montenegrins Are Defeated.

Berlin, Dec. 14 (wireless).—Montenegrin forces opposing the Austrian-Hungarian troops have been forced to retreat, the War Office announced today. Montenegrin prisoners recently taken by the Teutonic forces number 2,500.

Bulgars Cut Off French.

Sofia, Dec. 14 (via Berlin wireless).—The Bulgarian War Office announced today that the Bulgarian troops on the Vardar front have completely routed the Allied forces opposing them and cut the French troops off from their English support.

Italian Troops to Albania.

London, Dec. 14.—A despatch from Rome says it is believed here that Italy will disembark 80,000 troops on the Albanian coast in the near future.

MERLE C. LARRABEE DIES IN CALIFORNIA

Former Well Known Resident of Dunellen Passed Away at Stockton Yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse A. Dayton, of Essex street, this city, received word by telegraph this morning, of the death of their son-in-law, Merle C. Larrabee, which occurred suddenly sometime yesterday at Stockton, California. No details were given and what disposition is to be made of the body cannot be stated at this time.

Mr. Larrabee was thirty-two years old and went to California seven years ago, at that time being a resident of Dunellen. His father, W. L. Larrabee, conducted a hardware store at North and Washington avenues, Dunellen, and the son was associated with him in this business. The young man's home has been at Riverbank, California, and his father and mother are living there at the present time. Beside his parents, he is survived by his widow, who was Miss Carrie D. Dayton, and two sons, Clifford and Willard. There are also surviving a number of relatives in Plainfield, Dunellen and New Market, among them being a brother-in-law, Jesse A. Dayton, of Essex street, and an uncle, Charles Rogers, of New Market. Clark T. Rogers, who was one of New Market's leading residents many years and who is now located in Florida, is also an uncle of the deceased.

DEATH OF JOHN NOWAK.

John Nowak, who was recently employed as a laborer on the Woodbrook farms, died at Muhlenberg Hospital, yesterday afternoon. He was received at the institution Sunday night, having been brought from his home at South Plainfield, suffering from a complication of ailments. The authorities have been unable to locate any of his relatives and the body has been turned over to Undertaker W. G. Runyon, of Dunellen, pending a further investigation.

DR. NELSON SEEKS EXTRA COMPENSATION

Claim Raises a Dispute on Part of Piscataway Township Authorities.

Following a lengthy discussion on the subject at a joint meeting of the Boards of Health and Education of Piscataway township, it was finally decided to seek legal advice to determine whether Dr. W. J. Nelson is entitled to extra pay for work performed in connection with the recent outbreak of diphtheria in the township. Dr. Nelson is the school physician, but he claims that he is entitled to extra compensation in following up the various cases.

Dr. Nelson quoted the school law to the two boards, showing that he was right in his contention. Then the question arose as to which board should stand the expense if it should be proved that the physician was to receive extra pay. It was finally settled that the Board of Education should pay the bill if a decision is given in favor of Dr. Nelson.

John Nelson, son of Dr. Nelson, who is an inspector for the Board of Health, made an informal report in which he stated that the situation regarding diphtheria in the township is much improved, no new cases being reported.

JOHN H. HUFF'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD THURSDAY

Huff, who died at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, following a lingering illness with pulmonary trouble, will be held at the late home, No. 387 North avenue, at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon. Rev. D. W. C. Ramsey, pastor of the Methodist church, will officiate. Mr. Huff was born in Hunterdon county fifty-six years ago last June. When he was seventeen years old he moved to the borough with his parents, John J. and Mary A. Huff.

In the spring of '82, Mr. Huff married Miss Sarah E. Cheshire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cheshire, of Oyster Bay. The couple commenced their wedded life with Mr. Huff's parents, who still resided on the Apgar property. The present home was purchased from Mrs. Carrie Boice, of Plainfield, ten years ago.

Mr. Huff continued in the trucking business for twenty-three years and then sold out to his brother, George Huff, who is now proprietor of the Riverview Hotel at Raritan. Mr. Huff then secured a position in the freight department of the Central Railroad at Jersey City. He gave up his position with the railroad at the expiration of two years and started a grocery store in this borough. Mr. Huff remained in active charge of this business until his health forced him to give up business three years ago.

The young hostess received many nice presents in honor of the occasion.

LITTLE DAMAGE BY STORM.

Outside of a few wires and numerous tree branches brought down by the heavy clinging snow, no damage was done about town by the severe storm of yesterday. The street lights were out all night, but the house lights and telephones remained in service. The taxi companies did a rushing business this morning. OUR NATIVE THRUSHES.

We Have Eleven Species and All Are Friends of the Farmer.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

Altogether there are within the limits of the United States eleven species of thrushes, five of which are commonly known as robins and bluebirds. The other six include the Townsend solitaire, the wood, the veery, the gray cheek, the olive back and the hermit thrush.

The robins and bluebirds nest close to houses, and even the shiest of the other species are content with the seclusion of an acre or two of woodland or swamp. For this reason the thrushes are among the best known and most carefully protected of native American birds, and at times their numbers become so great that it is feared they will do much harm to crops and fruit. The investigations of the department of agriculture, however, show that there is very little ground for this fear. On the other hand, they destroy such a vast number of insects each year that it is probable that without them many crops would suffer serious damage.

Of all the thrushes the robin is probably the best known. It has been frequently accused of destroying fruits and berries, but it has now been ascertained that this only occurs in regions that are so thickly settled that there is no wild fruit upon which the robin may subsist. In some years the bird is a great pest in the olive orchards of California, but it is probable that they are driven to the orchards because of the scarcity of native berries at these times. Where a wild fruit is available the birds seem to prefer it to the cultivated varieties.

Like the robin, the bluebird is very domestic; but, unlike the robin, it does not prey upon any cultivated product or work any injury whatever to the fruit grower. During the fruit season, in fact, five-sixths of its food consists of insects. It seems, therefore, that the common practice of encouraging the bluebird to nest near houses by placing convenient boxes in which it may build its home is thoroughly justified.

The six other species of the thrush group also feed principally on insects and fruit, but a great portion of the fruit which they consume is wild berries. Domestic fruits are eaten so sparingly by these species that the damage done is quite negligible.

The bird known as the Townsend solitaire is noted chiefly for its song, which is said to be at times the finest of any of the thrush family. This thrush, however, confines itself almost entirely to the mountains and gorges of the far west. The wood thrush, on the other hand, is distributed over the eastern part of the United States and is a frequenter of open groves and bushy pastures. This thrush also is noted for its sweet song, especially in the early evening. It does not nest in gardens or orchards, however, and is seldom seen about farm buildings, so that many people who are familiar with its song would not know the bird by sight. The wood thrush consumes a number of very harmful insects such as the Colorado potato beetle and white grubs. The fruit which it eats it usually picks up from the ground instead of taking fresh from the trees. There is therefore no reason why the wood thrush should not be rigidly protected.

The other varieties also seem to eat little that is of value to farmers, while, on the other hand, they destroy multitudes of harmful insects each year.

A Galley o' Fun!

MR. TODD TELLS A STORY

"That reminds me," observed Mr. Todd reminiscently, "of the story about the bluejay."

"It's clouding up outside," broke in Mrs. Todd, gazing absently through the parted curtains of the front window.

"It was when I was a boy," continued Mr. Todd musingly. "In those days boys wore knee breeches and went barefooted——"

"I do hope it doesn't rain!" exclaimed Priscilla Todd, moving about uneasily. "I wanted to go to the park this afternoon."

"My, how we hated to wash our feet at night!" murmured Mr. Todd, with a fond smile.

"Dad," inquired Sammy Todd, "what is it about the bluejay?"

"I'm coming to that, son. You see, there was an old orchard out back of the house. My, such orchards we had in those days! Apples of all sorts and sizes—good apples, too! You never see such apples any more——"

"What's that got to do with the bluejay, dad?" bluntly asked Sammy.

"Don't be impatient, my boy. In this orchard there were a number of squirrels, which came over from a neighboring hickory grove. My, such squirrels as those were! Big, gray fellows, with long, bushy tails——"

Mrs. Todd yawned behind her hand, and Priscilla picked up a copy of Lugile.

"We used to hunt squirrels frequently, and father never would allow me to bring one home until I had shot it through the head——"

"But the bluejay, dad! What about that?"

"Did I say bluejay, son? What was I thinking of? It wasn't a bluejay at all, but a crow—a big black crow."

"It is starting to rain," said Mrs. Todd, moving again to the window.

"Crows in those days were mischievious fellows. No such crows nowadays. They used to come to our orchard in big flocks——"

"Isn't there any bluejays at all in this story, dad?"

"No, son, it was a crow——"

"Isn't it mean that it has to rain?" mourned Priscilla. "Charlie Bangs was coming over for me, too!"

"In the hickory grove I mentioned," pursued Mr. Todd, "there were many hickory nuts. My, such hickory nuts as there were in those days! Bushels and bushels of them, just going to waste!"

"Dad, I don't want to hear this story if there isn't a bluejay in it. I only wanted to know about the bluejay!"

"Well, perhaps it was a bluejay, after all, but it occurred to me it was a crow."

"There, my bread is burning!" wailed Mrs. Todd, rushing excitedly to the kitchen.

"Now, one day a big gray apple—I mean squirrel——"

"Oh, it's going to clear up" cried Priscilla happily. "There is the telephone ringing. It must be Charlie!" She bounded quickly away.

"This big, black hickory nut—crow, I should say—came over into the hickory grove with its mouth full of apples—— Wait, son, I am not starting this correctly—it came over into the orchard with its beak full of hickory nuts——"

"A squirrel hasn't got a beak dad!"

"Certainly not—I'm talking about the bluejay now!"

"You said it was a crow, dad."

"Well, I changed it because you wanted it to be a bluejay!" Mr. Todd got up from his chair and walked impatiently about.

"Hurry up, dad, I haven't got much time. Mother, where are my boots? I want to go out and wade."

Patiently and slowly Mr. Todd resewed his narrative.

"This big gray apple came over into the hickory orchard and found a black bluejay quarreling with a flock of squir——"

"Here are your boots, Sammy!" called Mrs. Todd.

"At this the crow—I mean the bluejay—became angry——"

"Oh, good! Now I can go wading!"

"All right, son," said Mr. Todd amiably as Sammy dashed away. "I can finish the story some other time. I don't know as I can remember just how it goes, anyway."

AT THE LODGE INITIATION.
Not all the "nuts" fall from old family trees.

The world would make little progress if everybody feared to be considered a crank.

ITALIAN IS KILLED BY MOVING SHOVEL

Laborer on Dunellen Sewer Plant Meets Unusual Death.

Pietro Chillem, thirty-five years old, an Italian laborer employed by the H. K. Corbin Company, contractors for the sanitary sewer in Dunellen, met with injuries at 11 o'clock this morning, which coused his death within half an hour. Chillem was at work in a trench on Bound Brook road, just west of Grove street, putting shoring timber in place. He failed to notice the approach of a traveling scoop shovel, operated on a cable running from a stationary engine. The shovel struck a plank in Chillem's hands and he was thrown against the mechanism, receiving a fractured skull.

Physicians were summoned but the injured man died before they could reach him. The body was removed to Runyon's undertaking establishment, in Dunellen, where it is being held pending the arrival of a brother, who resides in Albany, New York. The latter was telegraphed and will reach here tonight. The contracting firm knew nothing of Chillem's history beyond the facts stated or offered no explanation regarding responsibility for the accident.

"INVESTMENTS" SUBJECT OF INTERESTING TALK

A small audience attended the meeting of the civics department of the Monday Afternoon Club in the parish house of the Congregational church yesterday afternoon. Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert addressed the members and their friends on the subject of "Investments," a topic with which he is thoroughly familiar. Mr. Gilbert is the president of the Marke and Fulton Bank of New York.

Preceding the lecture, the members of the club held an informal discussion of the program for next year. The discussion will be continued next Monday afternoon, at which time the literature department of the club will hold a session. At that time Mrs. M. E. Perkins will read a Russia play to the attendants.

Military Pensions In Servia.

Servian soldiers enjoy a pension granted only to invalid cases. The ordinary veteran who does not suffer some injury which would render him invalid does not receive a pension, military service in Servia being compulsory. Invalid pensions in Servia are paid by the year—that is, each applicant who is granted a pension receives a certain sum each year. In case the soldier receives injuries which would render him partially invalid he receives only part of the yearly amount, most likely one-half, but in case of the soldier being totally invalid he gets the full amount.

One on the Stenographer.

The other day a little stenographer in a downtown office in Boston begged some workmen who were putting up a new telephone not to place it so high on the wall as they were doing.

"You see," she said, "I have to use it as much as any one, and I am so short that I can hardly reach it."

"Oh, well, miss," said the humorist in charge of the work, "you can raise your voice, can't you?"—Boston Transcript.

NEW Y. M. C. A. HOME SHOWN ON SCREEN

Architect Has Views of Proposed Structure for Members.

Enthusiasm and good fellowship prevailed at the annual dinner of the Business Men's class of the Young Men's Christian Association held last night in the Y. M. C. A. building, a larger number being present than on any previous occasion. The interest of those in attendance was centered on the new building, a large picture of the one proposed being on exhibition.

C. W. Spicer, president of the club, presided. Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh Day Baptist church, invoked the blessing. The first speaker was W. D. Murray, president of the Y. M. C. A., who referred to the recent success of the "Membership Campaign," stating that this was evidence of the desire on the part of the citizens of Plainfield to erect a building creditable to the city and also one that would answer the requirements of this increased membership. Mr. Murray again emphasized the fact that the fiftieth anniversary in 1917 would be celebrated in the new building, and also stated that some initial pledges toward this end had been made. Physical Director Meermans gave an interesting review of the work of the physical department so far as the business men were concerned, and referring to the game contests during the winter, explained the new basketball rules.

L. E. Jallade, architect of the new building, was introduced. He first stated how the matter of present Y. M. C. A. buildings had been brought to a science, and how the needs of the community were [illegible] analyzed, modern buildings being constructed with these needs in view. With the aid of the stereopticon Mr. Jallade then brought clearly to his audience the interior advantages and disadvantages of building construction. All present were impressed with the possibility of the new plant in Plainfield for the Y. M. C. A.

AMATEUR THESPIANS PRESENT A PLAYLET

"Snobson's Stag Party" Enjoyed by Large Audience in St. Joseph's Hall.

"Snobson's Stag Party," presented last night by the Young Men's Bible Class of St. Joseph's church, in the new hall, under the auspices of the Holy Name Society, proved a big hit, the youthful thespians receiving rounds of applause. Friends who braved the storm filled two-thirds of the seating capacity of the hall. Announcement was made today that the play will be repeated next Monday evening, and those holding tickets for the production last night will be admitted on December 20.

"Nicholas Snobson," impersonated by Harold Mead, took the leading role in the farce. The young man blended his own personality in that of the character of the old crank who gave the party in clever fashion. "Clarence Mountjoy," his gay and festive nephew, was played by Robert Pasch while William Seidel, as "Ebenezer Snowball," a mischievous "coon," proved a scream throughout the evening, his appearance at the most inopportune moments causing much laughter. As a guest from the Fatherland, Otto Kellar, in the role of "Julius Dinkelspiel," could not be improved upon, while Martin McDonough, as "Timothy Doolihan," one of the "Kings of Ireland," impersonated a son of Erin to perfection. Sunny Italy also had a representative on the boards in the person of "Fazio Spaghetti," played by Clarence Smith, an "Henry Hawkins," the "Henglishman," was interpreted by Alfred Seidel. Other members of the cast included Lester Daley, as "Jim Scrapper," a tough cent from the Fourth district; Rob Daley, as "Mrs. Hezekiah Chickenstealer," an unexpected guest from Thompson street; Reginald Washburn, as "Mrs. Michael Moriarty," from Shantytown, likewise an unexpected visitor; Jerry O'Conner, as "George Washington Levy," an honest Jew; Andrew McDonough, as "Alfonso Hamfat," a crushed tragedian, and Raymond Pasch as "Bill Ballotbox," a ward politician.

Much of the success of the production was due to the efforts of Miss Mary O'Connor, who had coached the young men for the past month. Paroubek's orchestra furnished the music during the evening. A song feature of the play was "Just a Little Bit of Heaven," sung by the entire cast.

Owing to the fact that electric lights went out in Debele's Hall, where a reception was to be held following the play, the attendants remained in the church hall. Lights went out several times during the evening, and candles had to be substituted for the ramainder of the time. Miss Irene Duchesne was chairman of the reception committee in charge of the affair. Following the second production next Monday the reception will be held in Debele's Hall.

ODDITIES IN JAPAN

Natives Have a Topsy Turvy Way of Doing Many Things.

BATHING IS A SACRED RITE.

And Whenever a Native Has a Moment to Spare He Resorts to the Tub, With Its Peculiar Code of Ethics. Houses Without Windows.

I just can't get used to how turned around, upside down, inside out, topsy turvy, things are in Japan. A Japanese carpenter draws the plane toward himself, and a blacksmith sits down to work.

A Japanese blacksmith never knows the joys of getting tickets to the circus, for he hasn't any place for the advance man to paste up his three sheets. The whole front of a Japanese blacksmith shop is open, with other buildings jammed up so close on each side that the circus man couldn't get a poster in.

A Japanese book begins on our last page and finishes on our first paragraph. And their sentences begin at the top of the page and read down, like long columns of figures. They wear white to funerals and judge poetry by the beauty of the handwriting.

Japanese houses haven't any chimneys, so you may see a whole plateau of houses with not a single curl of smoke as far as the eye can reach. The Japanese cooking is done outside the house in a little charcoal stove. They have no stoves to keep themselves warm, only little hibachis, gallon jars with charcoal in them covered with fine ashes. There isn't enough heat in one to singe a miller, and whenever they get too cold they take a warm bath.

Bathing is a sacred rite. Whenever they have a spare moment they run and take a bath. When business is dull they hurry to a public bathhouse and jump in. If they miss one train they take a bath while waiting for the next. They take hot baths—steaming, sizzling hot. And the strange thing is they don't do the bathing in a tub. They have little foot baths about the size of crocks that they use for washing themselves, and when they are thoroughly clean they climb into the tub.

If you should get into the tub first the proprietor would break into tears and tell you that you were bankrupting him, for the same water is used all evening, no difference how many guests the hotel has.

After soaking awhile they crawl out steaming all over, gently blot themselves, get into kimonos and sit around bare ankled. One would think that before the evening was over a fleet footed runner would have to be dispatched for medical assistance, but instead of that they never catch cold!

When I got here and was invited into a Japanese home I found that they hadn't any chairs. In fact, there isn't a stick of furniture a foot high in a Japanese house. You have to sit on the floor. A person of my build was never meant for sitting on the floor. When I get down on the floor and try to draw up to a Japanese table my feet are so in the way that I can't get up to where there is anything doing. The waitress has to walk around my feet to bring me the viands. By the time the meal is over she is pretty well fagged out.

A Japanese house hasn't a single window. And it's only the most stylish of houses that have a pane of glass. A person who has a pane of glass somewhere in his house sets the social pace in that neighborhood. Instead of glass they have paper pasted on sliding frames, and through the paper the light filters. Naturally one wonders how they keep the rain out. This is little trouble, for outside the paper walls are a series of wooden doors, which also slide back and forth.

When time comes to retire you look around for the bed, but there isn't one in sight. It is rolled up in a drawer, and the Japanese wouldn't know a bedstead from a quilting frame. Millions of people in Japan have grown to manhood, voted, paid taxes and gone to their reward without ever having clapped eyes on an American bedstead.

To make the bed ready the servant opens the drawer and unrolls the quilts on the floor, putting a tomato can looking thing under one end for a pillow. Then she shuts all the paper windows and pulls to all the wooden slides so that not a breath of air can get in and the bed is ready. Money in the palm wouldn't persuade a Japanese to sleep with the window open.

Their theory is that during the day the air becomes full of dust and germs so that if you keep your windows sealed during the night none of the germs can get in.—Homer Croy in Leslie's Weekly.

Queer Spelling.

Jack was looking over the dictionary and once he laughed aloud.

"Why are you laughing?" asked Dot. "Is your book interesting?"

"No, not interesting," answered Jack, "but amusing. It spells words so different from the way I spell them."—Sacramento Union.

Might Take the House.

"How do you like built in furniture?"

"First rate. In fact, it has one great advantage."

"And what is that?"

"Installment men can't come and move it out."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Whatever disgrace we have merited it is almost always in our power to reestablish our reputation.—La Rochefoucauld.

ORIENTAL LACQUER.

Japan Got the Art From China, Then Surpassed Her Tutor.

Lacquer has furnished a most varied material for one of the earliest industrial arts of China, and, though there are no authentic records of its origin nor of the steps of its early development, the process is already called an ancient one in a work published in 1387, in the first year of the Ming period, which proves that the art was known in as remote an epoch as the Sung dynasty. The culminating years of its development were reached in the reign of the Emperor Chien Lung (1736-95), who greatly encouraged its manufacture and had large quantities of lacquered objects made with which to furnish and decorate his palace. After his death the art seems to have declined in merit, and since that time little or nothing of any high artistic value in Chinese lacquer has been accomplished.

The Japanese first learned the process from China, but have since brought it to a point of perfection which surpasses the finest productions of the Chinese. In Japan, however, lacquer is applied solely to objects of comparatively small size, while in the Chinese empire it served to decorate screens and panels of tremendous dimensions.

Lacquer is divided into two classes—painted and carved lacquer. Both kinds are sometimes inlaid with mother-of-pearl, ivory, jade and various semi-precious stones.

It was in the early seventeenth century, when Holland and Portugal began their trade with the remote east, and particularly with China, that marvelous empire teeming with so many extraordinary artistic manifestations, that Europe first began to realize the new and vast field of decorative elements which were contained in and revealed to her artists by oriental art.—Henry Coleman May in Scribner's.

THE CURIOUS BANANA TREE.

A Plant That Will Practically Grow While You Wait.

If a good sized, healthy banana tree is cut off a few feet above the ground during the wet season the tree will not die, but nine times out of ten will send up a new shoot from the center of the trunk and will grow fast enough to make up for lost time, for within forty-eight hours it will rear waving green leaves triumphantly above the severed trunk.

The secret lies in the fact that the trunk of the banana tree is not hard and woody like other trees, but is really composed of undeveloped leaves wrapped tightly together in a spiral form. When the tree grows these rolled up leaves push upward and merely unroll. Thus no time is lost in forming buds and growing leaves as do ordinary trees. When the trunk is cut off it doesn't interfere with the growth of the leaves, because they are always pushing up from the center of the stalk. If you will roll a sheet of paper tightly and push against one end you will see exactly how the leaves are pushed up from the trunk of the banana tree, and if you cut the roll in two you will find that it doesn't prevent you from pushing out the center of the roll as before.

Although the banana tree repairs an injury so rapidly and well, the shoot formed from the cut stalk seldom bears fruit or flowers. As these shoots are taller and stronger than the original trees, however, they are much better adapted to withstand wind and storms, and the natives frequently cut the banana trees in order to force them to produce the strong, fruitless growth and to serve as windbreaks for other crops.—A. Hyatt Verrill in St. Nicholas.

A Creature From the Fire.

Aristotle believed that some creatures were capable of supporting life even though confined to the devouring element. He says: "In Cyprus, when the manufacturers of chalcitis (lime) burn it many days in the fire, a winged creature something larger than a great fly is seen emerging from the stone and leaping and walking about in the fire. These creatures perish immediately upon being removed from the furnace."

Saving the Innocent Ones.

Governor Stewart of Missouri once found eight convicts mowing the grass of the statehouse lawn. He questioned them. Seven of them said they were innocent men. The eighth said, "I stole er hawg, suh, an' it was a mos' 'stonishing good hawg!"

"You're pardoned!" Stewart thundered. "Leave the prison at once. We must preserve our innocent convicts from contamination."

Looking Backward.

Germany's secret police are supplied with "police eyeglasses." These have tiny concave mirrors on the side next the face, which may be extended sideways or folded back so as not to show and give the wearer, if he has normal sight, an image of what is going on directly behind him.

Financial Backing.

"What you must do, son, is to lay the foundation for a solid business success."

"That's my idea, dad. Now, first of all, I require sound financial backing."

"I get you, son. I'll provide car fare until you land a job."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Determined Dissatisfaction.

"Is this train on time?" asked the passenger.

"Yes," replied the conductor. "We'll get you in, to the minute."

"That's too bad. This car is a lot more comfortable than the place I'm going to."—Washington Star.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

LEHIGH INCREASES ITS YARD FACILITIES

While the Piscataway Township Committee Sleeps Company Lay New Tracks.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company is so rushed with business at the present time that they have found it necessary to establish what will be known as the East Yard, to be located adjoining the Lehigh Valley Coal Company's storage ground, where they have a very large tract of ground. In order to get the tracks upon this land it was necessary to cross the public road which runs alongside the Perth Amboy branch line. Anticipating delay if they applied to the Piscataway Township Committee to cross this highway, they took the matter in their own hands and while the members of the Committee were asleep Friday evening last, they had a gang of two hundred laborers and two steam shovels busily employed digging up the highway so that the new tracks which they were laying would be at the same grade as their main line. The township authorities did not discover this incident until late Saturday afternoon, when the railroad had its rails and ties laid to the opposite side of the highway.

The Township Committee as soon as they discovered what had happened held a conference with Supervisor Dorsey. Mr. Dorsey agreed to grade each side of the approaches to the highway, and also to macadamize the same to the satisfaction of the Committee. It is the intention of the Lehigh Valley to have fourteen sidings attached to the spur laid across the highway which will give them facilities for handling and storing twenty-five hundred cars in this yard.

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

Des Moines—Consolidated districts for school purposes in the rural districts of Iowa are fast coming into popularity. The success of the consolidated schools which were the pioneers in the movement and the State aid which has been given to help the schools along are the big factors which are influencing so many consolidations at the present time. For many years the idea of consolidated districts was rejected, but now it is in high favor. A prominent Iowan has given forty acres for a consolidated school at Beaman, Iowa, which has been accepted by an election in sixteen sections of the local territory. Last month Sea City, Ia., organized a consolidated school district.

Washington.—That education is making more progress in the Western than in the East, and that the Western States are doing more for their youth than the highly developed and thickly populated districts in the East, is the claim of Dr. Philander P. Claxton, chief or the U. S. Bureau of Education, who recently toured the Western States. He points to Oregon's system of giving school credits for industrial work done at home. This encouragement of thrift and vocation is pointed out by Dr. Claxton as a great development in education. The State or Washington, claims Dr. Claxton, leads the country in the number of homes for teachers, thus giving stability to the profession. Minnesota's work along similar lines comes in for his praise, also. Dr. Claxton says that California pays its teachers better than any other State. The average salary of public school teachers throughout the country is $490, and California pays an average of $950.

DOUBT PRISON HONOR SYSTEM.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 14.—The honor system in State prisons will come in for some criticism at the conference today of superintendents of State institutions, which will be held at the State House. J. C. Sanders, warden of the State penetntiary at Fort Madison, will read a paper on this subject. The fact that some of the prisoners have taken advantage of the confidence placed in them when made honor prisoners and escaped has led to considerable doubt as to the wisdom of the honor system. But the ideas of Thomas Mott Osborn and other prison reformers will be urged by local advocates of prison reform, and continuation and extension of the plan will be urged.

COTTON CONGRESS MEETS.

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 14.—The Southern Cotton Congress met here today, with big delegations present from each of the cotton States. The course of the 1915-1916 market will be discussed by leading planters and warehouse men, and steps will be taken to agree on permanent marketing conditions. The meeting is being held in connection with the Southern Commercial Congress, now in session here and taking up all phases of modern progress throughout the South.

PORTABLE HOUSE ORDERED

can be put up by unskilled labor. The money in hand is $1,893.82, but two men in New York have promised from $300 to $500 if it is needed, and the society feels confident that it can raise the remainder through the generosity of Plainfielders. Perhaps ten more men will help by giving $50 each. Already six gifts of fifty dollars each have been made and four gifts of one hundred dollars each. Beds will be named for these donors or for their children.

Three hundred and thirty-four dollars of the sum collected to date ($2,227.82) has been spent for 200 three-pound blankets, containing 92 per cent. of wool, and $165 may be spent on 100 beds. Through the generosity of the dealers both blankets and beds are furnished almost at cost.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Mellick and Mrs. Warren and the kindness of Professor Langdon, who lectured for the benefit of the fund, $67.50 was raised and Mrs. S. S. Carvalho and Mrs. Frederick Butler added $250 from the proceeds of the Cafe Concert.

If the people of Plainfield can be instrumental in making life possible for any of the children of the all-fated land of Belgium they will be not only alleviating the present misery of babies orphaned through no fault of their parents, but they will also be helping to build up again a race that was sadly depleted by the ravages of foreign invasion.

Horace G. Phillips, of Kensington avenue, who is greatly interested in the work of the Belgium relief, is now making arrangements whereby he hopes to be able to send the portable house by one of his line steamers sailing from Boston. If this plan is carried out there will be little or no expense attached to the transportation of the house.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

RESUME OF SCOUT ACTIVITIES

stalling city water at the Boy Scout Camp. I also submit herewith bill of C. Krausse covering the amount but making no charge for labor. I recommend a suitable resolution of thanks to Mr. Krausse for his contribution in this regard. The amount of the bill covers equipment supplied.

"I also submit herewith leases executed for the site of the scout camp, as prepared by the owner of the property through his attorneys in New York. I suggest that this lease be immediately executed by the secretary and president of the council.

"Your commissioner has this week closed for the evening of January 28 in a hall to be selected, possibly the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium, for the lecture by A. J. Van Brunt, the director of safety of the Public Service Corporation. It occurs to me that perhaps it will be possible to make this an opportunity for holding a mass meeting of all the scouts and their parents for the purpose of outlining to them the new policies of the scout movement with relation to the scout participation in the plan of national preparedness as enunciated by the honorary president of the National Boy Scout movement, Theodore Roosevelt.

"I herewith submit the resignations of William R. Kriney from the scoutmastership of Troop 10, of Trinity Reformed church, and of Scoutmaster John Richards, of Champion Troop 5, of the First Presbyterian church. This leaves a vacancy only in Troop 5, as William H. Olmsted has consented to serve as scoutmaster of Troop 10, his application being transmitted for your action herewith.

"I have the pleasure of reporting to you, and through you to the scoutmasters of this city, that through the generosity of Alex. Milne, of this council, and Joseph C. Allen, that provision for giving eighteen members of the Boy Scout movement $5 memberships to the Y. M. C. A. has been made. It will be necessary for the commissioner to apportion the membership among the boys of the various troops in the city.

"I submit herewith for your files the certificates of examination handed to John Leal by Scout Robert Vesey, seeking examination as first-class scout.

"There is also submitted herewith a circular letter from scout headquarters, giving the causes arising, which terminated in the withdrawal of Ernest Thompson Seton as chief scout of the Boy Scouts of America. This statement is submitted for your files and requires no action.

"My resignation as Boy Scout commissioner has been spread before you.

"I submit for the earnest consideration of this council the following recommendations:

"That A. V. Searing, Jr., now first deputy commissioner, be promoted to the rank of commissioner in recognition of the long and very faithful service and constructive work he has performed for the Boy Scout movement in this city since it was started. To Mr. Searing the principal credit for the success of the Boy Scout movement in this city belongs. He is equipped both temperamentally and vocationally to make the scout movement of still greater potentiality, and your honorable body would make no mistake in making this appointment.

"That Second Deputy Commissioner E. A. Sprowl be advanced to the rank of first deputy commissioner in recognition of his service covering a long period of time as scoutmaster and as deputy commissioner.

"That Third Deputy Commissioner F. E. Bach be advanced to the rank of second deputy commissioiner for faithful service to the scout cause.

"That A. Russell Bond, a member of the original Boy Scout council, and therefore the oldest member of the council, next to Dr. George T. Moore, secretary and treasurer, in point of scout service, be made third deputy commissioner. As the author of the 'Scientific American Boy' and numerous other works looking toward construction recreation among boys of this country, he is eminently qualified for the position.

"The Boy Scout movement is about to enter a new era of popularity among the boys of our nation and of general usefulness. The national scout motto, 'Be Prepared,' has taken on a new and far greater significance than it has ever had before, and it is for this reason that I have been constrained to make the recommendations as to the personnel of its future field officers.

"There is no suggestion of making the scout movement either anti-military nor pro-military. As far as firearms are concerned there is to be no change in the national policy. The purpose of the scout movement in the future is to so prepare the scouts of this country as to make them worthy servants of the nation as first aid helpers, as signal service men, as specialists upon resourcefulness in civic life as in woodcraft, so as to make them practical experts in certain lines of work that help to make for national defense quite as much as the ability to fire a gun straight. I believe that the strongest agency for good in this time of agitation for national preparedness is to teach the boys of this country how they can best serve their country, their State and their city as good citizens, but who, in a great national crisis, can be called upon to handle themselves and those non-combattants entrusted to their care just as the scouts of Belgium, Holland and other non-combattant countries of Europe have taken over and are handling almost entirely the women and children of those war-infested zones.

"I believe it is a trust placed upon the members of this and the thousands of other scout councils throughout the country to see that the boys of the country who wear with honor the kahki uniforms of the Boy Scouts of America are encouraged along the constructive lines now being marked out in New York.

"It is the purpose of the national headquarters to have the 300,000 odd Boy Scouts in this country to be so well acquainted with their own environment as to permit them to be called into the same kind of noble scout service that the Texas scouts were called upon to perform along the Mexican border. These boys knew the character, earth formation and general lay of the land over the vast ranges of that country as to make their services as patrols in time of border trouble almost equal to that of trained military men in the time of Daniel Boone.

"Conditions are different today, and what this country needs is men and boys thoroughly trained in woodcraft in line with defensive work, but especially so mentally trained as to give them a working elementary knowledge, at least, of some of the principles of practical citizenship.

"To this end I pledge my co-operation with your action along the lines of a bigger, broader and finer American citizenship."

SAVAGE VS. WEINERT AGAIN.

The bout between Jim Savage and Charlie Weinert will go on Thursday night at the Pioneer Sporting Club, New York. Gossip on the outcome of the fight is brisk and there are still a few in Newark and the Oranges who believe that Savage can shade the tow-headed boy. Weinert's promiscuous appearance in cabarets and theatres has lost him many a backer, especially since Savage is said to be training faithfully.

LADS TO PLAY LASSIES ON P. H. S. BASKETBALL COURT

Two more interesting games have been scheduled to be played at P. H. S. tomorrow night by the managers of the two Recreations teams of the city. A feature of the exhibitions will be a farce game between P. E. G. S. team and the "Imcos," the latter a quintet representing the office of the International Motor Car Company. The young men will be restricted to girls' rules, and will play with lines. Although this will be the initial game for the "Imcos," Catain Wigans promises the Pegs a good game.

The two teams will probably line up as follows: P. E. G. S.—Forwards Misses Helen and Ida Hummel; center, Miss Mildred McAulife; side center, Miss Ellen Doughty; guards, Misses Bessie Morris, Lucy Johnson and Ruth Voorhees.

"Imcos"—Forwards, E. VanReyn, L. Matlack; center, E. Jungck; guards, C. W. Wigand, captain, and C. Upton.

In the preliminary the Recreation boys' team will line up against an out-of-town quintet. Dancing will follow the contests.

READING ACADEMY APPEARS AT HIGH SCHOOL TOMORROW

Reading Academy, of Flemington, will appear on the Plainfield High School basketball court tomorrow afternoon to play the Red and Blue five. Reading is one of several new teams on the locals' schedule this year.

Coach Patch has had only two days to smooth over the rought spots brought out in the first game of the season played at Princeton last Friday, but the fellows should show an improvement over their first appearance. The same team that started the initial contest will probably take the floor tomorrow, with Coudray and Dunham at forwards, Snyder or Noonan at center, and Wheelan and Kyle at guards.

TEN PERFECT SCORES IN ENDURANCE RACE

As a result of the final meeting of the contest committee of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, held at the clubhouse last night, ten perfect scores were credited to contestants in the recent twenty-four-hour endurance contest run held under the club's auspices.

The meeting was in the nature of a hearing accorded the drivers and observers who took part in the run and was called in response to a petition that had been circulated among the entrants of cars. Less than a dozen turned out for the hearing.

At the meeting of the contest committee held last Friday afternoon it was decided to disregard entirely the observers' checking cards, in so far as they applied to the noting of the time of arrival of the respective cars at the unofficial checking stations, located at Ridgefield Park, Passaic, Branchville, Washington, Hammonton and Plainfield.

RADIN HITS 212, 256 AND 203 FOR EAGLES

Birds Lose Match at Columbus Club, Despite Their Anchor's Fine Work.

Harry Radin took to the Columbus Club alleys last night like a duck takes to water, and although he rolled 212, 256 and 203, for an average of 223.2, the Eagles lost two games to the Knights of Columbus.

The home team captured the rubber by polling 942. There is a report that "Side-Wheeler" Duffy totaled 230 in this game.

The Eagles won the first game by 65 pins, but were 52 points behind the home side's total of 882 in the second game. The last game went to the Columbians by a margin of 119 pins.

The Eagles were without the services of George Miller, one of their best men. George Howe, captain and anchor of the home team, had counts of 202 and 193.

Each team has now taken one series, and the final match will be rolled next week. The Eagles lead in games, having won all three tilts in the match on their own alleys last week.

LOCAL BOWLING LEAGUE CONFAB

Meeting of Teams to Enter City Circuit to Be Held in the Daily Press.

FIVE TEAMS LINED UP

Invitations Will be Extended to Park Club and Elks—Knights, Eagles, Tabs, Ramblers and Imperials Proposed Members.

A meeting of representatives of five local bowling teams expected to join the movement for a City Bowling League will be held next week in the offices of the Daily Press. So as to make the proposed organization as representative as possible, invitations to join the league will be extended to all the teams in the city and borough, including the Elks and the Park Club.

The teams already nominated are the fives representing Plainfield Aerie, Fraternal Order of Eagles; Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus; St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, the Imperials and the Ramblers. The Eagles, Knights and Tabs all have alleys in their clubhouse, while the Imperials represent Gates' Somerset street alleys. The Ramblers use the Eagles' drives for their home matches.

According to present plans the league will get under way the first week in January. Officers will be elected and the ball started rolling at next week's meeting. Even if no more teams enter, the teams as they are lined up at present should furnish enough social and bowling excitement to increase interest in games between local teams.

A league of Plainfield bowling teams was in force here five years ago, and prior to 1910 a tournament was run off almost every winter. Several attempts to reorganize the old league have been made since 1910, but the effort never materialized.

One of the chief objections in previous years was the scarcity of alleys, but since the last time the league was active, four fraternal organizations—the Elks, Knights of Columbus, Eagles and Tabs—have come into alleys of their own. Consequently, every team proposed as a member of the new circuit will have its own alleys, with the single exception of the Ramblers, which is composed of local newspaper employes.

Observations on Modern Tendencies

THERE never was in our country a stronger, better, underlying basic condition, or one more potential for good than that which exists today. There should be certainty and stability in our economic condition; instead there is uncertainty and doubt," said Mr. Theodore N. Vail in an address at a dinner given to the National Association of Railway Commissioners in San Francisco October 13, and reprinted in The Telephone Review, New York.

Mr. Vail then proceeded to state what in his opinion is the proper course to follow which will maintain such existing conditions as are good without putting the brakes upon progress. Basing his arguments on "actually existing conditions," and "past experience," he said:—

"Disputable speculations and assertions as to what is, or what will be—which appeal to human generosity or selfishness—are apt to be more controlling than any presentation of actualities which may be unpleasant and obstructive. Obstructive conditions must be overcome by effort, whereas hypothetical difficulties can be dissipated by a change in phrasing or by an effort of the imagination. Promise can always eclipse performance. Performance never will equal irresponsible promise or prediction. Everyone knows the fate of him who tells the first fish story."

Again, Mr. Vail said:

It is easy to say, but impossible to prove, what "would have happened." Time settles definite prophetic statements, but "might-have-beens" can never be determined.

All improvements in our social relations must be based upon improvement of environment and habit of the human mind, an evolution through systematic and practical education from existing conditions.

Speaking of the evolution which has taken place within a recent period, no longer than one man's lifetime, Mr. Vail said:

The changes in habits, customs, and conventions of our social organization have been greater in that "recent man's" life than in any previous thousand years.

Everything or nearly everything which contributed to these new, if not better conditions, was introduced as luxury, soon became convenience and almost imperceptibly became necessity. That which contributed most largely towards these changes, and without which they would be impossible, is "intercommunication" and "transportation." * * * *

The regrettable trouble, the greatest danger of all, is the lack of a proper recognition of the close interdependent relations between the prosperity of these utilities and the prosperity of the public. * * * *

The whole public must be convinced that nothing gained at the expense of others can be permanently beneficial; that no advantage to individuals or groups of individuals gained by combination of interests against other individuals can be permanently beneficial; that waste and extravagance in public expenditure and administration cause higher taxes than all the graft of years. Our lawmakers instead of seeking new ways for taxation should curb reckless extravagance in public expenditure. Owners, proprietors, and corporations may pay the tax, but every tax comes from the ultimate consumer. The tax is as much a part of the cost of the production as are wages, and between the raw material and the ultimate consumer come all costs. Profit is the incentive to production; without profit progressive industry would cease, but any unnecessary expenditure or tax is a brake on progress and a burden upon prosperity. Taxes, high cost of material, waste, illness, careless work, are included in the rent of the tenement.

The rent is paid by the tenant.

Following is a portion of Mr. Vail's references to the Telephone

Telephone.

The broadening extension and improvement of our industrial, commercial, and utility enterprises; their application, availability, and adaptability to the wants and necessities of humanity, are due in a very large sense to the introduction of scientific and technical methods into their conception, construction, and operation.

The great profits which have been made in many industrial enterprises have not been extorted, as many believe, from the public through force of their necessities, but by giving to the public more or better at the same or less price, and by more and better being produced by the same or less physical effort on the part of labor. Some of the greatest benefits have been through the elimination or utilization of waste, or the conservation of energy. * * *

In the development of the telephone, at the very start, the investigation, research, and experimental department was established. * * * *

Most if not all of the innovations in the telephone instrumentalities were first tried out, if not evolved, by that staff. This largely accounts for the present position of the Bell System and for whatever position it may occupy in the future. The staff includes a greater number of scientific and technical and mechanical experts of the higher grade than can be found in any university or industrial enterprise in the world. It enables the Bell System to keep in advance of the art, protects the public from exactions of outside inventors, and gives every associated company in the system expert advice and expert assistance in the operation and improvement of the existing system, and in the projection of future development. * * * *

This work could not be carried on by any disassociated, unrelated system of local exchanges; no limited system could give the universal service of the Bell System, of which every subscriber is a center from which conversation is possible to the extreme limits of the country. Nor is any like work being carried on by any government owned and operated telephone system in the world. All the world depends on the Bell for the latest and the best. Many novel projects are advanced by inventors or promoters, some legitimate, some for promotion purposes, but without any exception the only things in the way of intercommunication by conversation which stand the test of time are those which have been either initiated inside or adopted and developed in the Bell System. The work is carried on quietly; and what is done or being done is not announced by promise or prophecy, but by introduction to public use. * * * *

The problem commenced with the "smallest possible talking machine," a telephone transmitter connected with a receiver, such as Bell and Watson used in that first historic conversation. This small machine has expanded into one of many millions of receivers and transmitters, connected by millions of miles of wire, equipped with thousands of pieces of auxiliary apparatus. The present problem has to do with all of this. The problem of transcontinental talk could not be solved over a local circuit, nor a circuit reaching half way; it had to be solved over an equivalent circuit connected with the system. The solution of talking through underground circuits could only be solved by actual underground circuits. The solution of the problem of electrical high-tension interference could only be solved after high-tension circuits were in operation and their effect upon the system observed. The problem as to giving the most efficient local and long distance service to hundreds of thousands of subscribers had to be solved by observation and deduction on a system which had the lines and the subscribers. In other words, the telephone service of today has been an evolution, step by step, some short, none very long, from the original "small machine"—i. e., two telephones and a connecting wire between adjacent rooms—to the existing nation-wide universal "talking machine" of the Bell System. The instruments which Bell and Watson used with difficulty between two rooms in the same building can now be used, because of the improvements to the "machine," to talk across the continent. Used under the same conditions as then existed, there would be the same limitations in talking. * * *

If there were no Bell System—only disassociated individual companies or groups of companies, no line over a few hundred miles long would have been built, or if built it could not be operated as satisfactorily as under the present conditions. Efficient commercial telephone operation can only be maintained when every operator on the line and the system connected with it is under one control. For long distance and the wireless, the cost of experimentation, construction, and loss before self-sustaining would be beyond the possibility of any one of the disassociated companies.

The development of the exchange service has been by the same process. As each hundred miles in the distance presents new problems, so does the adding of each hundred subscribers to a local exchange. When the development reaches city and suburban exchanges, with instantaneous connection and connection with adjacent exchange districts, the problems become very complicated.

When in July, 1914, after the talk to San Francisco, the chief engineer said that wireless conversation was possible, authority was given him to go ahead; and for some months conversations were carried on between more or less distant temporary low-power wireless stations. At last, believing that the art was at least as far advanced as was the art of telephony at the World's Fair in 1876 and further development depended on the use of the best wireless towers, we approached the Navy Department and immediately their great wireless stations were placed at our disposal. The wireless experts of the Navy became as much interested in the problem as were those of the telephone company. What was accomplished you know. What will be accomplished is unknown. Little by little, step by step, development is probable until it can be utilized at least as a supplement to the great Bell System. * * * *

What the development of the telephone has emphasized is this fact, that the problems which have been solved could never have been by any system of disassociated, unrelated local telephone companies. No one company would have had the "machine" to develop, and for that reason no such problems. The magnitude and the cost and the advance work necessary would have been beyond any local system.

Given the idea and the knowledge and the brains, development in any line of art, science, or industry is largely a question of money, and as the world has seen from thousands of examples, some large and some of small importance, to spend money on an "idea" requires initiative, enterprise, courage, and the stimulus of reward.

The reward of the Bell System is protection to its shareholders through producing something better and of more value to the public at a price within the reach of all, and through the policy of making it so useful that no one can do without it.

CONTROL AND REGULATION VS GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

There are theoretically two ways of protecting the public in their assumed or real rights, so far as public service enterprises are concerned: First, "Government Ownership"; second, "Control and Regulation".

Government Ownership.

The most earnest advocates of government ownership will admit that it carries with it and cannot be divorced from many very undesirable conditions.

The most disturbing feature, and the most impossible of control, is protection from the government itself. It would be an unregulated monopoly with unrestricted, unlimited powers serving individuals for their private advantage and benefit at the cost of the general revenue.

Government ownership would introduce beyond a possibility of prevention partisan and political control into enterprises absolutely non-political and which should have a purely business management. Whatever public demand there is for government ownership is not because of faith in the efficiency of the government but because of a fear that in some unknown, mysterious way, individual interests may be affected by private enterprise.

All will concede that if but a part of the mismanagement and waste revealed by investigations of government operation are true, the public could not be satisfactorily served by any management under our form of government. * * * *

Is within the power of everyone by personal observation to determine the efficiency of publicly managed operations. * * * *

Is Our Form of Government Adapted to Operation and Management of Utilities?

Our government is a representative democracy. The policy which determines the action of the administration is settled for the time being, and the leaders selected, by a plurality of those who are interested enough to vote, which seldom if ever constitutes a majority of all. * * * *

Whichever party, whichever political policy temporarily comes in, with it comes a radical change in the departmental policy and a change in all the responsible heads of the departments and all the responsible subordinates. There is much the same change in the departmental and bureau chiefs, if the same political party is continued in power.

The heads of departments are not selected on account of their experience or knowledge of the business which they are called upon to direct, nor necessarily with that of any similar or any other business. To point out deficiencies and promise reforms becomes a necessity to every candidate for office. The controversial and exceedingly exciting political campaigns are made up chiefly of accusations, if not of absolute crookedness at least of the grossest incompetence of those in office, and of reckless promises of all sorts by those who want to get in. These campaigns are the cause of irreparable damage, for much that is alleged though never proved is believed by the public.

If but a small part of these alleged evils did exist an absolute cleaning out of all and the prosecution of many would be a positive duty, for such frauds or such corruption as are alleged cannot exist at the head without the knowledge of all, and the participation of many. The tenure of office is too brief to reform any deep-seated irregularities. To perform the duties of his office is enough for any official even if he has had the necessary training. When to that is added the usual political activity, the most capable must fall short, even with the best intentions. * * *

Without an operating organization absolutely divorced from and independent of our political organization there would be demoralization and disaster should any of the utilities be taken over by our government.

The question is one of great importance. Nothing should be attempted without the most thorough and pains taking investigation controlled by a desire to make the "finding" consistent with the actualities, and not to make the "actualities" fit preconceived ideas or desires. * * *

Control and Regulation.

In the early history of our civilization, in a dispute between arbitrary power on the one hand and the rights of the people on the other hand, trial by one's peers was instituted. The powers of the "Jury of Peers" were to ascertain and determine the facts in all cases of dispute.

This institution has served well and long in our history, and nothing has appeared which either is or promises to be as satisfactory.

There are differences as to statements of fact between the public and the public utility enterprises, particularly those of transportation.

There are in most of the states and in the nation commissions of control and regulation, which are in effect juries, to determine the dispute. What better way can or could be devised for the settlement of all these questions? This is the practical way. * * * *

These commissions have to protect the "individual member" of the pub-

Look for this sign in the window. You are dealing with a reliable merchant where you see this sign.

It is inexplicable why some people think they must go out of town to shop during the holiday season. There are myriads of reasons why you should do your Christmas shopping at home. Here are some powerful ones:

You know with whom you are dealing.

If you are not suited you can make a ready exchange.

You will save time, car fare and shoe leather.

And you can buy just as cheaply, if not cheaper.

If you did your Christmas shopping out of town in former years don't make another mistake this year.

A Purified Mexico

The bullfight and the cocking main
Henceforth shall not be seen again,
Or like displays.
And gambling vain no more shall reign
In Mexico, which grows more sane,
Carranza says.

Our puritans are all aglow
With praise for such a sterling blow
Which flouts delays.
Most nations know reform is slow,
But 'tis not so in Mexico,
Carranza says.

The cynic's not believing much
In any ruler's magic touch
To end bad ways.
Yet strong his clutch; his power is such
That sports may find themselves "in Dutch,"
Carranza says.

$1,000,000 PIRATE GOLD IS FOUND OFF PANAMA COAST.

Quality of Treasure That Expedition Discovered Is of the Highest.

Pieces of eight, Spanish doubloons, and other evidences of the depredations of the pirates of a century ago were brought to New York in a rare old treasure chest by R. C. Lewis from Central America.

The booty, perhaps the first real pirate's treasure to reach New York, is part of a $1,000,000 find unearthed by an expedition. Under the leadership of Captain Sackville White the party has been exploring and digging along the coast of the gulf of Darien the last few years.

The samples Mr. Lewis brought are worth $1,000, according to his declaration before custom inspectors. They will be appraised in a few days by a numismatist. Meanwhile Captain Sackville White's party continues digging.

"Not only coins were found," said Mr. Lewis, "but there was a vast quantity of gold bracelets, wonderfully inlaid gold breastplates, other ornaments of gold and 110 pearls of rainbow coloring worth a king's ransom.

"The news of the find has plunged the people of Central America into a fever of excitement. They are organizing treasure hunt parties by the score. Even American tourists are breaking their cruises in the hope of gaining some of the booty Sir Henry Morgan, Captain Kidd, Pizzaro and other old pirates buried years ago."

Mr. Lewis also brought cutlasses and flintlocks of ancient origin.

LYNCHING FOLLOWS A POEM.

Girl Prayed Murderer Might Know "Pain of Summons Without Warning."

The prayer expressed in a poem published in the Columbian, a Columbia (Miss.) newspaper, by Miss Fannie Campbell, sixteen years old, that Jack Hughes, the slayer of Larue Halloway, might "know the pain of summons without warning" was followed within forty-eight hours by the lynching of Hughes.

The poem was read on street corners prior to the lynching. The stanza in which Miss Campbell prayed for the sudden death of Hughes reads:

And he who severed the golden chain,
Who wrapped a home in mourning,
May God will that he know the pain
Of summons without warning.

Miss Campbell knew Halloway only slightly. He was killed by Hughes, and witnesses declared it was cold blooded murder. A mob stormed the jail, took Hughes out and lynched him.

HOLIDAY STOCKS

In the Plainfield Stores were never larger, or offered a wider range to select from than is the case this year. The progressive merchants of the city are announcing their offerings in the advertising columns of the

PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS

"Try Plainfield First" is the slogan that is being urged upon all the residents here. If you cannot find what you want in a local store, then there is an excuse for trading out of town, but until you have tried to make your purchases here, you are not properly supporting your home tradespeople—the ones who are ready to serve you at all times and promptly.

Read the advertisements—make them your shopping guide. Buy before the "last minute" rush, and "Try Plainfield First."

MR. MERCHANT—If you are not already an advertiser in the Daily Press, phone 1300, and we'll send a representative to see you and talk the matter over.

You May Find a Worker Trained and Fit to do Your Work.

A worker whose salary you will voluntarily raise in a short time!

"Getting along" with half-competent help, in home, office, store or factory, is a poor plan—a poor business policy.

The quest for the Competent Worker is important enough to justify a real campaign of classified advertising in the Plainfield Daily Press—although it does not often require a very long campaign.

—Well, that is, almost everybody.

Of course, we except the man who uses smoked glasses to take all the brightness out of life—

And the old codger who believes that the theatres are very, very wicked—

And the gentleman who buttons his collar in the back because he hates to look forward—

And his neighbor who thinks railroad trains and newspapers should stop on Sunday.

DRINK HOT TEA FOR A BAD COLD

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Adv.

WOMEN AS LEADERS IN EDUCATION WORK

Of the 12,000 Administrative Positions Listed, 2,500 Are Held by Fair Sex.

Of the 12,000 conspicuous positions, largely of an administrative character, listed in the 1915-16 Educational Directory, just issued by the Interior Department through its Bureau of Education, 2,500 are held by women. There are women who are college presidents, State superintendents of public instruction, county superintendents, directors of industrial training, heads of departments of education in colleges and universities directors of schools for afflicted and exceptional children, and librarians.

Twenty-four of the 622 colleges and universities listed in the directory are presided over by women. Of the nearly 3,000 county superintendents in the country, 508 are women. The tendency to fill this position with women is almost wholly confined to the West. One State, Montana, has not one man as county superintendent. Wyoming has only two. Kentucky is the only Southern State that utilizes women in this office; the State has 26 women as county superintendents. On the other hand, there are only 26 women city superintendents in a total of over 2,000.

Seventy institutions for the blind are listed in the directory. Of these fifteen are directed by women. Of the seventy-five State schools for the deaf, ten are under the leadership of women; and of the twenty-two private institutions of the same character, sixteen have women superintendents. Of the thirty-one private institutions for the feeble-minded twenty are under supervision of women.

Fourteen out of eighty-six directors of industrial schools are women, and forty-eight of the 200 schools of art are in charge of women. Women have almost a monopoly of library positions. Out of 1,300 public and society libraries given in the directory women supervise 1,075.

The Government Bureau of Education itself exemplifies the call for women in executive educational positions—eleven of the thirty-three officials listed in the directory are women.

HUNDRED CASES OF MEASLES, 200 PUPILS OUT OF SCHOOL

Metuchen, Dec. 14.—With 100 children ill and 200 more kept from school, the outbreak of measles which has swept over this town since October is believed to be at its height. Dr. Lansing Y. Lippincott, medical inspector of the schools, and members of the Board of Health look for complete abatement of the disease within two weeks.

The first came to the attention of the Health Board shortly after the return of a Metuchen family, which had been visiting in the Bronx. The children became ill, and soon others in the neighborhood were affected. None of the schools was closed, however, as Dr. Lippincott ruled that measles cannot be carried by a person who isn't ill from the disease. All of the cases have been mild.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

With the low prices and a show such as has been arranged for the first half of this week, Proctor's Theatre should be filled to its capacity daily. The variety and excellence of the program is unquestioned. There is the William Fox feature, "The Galley Slave," starring Theda Bara, the famous emotional star of filmdom who made the first triumph in "A Fool There Was," and there is the Triangle Plays "Old Heidelberg," starring Dorothy Gish, and the Keystone comedy, starring the famous Roscoe Arbuckle in "Fickle Fatty's Fall." Among the vaudeville features are "The Edouards," in a decided novelty, presenting their well-known success, "Shadowgraph Frolics," with some genuine comedy interpolated. The Cullen Boys will be seen in a clever dancing skit, the Three Classy Girls will entertain in a charming musical offering, and Ruth Moore will be heard in several vocal solos.

The last half of the week will bring another vaudeville-photoplay program, including the Triangle features, "The Coward" and "The Favorite Fool," starring Eddie Foy and Frank Keenan. The vaudeville will include a variety of good things, and the low prices will continue, making it possilbe for the patrons to get Christmas bargains at Proctor's in the amusement line that have never been heard of in this city before. "Neal of the Navy" will be a feature Friday, and Wednesday will be the big bazaar, when the handsome gifts will be given to patrons, and Saturday afternoon as usual the kiddies will get their Christmas present.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Conducted by THE W. C. T. U.

"I have been forced to the conclusion that the only effective way to deal with the liquor question is by and through the action of the national government," is the declaration of U. S. Senator Borah, of Idaho, in reply to an inquiry from the State superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League recently. "I say I have been forced to this conclusion because I am, on general principles, very much opposed to the national government taking over any work which can be done by and through and with the States.

"The liquor interests have nationalized the question, and experience shows that there can be no really effective method of treating it except from a national standpoint. The large distilleries and manufactories of intoxicating liquors supply every State in the Union from some particular manufacturing plant, so that it becomes in every sense a matter of interstate concern and a matter which can be effectually controlled and regulated through the national government, which alone can deal with interstate matters.

"If I had felt that it could be dealt with by the States alone I would have much preferred to see it dealt with in that way. But I feel sure that it has passed beyond the control of the States and has become a national question in every sense, economically commercially and politically.

"For these reasons, as a member of the sub-committee of the judiciary, I voted to report favorably the proposed amendment to the national Constitution which was pending before Congress during the last session. Having made up my mind to the effect that I have, I shall, of course, continue to vote that way, as I never change my vote until I change my mind."

The citizens of the "Hub of the Universe" are to vote on the liquor question today. Major Dan Morgan Smith, formerly attorney for the Model License League, and now field secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, is leading the spirited campaign being conducted in the classic city, and is awakening its conservative citizens to a sense of their responsibility in ridding it of the liquor traffic. The fact that Governor Walsh was defeated at the recent election by the liquor interests because he stated that he would sign the liquor transportation bill is being used as one of the arguments in favor of the city's freeing itself from the political tyranny of the liquor tribe.

To the question, "What will become of the large army of workmen employed by the wet goods business?" Major Smith is answering, "Suppose the thousand or so barkeepers and their wives should be compelled to dig for a living under no-license, does that afford any economic reason why Boston should not vote itself dry. The loss of revenue to Boston would be trivial. Do the license fees amount to a million dollars? For every dollar Boston receives that ways, it pays out seven in increased expenses. Everyone knows this except Mayor Curley, the liquor traffic and the man who is afraid of his tax rate. Distribute this lost million in taxes, and it would add the terrible added burden of sixty cents to each citizen—sixty cents contrasted with the gains in decency, sobriety and comfort!"

The annual banquet of the Philadelphia Real Estate Board, to be held next January, will be teetotally dry. That is to say, all alcoholic beverages will be tabooed, but grape juice, orangeade and other non-alcoholic drinks will flow freely.

A resolution to that effect was passed by members of the association says the North American. This is the first time in the history of the Board that this step has been taken and men of national prominence are always present.

The sale of intoxicating liquor upon all Denver and Rio Grande Railroad trains will cease after January 1, 1916, when Colorado becomes dry territory. This is the statement given to the press by N. W. McAbee, superintendent of the dining car service of the railroad. The order will apply also to trains operating in Utah and New Mexico, which are not prohibition States. It is said that other railroads with Colorado connections are contemplating abandoning the sale of all liquor after January 1.

XMAS SPIRIT HITS BOARD.

Walla Walla, Wash., Dec. 14.—The State Prison Board is meeting here today, instead of in January, in order that meritorious cases in which prisoners have served their minimum sentences may be considered before Christmas and those liberated who have conducted themselves in proper manner. The Board will probably recommend some cases to Governor Lister for Christmas pardons.

THE MORAL PRINTERS.

A new periodical was planned by the prisoners of the Blackwell's Island penitentiary in New York, but it cannot be issued. The first number is written, but there aren't any printers to print it. The few printers in captivity are needed on departmental work, and they are shorthanded at that.

No longer, it would seem, do printers as a class drink deep and run into collision with the authorities. The work, they take their pay envelopes hor intact, they are quiet and law-abiding. Penitentiary periodicals cry for them in vain.

One by one these traditions of the carousing males pass into oblivion. No railroad man can take a drop if he wants to keep his job. Iron workers support Y. M. C. A's. Lumberjacks subscribe to magazines.

Is it that the world is growing better? Or is it that the workers' wives, moved by an advancing feminism, are holding their husbands to a sterner morality by the slogan, "No pay, no pie!"

Whatever the cause may be, welcome the glous printer.

EFFECTIVE PROTESTS.

The most effective diplomatic messages our government has sent to Europe since this miserable business began are, as an exchange says:

Rustem Bey.
Dr. Dernburg.
Dr. Dumba.
Capt. Boy-Ed.
Capt. von Papen.

And judging from present appearances, it will soon be necessary to send more tokens of the same sort to the European governments that have been meddling with our affairs and flouting our sovereign rights.

Juan A. Babcock has been put forward as a candidate for the presidency of the City Council for 1916. The other contestant is Francis J. Blatz. Either man is splendidly fitted for the office, and would be a credit to the city. There is some opposition from local business men to having commuters for Mayor and the president of the Council, as with other things equal they believe that one of them should be held by a man who is always in town. One thing is sure, however, and that is that with either of the two mentioned as the presiding officer, the affairs of the city fathers will be conducted as ably as they ever have been.

The decision of the Public Service Corporation to change the name of the "Main Line" to "Union" beginning January first marks another development of that great trolley system. When the line was first started, the trip from Newark to Bound Brook was the longest run made, and by connections opened up all of the State south of here to Trenton and Philadelphia. Now the company has a fast line running direct from Newark to Trenton, and the title "Main Line" for a system serving only Union county is a misnomer.

So reports from Washington tell us that our own "Jim" Martine is not to be opposed for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator. Evidently that trip to Washington which Governor Fielder and a few other Democratic lights recently took convinced the administration that the Democracy would have trouble finding any other candidate more sure of the nomination so long as the Senator kept his hat in the ring."

A company has been incorporated in Delaware to manufacture a gun to be operated by electricity, which will use no powder and make no noise. If it ever comes into general use what will the writers of blood and thunder melodramas do if they wish to be up to date??

Even peace delegations can have their troubles. Eight members of Henry Ford's party have declined to endorse a resolution protesting against preparedness by this country; so that all is not "peace and harmony" even on the peace ship.

The express companies report that they are doing the greatest business in their history. Which is interesting, in view of their own well remembered admission that they were all ruined forever by the government's parcel post.

No, gentle reader, that headline, "Territory extended to take in North Plainfield" had no reference to consolidation of the city and borough. It merely referred to the jurisdiction of the local S. P. C. A.

Somehow or other Senator Martine, instead of proving to be a "joke," has turned out to be a mighty serious proposition for the leaders of the Democracy in New Jersey.

By the way, what has happened to that survey that was to be made of city affairs some time during 1915? Have to get a move on to start this year.

The one kind of winter weather that nobody likes—slush.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Vaudeville will be resumed at the Plainfield Theatre this afternoon, following the one-day cessation due to the presentation of May Robson yesterday. The new bill for tomorrow includes, Mystifying Lindemour and Co., in a sensational illusion and legerdemain offering; the Two Brownies, in an absolutely original comedy act; Ethel Ponce and Company, versatile singers and dancers; Edward Ralston and Company, presenting Victor Hugo's masterpiece playlet, "Justice;" Anthony and Maguire, nifty comedians, and Charles Ford and Company, presenting comedy variety. The Pathe semi-weekly will also be shown today.

The initial "Oriental Night" introduced last Tuesday proved such a great success that Manager Shannon has arranged for a similar affair tonight. It will be in charge of an Oriental native, and the patrons will receive valuable gifts imported from the Far East. These include tapestries, rugs, laces and other useful articles.

Everyone of the Plainfield Theatre's programs includes photo-plays direct from the leading agencies. The greatest comedy serial film ever produced, Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," is shown every Thursday and the Pathe semi-weekly every Monday and Friday. The "Country Store" is held every Friday night, at which time handsome presents are given away.

BANQUET AT CAPITAL.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The Kentucky State Association of this city will tonight banquet the new United States Senator, J. C. W. Beckham, and the other members of the Kentucky delegation in Congress. Former Senator C. S. Blackburn will be toastmaster. It will be a big night for Kentuckians and former residents of the Blue Grass State.

Go See Her, Boy!

If you've a mother, living anywhere
Within your reach, boy, spend your Christmas there!
Go even if you have to stretch a point!
With blessings that brief visit will anoint
Her brow and yours. Go home for Christmas, lad,
And make your only mother mighty glad.

If you've a mother living! Boy, some time
You'll be, like the poor author of this rhyme,
Without a mother you can go and see.
And then how downright sorry you will be Whenever you remember that you might
Have visited her more—yes, boy, that's right!

I know, for I've a cargo of regret
To carry 'round, with all earth's other fret,
Because—well, boy, I'll stop my tale of woe
If you'll just promise that you'll pack and go
To see YOUR mother at the Christmas tide.
Twill make her glad as when she was a bride!

Mrs. Bonedd had just returned from a visit to the city, and was telling everybody about it.

"My, it's awful the way everybody tries t' do you, in town! Now at that hotel where I staid at, it said on the bills of fare, 'meals served in room, extra.' I wasn't very well suited with th' meals in th' dining-room, so one night I ordered one sent to my room. An' do you believe it, even that one wasn't anything extry! An' they went an' charged me more for it, when I wenta settle up!"

Gotch's Inconsistency

Frank Gotch, the great toehold wrestler, has secured a large foothold as a landowner in his native state of Iowa. While "back to the soil" seems to be Frankie's motto, it is not because any of his opponents have ever been able to put it there—at least both shoulders at a time. In fact, it is because nobody could put his back there, that he is able to go back with such a goodly acreage. In other words, his toe-pulling has caused him to be well-heeled.

Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Ubiquitous Pneumococcus

HERE is a title that may be fairly dubbed a "jaw breaker," but with a little practise you can say it right off just like a doctor: thus, the You-bick-wit'-us Numo-cock-us—or in words of one syllable, The All-round "Cold" Microbe.

The pneumococcus, commonly know as the pneumonia germ, is an all-round pest in a double sense. Practically every one harbors a growth of pneumococci in the mouth cavity all the year round, at least one out of every five individuals being "carriers" of real, business-like, virulent specimens capable of starting something most any time. The other four individuals seem to have tamed their pneumococci somewhat, so that the germs are comparatively harmless or incapable of inflicting much damage on the host or his associates.

Not only is the pneumococcus everywhere looking for an opening, but he is a versatile "bug" into the bargain. On short notice he can prepare himself to fill nearly any rôle for which a self-respecting microbe may be cast. For instance, while his favorite tragedy is pneumonia, he is equally at home in such popular productions as "The Snuffle-Sneeze," "The Sore Throat Girl," "Grumpy's Cough," "Exquisite Elsie's Earache" or even "Mary Ann's Appendix." Indeed Mr. Pneumococcus at his best will reach any man's heart and seriously impair its pumping capacity, and once in a while actually reaches his joints and lays him up with nice warm furnished rheumatism.

All of which is not new. Our ancestors for generations back recognized the work of Mr. Pneumococcus, though he had not then been discovered, and called the whole repertory bad "colds," settled here and there in the "weak" places. The principal fault with that easy-going way of disposing of the subject was that the primary causative factor—Mr. Pneumococcus—was lost in the shuffle, and everybody kept passing him around in the most unselfish way, until the common "cold" ultimately became indigenous in every household. In short, the pneumococcus became exactly what we have called him in our title—ubiquitous.

Owing to this ubiquity the wisdom of isolating "colds" is questioned by many physicians. It seems to be the general opinion that "cold" carriers are so numerous that isolation of occasional victims here and there would be love's labor lost. Even the treatment of known carriers with a view to freeing their mouths of virulent pneumococci would be a job so stupendous at the present time as to stagger the most enthusiastic health officers. Let the "cold" carriers alone, they say; let them go on carrying "colds" to Newcastle.

But dwellers in Newcastle may meanwhile take certain precautions for their own health and the health of their neighbors. They may have a "clean-up" day once in a while; a day when extra efforts shall be made to clean up the mouth, with the aid of the dentist and other disinfectants. An absolutely clean mouth will certainly go a long way towards emphasizing the quit in the ubiquity of Mr. Pneumococcus.

Collars

MUCH has been said on the subject of collars but not all of it can be repeated here with propriety.

Collars were invented in the sixteenth century along with thumbscrews and other deadly implements. At that time the collar consisted of a wide starched ruff and after a man had worn these ruffs for a few years, he gladly committed treason and submitted to the axe with pleasure and relief.

Decapitation was, in fact, a favorite method of removing the early Elizabethan collar, but how it was put on still remains a mystery. Scientists are inclined to believe, however, that the collar was slipped over the victim's head in infancy and that he was compelled to grow up inside of it.

Later on the collar was modified in severity until now it is only a minor affliction like the toothache. The modern collar is made of four-ply linen, reinforced with starch. This gives it stiffness enough to saw the epiglottis in two under favorable conditions, but at the same time does not prevent it from being mangled rapidly and successfully in a laundry. Thanks to the laundry the collar is short lived. This is its only virtue. Before the wearer can learn to hate any one collar intensely, it has gone to the rag-bag.

The collar comes in various shapes, including the white wings, the chin scratcher and the modified cuff, and is attached to the muzzle of the shirt by two collar buttons. To install the collar, the patient inserts the buttons in the neck-band of the shirt with thumbs and forefingers. He then slips around behind himself and attaches the middle of the collar to the aft collar button with the aid of a jimmy and a button-hook. Then seizing one end of the collar he hauls it around to the forward collar button which he holds in place with his knees and buttons the end with both hands and a couple of finger nails. He then grasps the remaining end of the collar and stretches it until it reaches around to the forward button. Bracing the button against his Adam's apple, he rims out the button hole with his thumbnail, presses it against the collar button with one foot and gradually works it home with both hands and his teeth. Much of the English language was invented during the stress of putting a fifteen collar on a fifteen and one-half neck-band.

Collars are white and beautiful like sepulchres. They are useful because of the vast stretches of scrawny, angular, red and flabby necks which they hide from the public. If nature, however, had grown collars from the shoulder-blades as she has grown nails on fingers and toes, she would have made the civilized life much more worth living for men.

Views Of The Press

What Is Culture?

A GOOD many attempts have been made to define culture, but people are still trying for a better definition of this elusive thing of many aspects. Dr. Eliot's famous definition of a cultured person as one who gets out of living "the durable satisfactions of life" is hard to beat and, in fact, fills the bill. Our idea of culture is not that it is measured by the degree of enjoyment to be got out of anything, but rather the measure of culture is the number of things out of which a person is able to get enjoyment.

In the Woman's Home Companion a woman qualified to make an attempt to define culture gives her idea. "The power quickly to know a real thing, to recognize the ring of truth, the feel of quality," writes Miss Ida Tarbell, "is the result of cultivation, and a sound test of it." Miss Tarbell's article is worth reading. It concludes with this fine passage:

"Culture is a slow process. It comes from long and close contacts. It is the fruit of reflection, of travail of soul and mind. Grappling with something until the very essence of it has been extracted is a first step. Thus the taste of essences is learned and once learned lesser distillations do not satisfy. Then follows a growing power to discriminate, to distinguish nice values, to judge of quality, to answer to beauty, to feel the need, that what you have—though it may be little—may still be the real thing. This is culture. It is not baggage, like diplomas and degrees—it is not things seen and heard, miles traveled or books read. These are the materials for culture; they contribute to it only when they are absorbed by the mind and as really lost in it as water and lime, phosphates and ammonia must be lost in the soil if they are to enrich it and enable it to increase its yield."—Topeka Daily Capital.

People's Legal Friend

BY E. R. BRANSON

An Opportunity For Abe Martin

A firm of Washington lawyers employed a short-hand reporter to report the case for their client for which the customary charge is $10 per day for the time occupied. If the client desires a transcript of the testimony or any part of it, the reporter charges a stipulated amount per folio for the testimony so transcribed.

During the course of the trial the attorneys had occasion to have a transcript of this testimony made. At the conclusion of the trial the reporter rendered his bill for $98.50 to cover the per diem charge, and the other additional charges. The client lived in a different city. His attorney forwarded the bill for payment, and informed him that the charge made by the court reporter was made on the customary basis. In reply the client wrote the following:

"I enclose you a check of $98.50 to pay Mr. P——. I was somewhat surprised at the amount of his charge, but of course know that it is the customary charge, and it is not up to me to kick; and I know it would do no good if I did. But at the same time I could not help thinking that Abe Martin, the psychological philosopher, might find quite a field for quaint expression on such charges, and might comment on the subject something like this: "The court reporter is a man of great intentions. He attends to taking down all that is said, with the intention of telling you just what you did say, if you intend to ask him for a copy. He only charges $10 a day in a tentative way to take the testimony down, but charges ten times as much to take it up, or tell you what you did say, and if a witness stuttered very badly on the stand there is nobody worth less than John D. could afford to be curious as to what he said on the stand."—Exchange.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

His Chickens Come Home To Roost

Q. A number of years ago a boy, about seventeen or eighteen years old, incurred some indebtedness. He is now of age and is, I think, about twenty-four years old. About a month ago he promised to pay these debts. Could he be held to his promise?

A. Yes.

What The Suit-Case Held

Q. When a suit is brought against a railroad company for loss of baggage, does it make any difference what the passenger carried in his suit case, or would anything so carried be regarded as baggage?

A. It makes a difference. The passenger cannot recover the value of articles so lost unless they properly come within the designation of baggage. The passenger is entitled to take with him as baggage such articles as are reasonably necessary and suitable for the purposes of the journey, having regard to comfort and convenience.

A Married Woman's Earnings

Q. Is a married woman entitled to receive and make use of her own earnings, free from the interference of her husband or his creditors?

A. In many states this is true, but not in all.

Discipline

DISCIPLINE in its best sense means to educate. And to Educate is to bring out of yourself your very best abilities in orderly fashion. Maximum Power demands Maximum Discipline.

Gather your forces together. Discipline your mind and your body. Do many things each day for no other reason than that you would rather not do them. Draw in the loose cords. Neglect nothing that is important. Put Discipline to work.

The Universal Attitude

My flat is not commodious,
And so it makes me ill
When neighbors wax melodious,
As neighbors often will.

And when, in sweet precociousness,
The children overhead
Play tunes with great ferociousness,
I wish that they were dead.

I find the folk pestiferous
Who dance till one A.M.
With songs and shouts vociferous,
Their actions I condemn.

All noises inharmonious
From almost every source
I look on as felonious,
And curse them till I'm hoarse.

But when I wax uproarious
And howl and sing off-key,
And neighbors get censorious,
I'm angry as can be.

There is no Room in the World for the Man who only Guesses -- YOU MUST KNOW.

MEN who work with their hands and muscles are struggling at a big disadvantage. The world doesn't care so much how much you can lift while "on the job"—it is how much do you know?

Suppose a man should pop around the corner and say to you, "who is the representative from your district"? Could you answer him?

You may be as poor as a church-mouse in money but rich in knowledge. You may be able to answer a fund of inquiries—you may be looked upon as a wise man of your neighborhood, and if that is so then you are also rich in a number of real friends.

The man who knows is welcomed everywhere—he attracts people to him—folks like to have dealings with the intelligent man—

Are You that Man?

For instance: what do you know about the Republic of Mexico—its agriculture—area—and population—capital—commerce—debt—education—finance—government—judicature—history—language—its mines and minerals—its monetary system—its production and industry—its towns—states—capitals—weights—measures—currency?

Can you give facts about this one question (alone) of the day? Can you converse intelligently about Mexico's present and past difficulties?

Can you give the important facts about your own state or any other state in the Union? Have you reliable books that will give such information?

Can you refer to any books in your library and know the world's production in hops—fire insurance statistics—fire losses—in these United States?

Do they give you facts in general about the earth?

To put it in another way—what do you know about

Electrical Measures:
Number of Evangelists;
Expenditure of U. S.
Farm statistics.

Ice yachting records;
Number of Jacobites;
Number of people in any given religious sect?
Horse power developed in U. S.

Don't you think, judging by the interesting store advertisements printed today, that a visit to some of the stores just now might be interesting as well as profitable to you?

If values and prices ruled about alike in all stores at all times, there would not be any such thing as store competition. And, as finding desirable values would require no especial knowledge or insight, store advertising would be superfluous.

The Woodpecker Became a Pet.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Hank Fritz Snared a Woodpecker.

"A STORY—a story!" cried two eager children.

So daddy sat down with a child on each knee, and this is what he told: "Each fall Bobbie and Jim used to begin to set traps and snares before the leaves fell. They always got Hank Fritz to set the snares, which were beautifully bent wires skillfully placed among the low twigs and branches of the bushes that partridges liked best to live in. Soon as they are touched they spring back and catch whatever moved them. Well, one beautiful fall day all three of the children went with Hank to see if anything had been caught in the snares. They passed the peach orchard, and just beyond the chestnut grove Hank had every path all laced up with fine wires, so that no one but he could pass without springing a snare."

"Did Bibbley Wah like to go?" asked Jack.

"She loved to do everything the boys did. Well, after the children were about ready to come back without catching anything, in the very farthest snare they saw something red flashing through dry twigs. When they reached it they found a big, beautiful woodpecker hopping cheerfully about with one foot in the snare, which had held him without hurting him at all.

"Of course Hank was delighted and took the wire off the bird's leg. The boys ran up the path home, carrying Bibbley Wah, who could not walk very fast, to show Uncle Ben their fine catch. So the woodpecker became a pet in an old cage that Anne used to keep her parrot in. But he did not like a cage as well as the woods, and one day Hank found his beautiful bird drooping in the bottom of the cage. Uncle Ben thought the best way was to put him out of his unhappiness and have him stuffed, so the children could keep him for a lasting plaything."

"Who stuffed him?" cried Evelyn.

"Now, it happened that down by Whist pond there lived a lady who knew all about birds. She could tell the names and songs and habits of every bird that lived in her state, and she had wonderful glass cases full of rare stuffed birds from other lands. The children thought it the greatest fun to go to visit her twice a year, when she always served them raspberry tarts. So this day Uncle Ben hitched up Old Ned and, with the poor woodpecker in a shoe box coffin, drove to the lady's house. In just a week she sent the children their pet all finely mounted on a birch branch. So, along with the other toys and Anne Junior, he lived in high state in Bibbley Wah's doll house."

"Thank you, daddy!" cried the children, with two kisses each.

Married Life on $80 a Month

A Brighter Atmosphere Is Noticeable at the Office.

John Sutner was a little late in getting to the office the morning after the arrest of Tyler for robbing the safe. Julia Osgood was sitting at her desk as unconcerned as if she were not the talk of the town.

"Good morning, Julia; you look as normal as if looking up thieves and delivering unlucky friends from black shadows of suspicion were all in the day's work. I, for one, don't feel so calm." John reached out a hand to her.

Julia smilingly put her hand in the outstretched palm.

"I am not sure that I thanked you for what you did for me last night. I am not real positive about anything that happened, except that I am no longer under a cloud," continued John.

"Rest assured that you acquitted yourself like a man," laughed Julia, "and nothing I ever did has given me so much pleasure as the ability to serve a friend in trouble and make people see him for what he is, an honest man." John wrung her hand in silence.

"I fell in love with your wife. I never saw anyone who was more sincere," continued Julia.

"Thank you." John Sutner's face beamed with pleasure. "You two must know each other. I assure you Molly is prepared to burn incense before you."

The door opened and Jaynes and Cane, the inspector from Kansas City entered the room.

"Good morning, Sutner." Jaynes extended his hand cordially. "Mr. Cane is ready for you. He will go over your set of books first. Tyler probably spent most of his energies on them to further his scheme of implicating you."

While John got the books together Jaynes turned to Julia.

"How is our detective this morning?" he asked jovially. "Jove, but you were nervy. How did you know the man would not shoot you down to get away?"

"I knew, if he would do what I suspected him of, he was a coward, and cowards have only to be faced down." Julia smiled with simple pleasure that she had been able to help a friend, but she blushed when she caught the admiring gaze that Cane fixed upon her.

"Do you ever use women in your business?" asked Jaynes, noticing the look.

"We might. I think such a cool-headed, quick-witted person would be of great use," replied Cane, bowing to Julia as John signified his readiness to begin work.

"Not that I am anxious to get rid of so useful a person," laughed Jaynes, as they moved toward the door.

John gave her a smile and nod as he went out behind the others.

During the morning Jaynes brought Dr. Ellson in to introduce him to the heroine of the hour.

"I am mighty sorry the crowd had dropped you before it took it into its head to call on me at the eleventh hour last night. You should by all means have been at the little celebration we inaugurated, as you were the chief mover in bringing the thing about. We will have to have a party of some sort in your honor before all is over."

Julia was evidently bored to have so much fuss made about "so trifling a matter," and returned to her work as soon as possible, hoping that was the last she would hear about the matter.

Young Cane was not minded to let the thing drop, and the upshot was a party was arranged for the following Friday night. Olive invited all the neighborhood club to meet Julia.

"Molly can wear her little blue silk," she thought with a smile.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

Household Hints

OYSTERS BETTER THAN IN DAYS OF INDIANS

Under the head of "The Food That Has Gone Up," the United States department of commerce has issued a bulletin on oysters. Before the days of the white men, the Indians of North America counted oysters a very important article of daily food, it is said, drying and smoking them, stringing them on twigs and using them in barter with their inland neghbors.

On the bank of a main river where there are now no oysters, there is said to be a mound containing some 7,000,000 bushels of shells.

The shipment of oysters is now under government inspection and Uncle Sam guarantees that they are better and more sanitary than ever before. If cooked, as the majority of oysters are in this country, they are doubly safe.

The bulletin contains a variety of tested recipes, of which these are a few:

Oyster Cocktail—Have oysters very cold. Put not more than six in each cocktail glass or sherbet cup, and just before sending to the table, cover with a dressing made in the following way: Mix together one tablespoon mushroom catsup, one tablespoon strained lemon juice, five drops Tabasco sauce, and salt to taste. This quantity will make three cocktails. Serve thin slices of brown bread and celery with the cocktails.

Oyster Soup—Take one quart oysters. Put in a saucepan one quart milk and one pint water with salt, pepper and mace. Add tablespoon butter and put on the stove. When it comes to a boil, add the oysters and let the whole simmer five minutes. Thicken with cracker crumbs.

Oyster Chowder—Chop fifty good sized oysters. Prepare one cup finely chopped celery and two cups cold boiled rice. Put a layer of celery in the bottom of the saucepan, then a layer of rice and a layer of oysters. Season with salt and pepper. Repeat these layers until all the materials are used. Pour over one cup boiling water. Cook slowly for twenty-five minutes. Beat up the yolks of two eggs, with one cup milk; add this to the chowder; stir carefully for a few minutes and serve hot.

Maryland Stew—Take one quart oysters. Put one pint water in saucepan and let it simmer, then rub the yolks of three hard-boiled eggs and one spoonful of flour together and stir in. Put in also one-fourth pound butter to small pieces, one-half teaspoon whole allspice, the juice of a lemon, salt and pepper. Let it simmer ten minutes, then add the oysters and serve immediately.

Broiled Oysters on Toast—Broil lightly on the gridiron one pint of oysters. Place them on thin slices of buttered toast and pour over them a sauce made of a gill of cream, a teaspoon grated onion, a little lemon juice, salt, and a dash of Tabasco sauce. Serve hot and garnish with parsley.

Bacon and Oysters—Drain twelve selected oysters and wrap each in a thin slice of good bacon, using wooden toothpicks as skewers. Place in the oven and bake until a rich brown. Oven should not get too hot.

Oyster Loaf—Cut a long loaf of bread into slices about two inches thick, a baker's long 5 cent loaf will make six. Now trim off the crust, and make each piece square. Dig the crumbs out of the center of each piece, leaving sides and bottom like a box; that is, make a square box out of each slice of bread. Brush each box over with melted butter and put in a quick oven until a light brown. Fill with creamed oysters and serve.

THE TABLE.

Stuffed "Vegetable Marrow"—Select a large, rather flat squash. Cut it in halves crosswise, peel and remove center. Fill cavities with a mixture of cooked calf's liver (chopped), finely chopped bacon, bread crumbs and mushrooms (if desired); moisten with broth or cream after it has been seasoned to taste. Tie halves of the squash together and boil in equal parts of water and milk. When tender separate the halves and just before serving pour over a sauce made from the water in which the vegetable was boiled.

Cream Salad Dressing (original)—Place one cup vinegar in pan to heat. Now rub well together one heaping tablespoon sugar, one level tablespoon salt, one rounded tablespoon flour, one level teaspoon dry mustard; add slowly one cup sweet milk. Add this to vinegar and stir constantly until well cooked and smooth. Beat well white of one egg, add yolk and beat and while above is hot add it to egg a little at a time and stir well.

Peach Whip—Three peaches, one-half cup granulated sugar, beaten white of one egg. Peel peaches and mash with potato masher, add sugar and beaten white of one egg. Beat with whip for twenty-five minutes.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC

Will it come into YOUR home?
Will it be as sweet as it might be?

The John Wanamaker Store has set for itself high standards of merchandise and service. In no one of its 91 separate merchandise specializations does it reach a higher standard than in its distinguished collection of

Pianos and Player Pianos

CHOICE--Larger choice of fine instruments than is assembled together under any other one roof.

TERMS--Fixed prices on terms within the reach of all: small sum down, balance in monthly payments.

THE CHRISTMAS PIANO

It may be a Schomacker, founded in 1838, the piano with the rare singing tone, piano of the Presidents, loved of Lincoln.

It may be an Emerson, founded in 1849, "the sweet-toned," in the front rank of pianos for the home.

It may be a Lindeman, founded in 1836, the oldest piano built in New York, second oldest of American pianos, a piano that has never been equaled at its price—$220 and upward, according to model.

It may be a Kurtzmann, founded in 1848; three factories are run at full capacity the year 'round to supply the demand for it.

It may be a celebrated Knabe, founded in 1837, an instrument of supreme quality, with color, beauty, and passion in its tone.

It may be any of these, with the Angelus player built in it, forming a complete player piano, more humanlike in its powers of expression than any other.

It may be a player-piano with electric attachment—the Schomacker-Angelus-Artrio, Emerson-Angelus-Artrio, Lindeman-Angelus-Artrio, Knabe-Angelus-Artrio, Knabe-Ampico, Schomacker, Ampico, Emerson-Electric, Lindeman-Electric, or the Emerson-Electric, equipped with a new control device, by which (1) a singer may have absolute mastery over the player-piano accompanying him; (2) one may sit in a comfortable arm chair at a distance from the piano and regulate the expression of the music to suit one's ideas of tone and time.

Whichever You Choose

you can make no mistake. Generations have tested the Wanamaker pianos. Christmas after Christmas has been filled with their music.

Pianos, $220 and upward.

Player-pianos, $395 and upward.

PRINCETON STUDENTS STUDY SOCIAL SERVICE

Princeton, Dec. 14.—A great wave of enthusiasm for social service work has swept over the Princeton University campus during the past week as a result of a series of addresses closing here today. The tremendous extent of the student interest is shown by the fact that more than a thousand of the fourteen hundred undergraduates turned out nightly to attend the meetings. Some of the subjects dealt with the college man in civic work and phases of modern industrial organization.

The speaker at the evening addresses and also at morning chapel during the week was Raymond Robins, of Chicago. One of the strongest appeals in the series was his narration of personal experiences in the Seventeenth ward of Chicago, said to be the worst criminal district of the city, and the corresponding opportunities for social service which these experiences presented.

A large number of Princeton alumni engaged or interested in social service work returned to their Alma Mater during the past week to make the acquaintance of the undergraduates and present personally the opportunities in their work.

SUFFRAGE CONVENTION MEETS IN WASHINGTON

Washington, Dec. 14.—The forty seventh annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association opened here today, and it was made notable by the attendance of many of the most brilliant women of America. Mrs. Anna Howard Shaw, the retiring president, was given a rousing reception, and the other leaders of the national organization were royally cheered. A confident, hopeful atmosphere pervades the convention; in fact, this is the most confident convention the organization has ever held.

Several thousand accredited delegates have arrived, representing the sixty-four affiliated organizations which extend from Maine to Hawaii. The program calls for business sessions in the daytime and in the evening. The evening conferences will be devoted to practical discussion of methods of campaigning.

The main topic of gossip concerns the coming election of officers, for there is much interest to see who will succeed Mrs. Shaw. Many candidates have been put forward by various delegations, and each of them has strong backing. The election feature will grow steadily until the voting day. Many of the younger members have a leaning toward Mrs Winston Churchill, wife of the novelist, who has been an active campaigner, and who managed the arrangements for the present convention. On the other hand, the older members believe in honoring the veterans who have conducted the suffrage fight for many years. Added to this, one can observe the sectional jealousies which, in the final balloting, may be very strong indeed.

The convention will occupy the balance of the week, and will wind up on Sunday with a big mass meeting.

The Flemington Vigilant Society at its annual meeting in the courthouse Saturday elected the following officers: President, Hiram E. Deats; first vice-president, Alexander B. Allen; second vice president, John R. Foster; secretary, Jason S. Hoffman; directors, William D. Bloom, Edward B. Allen, Isaacher H. Higgins, David H. Agans, Jonathan H. Conover and Frank H. Van Syckel; pursuers, Amos Thatcher, William Y. Holt, William C. Marsh, William A. Force, James J. Losey, J. Dothard Dilts, C. C. Bell, L. C. Potts and J. N. Schenk.

Deats, of Flemington.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW
Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.—Adv.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER
Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

MARKED ADVANCE IN REALTY PRICES

City Hall and Federal Building Plans Enhance Value of Properties.

CHANGES ANTICIPATED

Owners Now Holding Land at Higher Figure—Avenue Said to Be Destined to Become One of the Principal Thoroughfares in City.

Since the announcement of the purchase by the city of the Brooks property on Watchung avenue, upon which it is proposed to erect a city hall, there has been a marked advance in the price of realty, not only in that immediate vicinity, but along other parts of the avenue. One property owner who has a tract of land on that thoroughfare, and had put it in the hands of a local broker for sale, requested the broker to take it off his list when it became known that the city had secured a site for a city hall.

This property owner had been trying for some time to dispose of his land, but when he found that the city hall was to be near his holdings, he immediately decided that it was worth a great deal more than he was previously willing to sell it for, and now he is not so anxious to dispose of the tract.

There are several other similar instances where property on Watchung avenue and adjacent to that thoroughfare have advanced in price. With the recent activity in real estate in that locality, and the fact that the postoffice building is to be located at East Second street and Watchung avenue, there has been considerable discussion as to whether that street will not in time become the principal thoroughfare in the city, east and west. Many believe that it will for the reason that it not only is on the line of all the trolleys, but there is a direct connection between the city and borough. It was the belief that with the widening of Madison avenue that improvement would tend to relieve the present congested traffic on Park avenue, but there seems to be no question but that with the prospective improvements on Watchung avenue it is destined to become one of the most important streets in Plainfield, and will ultimately result in the erection of modern buildings in place of the many one-story structures to be found there at present.

SECOND DAY WITHOUT A CASE IN POLICE COURT

A six-inch fall of snow may not have a good effect upon the health of a community but it has certainly worked a miracle with the morals of Plainfield. For two days there has not been a single case in police court. This morning Judge De Meza again went to the police station to find that there were no cases docketed.

SLADE FIRM CITED IN FAMOUS OSBORNE CASE

Slade & Slade, attorneys in the famous Osborne case, have been cited to appear in U. S. District Court in New York to show cause why the government should not be afforded relief in the appeal of Franklin D. Safford, a former Plainfielder, who was convicted of perjury in the trial. The citation was issued on "information and belief that the records in the case were incorrect and probably falsified." Safford is now making a fight to have his conviction set aside and he charges that the records in the case were altered while they were in possession of the attorneys who prosecuted him.

COL. MACINTYRE TO SPEAK.

BUT SIXTY AUTOISTS HAVE 1916 TAGS

At Least 850 Must Secure New License Before January 1.

More than eight hundred and fifty Plainfielders are yet to secure 1916 automobile licenses and this must be done before the close of December. All new licenses must be secured before January 1, or owners will not be allowed to run their cars. James J. McCann, who is in charge of licenses for this district, has issued only 60 for next year, and there are at least 900 cars in Plainfield alone. Mr. McCann is afraid that owners will wait until the last few days of the year and then four or five hundred demand new license tags at once. His offices are in the State Trust Company, where he can be found between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

EAST END SCHOOL PLANS ARE CHANGED

Board of Education Will Comply With the Building Ordinance.

Plans for the proposed new school building for the East End were discussed at a meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education held last night. Members of the Board had tentative drawings for the building and they were gone over in detail. Rules of the State Board of Education had been carried out in the drawing of these plans, but city officials insisted that instead the building should conform to the city building ordinance and some minor charges were made. These were simply changes in material and will not effect the character of the building. Routine business was disposed of by the Board.

SEN. ACKERMAN MAY COME FOR PREPAREDNESS MEETING

Those arranging for the preparedness meeting at the Knights of Columbus Club tonight have received a letter from Ernest R. Ackerman, who congratulates Plainfield on the opportunity to hear such experts as Henry A. Wise Wood and Dr. William L. Saunders and states that he will accept the invitation if it is possible for him to attend. Mr. Wood and Dr. Saunders will reach Plainfield sometime this afternoon for tonight's meeting, which will be held in the Columbus Club at 8 o'clock.

LEO EPSTEIN INJURED AT COTT-A-LAPP PLANT

Somerville, Dec. 15.—Leo Epstein, of this place, who is employed by the Cott-a-Lapp Company, sustained a fracture of his leg while at work in the plant yesterday afternoon. He was standing near a large belt running from one of the company's engines, when it suddenly flew off one of the wheels, striking Mr. Epstein. A physician was summoned and an investigation disclosed a fracture of the leg.

The injured man was removed to his home on Culver street, where the broken bone was set. Mr. Epstein is a son-in-law of former Surrogate William J. De Mond.

BONNIE BURN TO HAVE GOOD CHEER

Community Christmas Sub-Committee Has Made Plans for Kiddies.

APPEALS ARE PATHETIC

Mrs. W. H. Murray, Chairman of Committee—Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson to Make Address at Exercises on December 23.

One of the places in which the Community Christmas brings cheer is the Bonnie Burn Sanitarium for Consumptives, and the sub-committee having that work in charge have planned a big entertainment. Contributions to make all this possible can be sent to Treasurer DeWitt Hubbell at the Plainfield Trust Company, and will be acknowledged through the local papers. There will be a meeting of the general committee at the Y. M. C. A. at 7:30 sharp tonight, as many who are to attend wish to go to the High School later to the oratorio being given under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee.

Christmas is being looked forward to eagerly by the more than one hundred patients at Bonnie Burn this year, and letters have been received by Santa Claus from six of the little children over there telling what their very special needs are and asking that he will not forget them. One little girl writes,

"Dear Santa Claus:

"I would like to have a nice doll and carriage or a new cap and pair

GIRL'S DISMISSAL UPHELD BY BOARD

Civil Service Commission Sustains Action in Case of Miss Ruth A. McElroy.

Dismissal of Miss Ruth A. McElroy, of 628 Newark avenue, Elizabeth, as a clerk in the office of County Registrar F. H. Smith has been confirmed in a decision of the State Civil Service Commission, which was announced yesterday. The young woman was dismissed last May by the county registrar on the ground of insubordination. She contested her discharge, claiming that it was contrary to the civil service law, and was granted a hearing, which took place before Commissioner Alexander R. Fordyce, of Newark, in the courthouse, Elizabeth, on October 14. Decision was reserved at that time.

At the hearing, Miss McElroy was charged with having refused to obey the orders of the head of the department in which she was employed and with having been the ringleader in a series of pranks that affected the discipline and efficiency of the office. It was brought out during the hearing that the office in which Miss McElroy worked was situated in the basement of the courthouse and was not under the direct control of the county registrar. Miss McElroy and several other girls were in charge of Ozial A. Howe, who was employed for the purpose of installing a new filing system.

Miss McElroy denied the charge of insubordination, contending that Howe and the other girls in the office had taken part in the pranks and that she was no more guilty than they.

FAVORS CHANGE IN POLICE RULES

Councilman Babcock is of the Opinion That They Are Too Exacting.

GOOD MEN ARE BARRED

Several Recent Applicants Have Been "Turned Down" Because They Did Not Measure the Required Five Feet Eight Inches in Height.

The difficulty being experienced in getting men qualified to fill the existing vacancies in the police department has raised the question as to whether the rules and regulations under which appointments are made are not too strict. Out of a number of recent applicants examined there were several who, it is said, met practically all of the requirements except the measurement as to height, being from a half to three-quarters of an inch under the specified five feet eight inches.

Councilman Juan A. Babcock, who is chairman of the police committee, in speaking of the matter, said: "I think that if an applicant for appointment meets all other essential qualifications the city can well afford to waive a half or three-quarters of an inch in his height. Of course, the department does not want undersized men, but when only such a trifle stands in the way of getting good men, the rules should be promptly amended. Some of the men who quite recently sought appointments were "turned down" just because they did not quite come up to the required height.

"In these days when good men are finding good positions so easily the city will find that some inducements will have to be made to fill up the ranks in the police department. The present force is getting plenty to do at present, in some cases patrolmen being obliged to cover three and four posts."

It is the opinion that under such conditions a patrolman is not able to adequately cover the territory, and the Police Board realizes that more men must be secured as soon as possible. Quite recently the department lost John Fritts and Martin Flatley, both getting jobs that pay more money with less work, and others will be expected to better themselves if the opportunity offers itself. Within the past week two new men were made members of the force, but at least six more men are needed.

FINE RENDITION OF 'THE MESSIAH'

Handel's Oratorio Heard by An Appeciative Audience at High School.

EXCELLENT SOLO WORK

Under the Direction of S. Frederick Smith, Large Chorus Shows Result of Careful Training—Wendell Glover Accompanist.

The rendition of Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," given in the Plainfield High School Auditorium, last night, was pronounced by all present as the best effort of the Choral Society, the soloists as well as the members of the chorus being in splendid voice. As a rule in all cities the public hears "The Messiah" as a part of the Christmas atmosphere, and last night's performance was a fitting prelude to Christmas tide. Although the audience was small owing to the inclement weather conditions, the patrons were thoroughly appreciative of the efforts of the participants.

Plainfield has rarely had the opportunity to listen to such finished artists as the soloists who appeared last evening in the persons of Miss Marie Stoddart, soprano; Miss Marie Morrisey, contralto; Dan Beddoe, tenor and Wilfred Glenn, bass; all of New York city. Miss Stoddart's "Rejoice Greatly" was sung in beautiful voice and feeling, as well as "He Shall Feed His Flock," which was sung by Miss Morrisey, whose well-toned voice captivated the listeners. Daniel Beddoe's rendition of "Every

OWNERS FAILED TO CLEAR SIDEWALKS

Police Report Names and They May Be Ordered to Court.

Several property owners in Plainfield have been reported by policemen for failing to clean their sidewalks within the twelve hours allowed by city ordinance, and while no action has been taken it is probable that complaint will be made against them. Mayor Calkins issued an official statement yesterday calling the attention of owners and tenants to the law, which provides that walks must be cleared within twelve hours from daylight after the snow falls. Some of the renters on downtown streets failed to comply with this and their names are in the hands of the Mayor. They may be called to court in the morning.

DRIVERS ARE CAUTIONED NOT TO OVERLOAD TEAMS

Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, local agent for the S. P. C. A., issued a warning to drivers this morning cautioning them not to overload their teams during the present weather, when the going is very heavy. Whenever possible she urged drivers to employ two horses instead of one on heavy loads. In order to save much unnecessary inconvenience, she also urged shoppers to carry small parcels themselves instead of having them sent to their homes, thereby avoiding much hardship on horses as well as clerks.

Persons leaving horses on the streets unattended are liable to prosecution, and drivers are requested to remember that a crack of a whip hurts more in cold weather than during the warm season. It is unlawful, and persons who leave dogs or other animals outside without proper shelter from the weather are liable to prosecution. Proper shelter from the weather does not men a barrel or a box. If owners have no adequate shelter for a dog they are urged to take them into the cellars of their homes.

PREPAREDNESS LEADERS ACCUSED OF SELFISHNESS

Washington, Dec. 15.—Allegations connecting the Navy League and its preparedness propoganda with the International Nickel Company and other corporations were made on the floor of the House today by Representative Tavanner, of Illinois. Representative Tavanner asserted that Col. R. M. Thompson, president of the Navy League, is chairman of the directorate of the International Nickel Company and therefore had a selfish reason for urging preparedness. Mr. Tavanner asked that the government manufacture all munitions.

GERMANS QUIT GREECE

Austria Resents American Note, But Will Send Conciliatory Answer it is Believed—Montenegrins Driven Back in Light Fighting.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Great Britain probably will ask the United States to obtain guarantees that the cargo of cotton carried by the steamer Ausable, which sailed Sunday from Galveston for Copenhagen, will not be permitted to reach Germany and Austria. The British Foreign Office has agreed not to molest vessels of the American Trans-Atlantic Line, to which the Ausable belongs, pending test prize court proceedings in the cases of the Hocking and Genessee. It was indicated at the British embassy today that this agreement might not be considered binding as to the Ausable, unless assurances were given as to the ultimate destination of her cargo of cotton, which is on the British contraband list.

Greece Prepares For Trouble.

Athens, Dec. 15.—The Nea Imira announces that 12,000 Greek troops in the districts of Doiran and Saloniki have marched to the eastward in Grecian Macedonia. The German, Austrian, Turkish and Bulgarian residents have already left Saloniki, evidently fearing trouble.

Austria Resents U. S. Note.

London, Dec. 15.—A despatch from Geneva states that a special meeting of the Austro-Hungarian cabinet has been called to consider the note of the United States relative to the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona. The despatch added that despite the resentment against the tone of the American note it is believed the Austrian government will deliver a conciliatory reply.

60 Per Cent. of Big Loan Taken.

New York, Dec. 15.—The following announcement was given out at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. this afternoon:

"The managers of the Anglo-French $500,000,000 loan syndicate state that within the sixty-day life of the syndicate, which expired yesterday, over sixty per cent. of the bonds purchased by the syndicate were taken for investment. Of the bonds so bought for investment the larger part was naturally taken by the participants who joined the syndicate with the idea of immediately withdrawing their bonds and thus obtaining the benefit of the syndicate price. The size of the trainsaction naturally brought in as syndicate subscribers a large number of actual investors. Consequently with so many large investors already out of the market the sales made by the syndicate upon the public offering were bound to be in small units and thus to a limited aggregate the amount of cash which the syndicate managers are distributing to those who did not withdraw their bonds for investment amount to between 10 and 11 per cent. of the amount of participation."

HEAR SUFFRAGE ARGUMENTS.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 15.—Today is one of the big calendar days on the suffrage program, for the leaders of the National American Woman Suffrage Association are being given a hearing by the Senate Committee on Woman Suffrage. It is considered a great triumph for the association, for the rival organization, the Congressional Union, was refused a hearing. It is no secret that the Senators turned down the Congressional Union delegation because of their previous threats against Democratic lawmakers. Some of the most forcible speakers in the suffrage camp will be heard during today's meeting of the Senate committee, and set speeches have been prepared long in advance for this event.

Blinded by the driving snow, Monday evening, as he was returning along South avenue from his duties of the day in the office of the Levgar Structural Company, Jefferson McGinley lost his bearings and strode off of the road into Bonegut brook, going in the icy water up to his waist. His cries brought Councilman Robert Craig and John Logan to his assistance.

The snow seemed to be unusually blinding in this particular spot and "King" Brady, another employe of the Levgar Company, coming along the road five minutes later, had a narrow escape from a similar fate. In striding off of the road toward the water, Brady had a timely warning when he brushed against the end of the railing of the bridge over the brook. WORK DONE IN 1915 FOR NETHERWOOD Retiring President Stevens Reviews Activities of the Club.

In retiring from the presidency of the Netherwood Residents' Association after a year of service, President Henry P. Stevens reviewed the activities of the club under his leadership at the annual meeting held Tuesday evening. He told of the hopes for a new school, improvements made on roads and streets, the rejection of an automobile fire engine that proved defective and of efforts to secure a postoffice sub-station. A pleasing feature of the report of President Stevens was his statement that there had been nothing for the health committee to do during the year. Important matters touched on in his statement follow:

"One of the first reasons for the existence of the association was the desire for a schoolhouse here. We have not been successful in this matter, as yet. You are all familiar with the untiring efforts that our educational committee and board of trustees have made to secure a promise from the Board of Education that something would be done, and at our last quarterly meeting we had the pleasure of listening to an address from Archibald Cox, president of the Board of Education, which explained many of the perplexing problems before the Board, and left us with the hope that something would be done for a school here, at Netherwood, as soon as the Board could see its way clear to accomplish it.

"This association should continue to strive for a school, for the younger scholars at least; for there is arrested development and much vacant land here, which could be built upon and thus increase the population. There are a number of unoccupied houses which could be filled with laughing children, if we had a school nearby. Young married couples, with children, are an asset to any community and the country is the place for them but they are discouraged from coming here by the meagre school facilities, and some who recently came have since sold their homes, and moved away, in order to have their children nearer school.

"The highway committee has been vigilant in seeking improvements to our roadways, and has, from time to time, been the means of securing a goodly number of repairs to the streets, and has always found the street commissioner ready to listen to suggestions. Promises of new improvements in the future have been made.

"The public safety committee was prepared to have a small public celebration at the installation and acceptance by our Common Council of the new high pressure pumping engine, which came to our firehouse. The engine, however, was defective and did not meet the test of the fire department; it was therefore rejected, and the celebration was indefinitely postponed. It will be the duty of your incoming public safety committee to see that no old or inferior engine is installed in the Netherwood firehouse.'

"The health of the people of this section has been so good that the health committee has received no complaints requiring attention.

"The mail and telephone committee has had the mail delivery extended on certain streets, and while our appreciation for the establishment of a postoffice sub-station at Netherwood was approved by an examiner from the Postoffice Department, yet, the government has decided not to locate it here at present, as the department does not want to increase its disbursements, although the munificent salary of $50 per annum for the postmaster was all that was required for the office."

GOOD CHEER FOR BONNIE BURN

of gloves, and a lot of good things to eat."

Another says:

"Dear Santa Claus:

"Will you please bring me a train that runs on a track?"

Still another has set his heart on a cowboy suit, and one little girl, so ill that she is never able to be out of bed, asks for a doll and some nice toys.

Of the boys, only one is bed-ridden, and he asks the good Saint to bring him "a painting set and a book"—things appropriate for a little shut-in.

Baby Willie also must not be forgotten. Though too young to speak for himself, being only two and a half years old, Santa Claus must take the matter into his own hands and decide what is best to make such a small person happy.

But, thanks to the kind thought of some of the Plainfield boys and girls and to the generosity of the Community Christmas Committee, and also to good friends in Elizabeth and Roselle, Santa Claus will not be too much overworked, as presents and bundles of warm clothing are being prepared for each and all of the sick children, and everything asked for will be supplied.

There will be gifts also for all of the grown-up patients, and a cordial invitation is extended to every one interested in seeing the happiness and good cheer brought about through the agency of the Community Christmas Fund to attend the celebration, which will be held at Bonnie Burn on Thursday afternoon, the 23rd of December, at 3 o'clock. There will be a tree, a Christmas address by the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, and music, and, last but not least a visit from Santa Claus.

The Bonnie Burn Christmas subcommittee is composed of the following members: Mrs. W. H. Murray, chairman; Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, Miss Emily H. Suydam, Elizabeth, Mrs. Malcolm McKenzie, Mrs. John S. Zelie, Mrs. C. Boardman Tyler, Mrs. Orton G. Dale, Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury, Miss Margaret Holly, Dr. John H. Runnells, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Wm. S. Tyler, F. W. Veghte, Roselle.

At a meeting of the general committee for the Community Christmas held at the Y. M. C. A. last night much progress was reported. Mr. William H. Murray stated that but $35 was needed from Plainfielders to make the celebration at Bonnie Burn a success, because of contributions received from Elizabeth and Roselle, and Mrs. David H. Rowland said that she had raised $22 for the Industrial Home celebration, so would need nothing from the general committee funds.

The purchasing committee showed samples of stockings, gloves, hats and other things for children which have been bought so cheaply that the other members were astonished. They have been alloted $500, but last night the president was authorized to see that they have more money if they need it. The matter of purchasing could be left to the committee, after a better idea as to the amount available is possible.

New contributions sent to Treasurer Hubell since yesterday's list was published, include $43 raised at Wagon chapel, and various sums from the following: Alexander Thorne, Miss Edith B. Little, Mrs. N. E. Lewis, First Day School of the Religious Society of Friends, Mrs. Kate L. Trowbridge, John F. Harman, Leslie R. Port, Robert C. Brown and Miss Juliet E. Weber. The total amount now in hand is about $825, a little over half of the amount given last year.

PLANS FOR METUCHEN GUN CLUB'S SHOOT ANNOUNCED

Plans for the prize shoot to be held Saturday by the Metuchen Rod and Gun Club, in which competition several Plainfielders will shoot, have been completed.

The program will consist of two sweepstake events and two for live poultry. There will be one live turkey, a live chicken and a live duck so that everyone will have a chance to supply the table for Christmas dinner with other than cold storage poultry. There will be as prizes a Gem Junior safety razor, contributed by the Stevens Arms and Tool Co., of Chicopee Falls, Mass., and one hundred shells, to be put up by the Rod and Gun Club. As to the total number of shells to be used in the entire program will total seventy-five, someone will be lucky enough to have his shells supplied without cost.

P. C. G. WILLING TO TAKE JUNIOR TOURNAMENT AGAIN

At last night's meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association, held in New York, the Plainfield Country Club went on record as being willing to handle the junior championship again next year. She past season is the first year the junior event has ever been held on any links other than the Plainfield Country Club. Six clubs applied for the amateur tourney, four for the junior, three for the open, and several for the other tourneys, as well as several offers to take any tournament the association might select.

SEEK TO RAISE LIMIT

New York, Dec. 15.—The Giants are making another strenuous kick against the 21-man rule in the National Legaue, and are trying to secure an extension of the limit to 23 or its withdrawal. The New Yorkers put up an awful kick when the rule was first sprung a year ago, and are now claiming that the rule is a hard one on clubs that are unlucky enough to have many men laid up by accident or illness. Many other questions are up before the National League magnates. Whether peace with the Federals is in sight is still doubtful on the outside of the closed doors.

BIG SCHOOLBOY MEET.

To make the fourth annual indoor games of the Newark Central High School a magnet for every high and preparatory school in the State, the faculty committee has announced that the events will be known as the New Jersey interscholastic indoor championships. The meet will be held at the First Regiment Armory in Newark, March 11.

TO SELECT YALE COACH.

A special committee delegated by the Yale Athletic Association to name a football coach at Yale will meet in New York tonight, when it is expected that a selection will be made. This committee consists of Vance C. McCormick, '93; S. S. Brinke Thorne, '96, and John R. Kilpatrick, '11.

Watchung.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association will be held tomorrow evening in the school auditorium. A special musical program has been arranged.

Mrs. William M. Demler entertained the Ladies' Aid Society of the Mary E. Wilson Memorial Union church at her home yesterday afternoon. Final plans for the Christmas festivities were completed. After the business meeting a collation was served.

The roads, which have been blocked by the recent snowstorm, have been opened. Coasting and sleighing is excellent. A great deal of damage has been done to the fruit trees in this vicinity, some orchards having been totally destroyed.

The Junior Chritian Endeavor Society will hold its meeting Friday afternoon in the chapel.

Mrs. Hedwig J. Williams and daughter, of Brooklyn, have been visiting old friends here.

The family of Albert Ellsworth is confined to their home on Valley road, there being three cases of diphtheria, there.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The first of the series of daily suppers which will be given in the association every weekday night until Christmas will be served tonight from 5 until 7 o'clock. A nominal sum is charged for the meal, which is both nourishing and thoroughly prepared by a competent cook. Business girls are particularly urged to take advantage of these hot meals.

Attention of association visitors is called to the exhibit and sale of the basketry class which is held in the association. The same will continue until Christmas. The display includes handsome trays, vases, candle holders, work baskets and many other useful articles. Enthusiasm in this department of work is growing among the members, and another class was started last night.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Plainfield playhouse patrons who have a fondness for a playlet that is really meritorious have a treat in store for themselves if they visit the Plainfield Theatre either this afternoon or tonight and see "Justice," a tabloid drama, heading the vaudeville program. It is presented by Charles Ford and a company of talented players, who bring out all the good points of the act. "Justice" tells a dramatic story that quickens the pulse and grips the heart, although the scene is one that in a sense is known to most everybody. A brief description fails to give it commendable mention, and it can be only appreciated by being seen. Scores of people numbered in yesterday's audiences declared it is one of the best things Manager Shannon has yet brought to his house. There are five other good things on the vaudeville program which began yesterday and is to end tonight. "Mystifying Lindemore" is one of them. He is the only recognized competitor of Harry Houdini, the celebrated handcuff expert, and with a supporting company of four people, present an offering that is distinctly original and absolutely puzzling. Anthony and Maguire, present another good number, this pair being comedians of the first water. They get off a lot of good stuff that keeps the audiences in roars of laughter. The bill is rounded out by the Two Brownies presenting a dainty vaudeville construction; Clayton and Roberts, singers and dancers, and Ethel Ponce and company, versatile singers and dancers.

SCOTCH PLAINS LIBRARY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Scotch Plains Public Library was held in the library rooms in Excelsior Hall, last night, at which officers were elected and reports received. During the evening an informal discussion on plans for a new library building took place but nothing definite occurred. The report of the librarian, Mrs. Samuel Hollingsworth, disclosed the fact that 369 new volumes had been added in the past twelve months and that 2,398 books were loaned in 1915. The total number of volumes in the library now is 2,500 and the trustees have frequently had to make enlargements in order to care for the increase.

All the former officers were reelected with the exception of Rev. J. Madison Hare, who was placed on the board of trustees to fill a long standing vacancy. The full list of officers for 1916 is as follows: President, I. G. Walker; vice president, William H. Ward; corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. M. Paff; recording secretary, Samuel Hollingsworth; treasurer, Philip Jahn; trustees, T. J. Nichol, I. G. Walker, Mrs. R. I. Thomas and Rev. J. M. Hare.

ARTICLES IN RITZ STORE REALIZE FAIR PRICES

Beginning at 10:30 yesterday morning, and continuing until late last evening, Auctioneer Robert Murray disposed of a large part of the contents of The Ritz store on West Front street. Good crowds were in attendance throughout the day and as a rule fair prices were realized. Most of the important fixtures were sold at sums far below their value, while articles of a minor nature and the stock frequently brought more than they were worth.

The auction will be continued throughout this afternoon and possibly this evening, it being the intention of The Ritz management to sell out completely. Mr. Murray has been handling the crowds in good shape and much of the success of the sale is due to his ability as an auctioneer.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY AND CHILDREN PRESENT PROGRAM

The Young Women's Missionary Society and a number of the children from the primary department of the Congregational church entertained the members of the Woman's Association in the parish house of the church yesterday afternoon. Piano duets were rendered by Miss Harriet Morgan and Miss Elsa Vail, while William Runyon pleased with a delightful violin selection. Christmas recitations interspersed the musical selections. Mrs. D. Y. Updyke had charge of the program. A feature of the entertainment was the drawing of ribbons by each attendant to which were attached little cards bearing the names of various missionaries of the church, to whom they will send Christmas greetings. Following the program a social hour and refreshments were enjoyed.

LOCAL MEN HELD ON MIDDLESEX CHARGE

Two Plainfielders Arrested in Alleged Gambling Cases and Two More Wanted.

Acting in behalf of the Middlesex county authorities, the local police at noon today took into custody George Margentino, of Watchung avenue, and Patrick Martin, of Golf avenue. The men are wanted in connection with an investigation commenced yesterday by the Middlesex grand jury, inquiring into certain alleged gambling houses operated on the outskirts of Plainfield. It is claimed that Margentino and Martin have conducted poker and crap games at Martin's home on Golf avenue which is just over the city line in Middlesex county. Two other men are also wanted by the Middlesex authorities and they will probably be apprehended this afternoon.

News that the investigation was under way first became known in this city yesterday when nine Plainfielders were summoned to New Brunswick to tell what they knew about gambling places they had visited. Most of the men were sent to the Grand Jury room and it is believed that what they said led to the arrests in this city today. Beside the Golf avenue place it is said the Middlesex county prosecutors' office is also considering a place in Dunellen which has been conducted as a club for several years.

It was said in certain circles today that at one of the places under consideration, big games have been the rule for the past year. The frequenters were from Newark, New Brunswick, Plainfield and other nearby places, many of the regulars being prominent in this locality. The rumor that "[illegible]" were not wanted, stakes in the crap games frequently involving a thousand dollars at a time.

DECLARE TELEGRAM WAS SUPPRESSED

Episcopal Clergymen Meet and Discuss the Proposed Panama Conference.

Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, was among those who attended a large dinner given by the New York Clerical Union at the City Club, New York, yesterday noon, the purpose of which was to discuss the issues raised by the action of the Episcopal Board of Missions in deciding to participate in the coming Panama Missionary Conference.

Among the prominent speakers were the Rt. Rev. Paul Matthews, bishop of New Jersey; Rt. Rev. G. Mott Williams, bishop of Marquette, Dean Robbins, of the General Theological Seminary, New York, Rev. Dr. Manning, rector of Trinity church, New York, and the Rev. Francis G. Hall, professor of dogmatic theology at the General Seminary. The speakers emphasized that the Board of Missions exceeded its authority in appointing delegates to the conference and also in doing so compromised the fundamental principles of the Episcopal Church. A significant point was made by the Bishop of Marquette in which he declared that the board was in possession of a telegram from Bishop A. W. Knight, in charge of the work in the Canal Zone, in which he urged the abandonment of the proposition to send delegates to the conference. This telegram, the Bishop declared was suppressed at the meeting of the board at which they decided to send the delegates.

READING AND THROUGH WESTERN TRAINS DELAYED

Some troubles on the Reading Railroad in the vicinity of Skillman upset the schedule of both Reading and through B. and O. trains early this afternoon, but just what caused the delay could not be ascertained. It was 2:20 when the B. and O. western train due here at 1:38 passed on its way to New York, and Reading trains were about one hour late. By 2:30 the regular schedule was resumed, although all through trains were more or less delayed owing to storm conditions.

FINE RENDITION OF "MESSIAH"

Valley Shall Be Exalted" was excellent, the tenor being a finished artist. Particularly timely and sung with wonderful expression was the solo, "Why Do the Nations So Furiously Rage Together," sung by Mr. Glenn. Probably the best of the chorus work was "All We Like Sheep," "Glory to God," and the concluding chorus, "Hallelujah," sung by all standing. S. Frederick Smith was the conductor of the evening, and his weeks of rehearsing with the chorus was revealed last night in the splendid unison of voices. Wendell Glover, of this city, accompanied on the piano throughout the evening.

The chorus was composed of the following:

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The management of Proctor's offers a splendid variety of good things this week. The vaudeville consists of "The Eduards," shadowgraph comedians; Ruth Moore in songs, Jack Barnet in pianologue, and Jack and Aldie Mason in a refined comedy skit. The photoplays are the best seen here in some time, and the two Triangle features, "Old Heidelberg" and "Fickle Fatty's Fall," stand out as the last word in motion photography, in addition to Theda Bara in "The Galley Slave," a real thriller, with fine acting. Thursday's bill will contain "The Classy Trio," an artistic musical offering by three charming misses. Then there will be the "Dancing Cullens," two boys who are past-masters of the dance craze. Also Louis Leo, the original suspended ladder celebrity, who offers a novel form of vaudeville entertainment. The Bruces, a colored team, will prove a delight. The features for the last half will be the Triangle successes from the Knickerbocker Theatre, New York, introducing Frank Keenan, the well-known Broadway actor in "The Coward," and Eddie Foy and the seven little Foys in "A Favorite Fool."

FRESH AIR.

The Chicago traction lines, after a couple of weeks' experimentation with "fresh air cars," have taken them all off. Even Chicago citizens balked at riding in elevated trains with the windows all open. Of course they love cold weather. But the first real nor'wester sweeping across the prairie drove them all to the shelter of the air-tight cars.

It was the health commissioner who started the fresh air car business. He professes to be satisfied with the trial, because, though it failed to lure the passengers permanently into the open air, it "stirred up opinion in favor of fresh air and encouraged citizens to sleep out of doors."

If it really persuaded people to sleep out of doors in a Windy City winter, the health commissioner has triumphed indeed.

As a matter of fact, the fresh air propaganda never flourishes in the winter time. The ordinary person can't help getting about all the fresh air he can use profitably, unless he seals his house hermetically with double windows. Cold air, being so much heavier than the warm air of a heated house or office, has a way of intruding in spite of efforts to bar it, as many a poor family knows too well. It is only the hotel guests and flat-dwellers and the over-rich householders that run much risk of asphyxiation.

Without depreciating the value of cold fresh air in the least, we may recognize that the problem of the average American in the winter always has been, and still is, merely to keep warm.

Because of electricity in the paper upon which the Press is printed, caused by the weather, yesterday's edition of the Press was two hours late and carriers to all parts of the city were greatly delayed by that and the heavy going. It is a tribute to their loyalty that a large percentage of the copies finally reached the homes for which they were intended, for they were forced to work under conditions which would discourage much older men. The cloud had a silver lining, however, for the telephone began to ring and it rang incessantly until all of the carriers got around. It was proof positive that the Press is read and appreciated, because it was missed. Many of those who called were irritated because they were afraid that they had missed their copy for the day, but when the apologies were offered and explanation made that carriers were bravely plowing through snow and slush to reach them, they graciously accepted the situation and agreed that it was worth waiting for.

Allen E. Beals' announcement that he will retire from the Boy Scout Commissionership has been received with genuine regret by all who are familiar with the splendid, painstaking work he has given to that fine organization. He has been identified with the movement since the establishment of the first patrol in this city, and under his able leadership the organization has grown until the council has control over the strongest group of the kind in any city this size in the United States. Plainfielders have time and time again had evidence of the excellent training which this work gives to the boys of the city, fitting them as few of the present generation of men have been fitted, to know outdoor life. Mr. Beals retirement is a distinct blow to the organization, but that the work will be well carried on under the direction of those who have been the retiring Commissioner's capable assistants is in itself gratifying.

When a lot of determined women start out to do anything they usually succeed. The Plainfield Belgian Relief Committee made up its mind it was going to have a portable house to take care of one hundred of the orphan children of "the battle ground of Europe," and they have already come within a few hundred dollars of their goal—so near, in fact, that they are sure that the money will be all forthcoming, and have ordered the house. While you are drawing checks at this Christmas tide to make others happy, just add one for this cause, and send it to the Daily Press, which will see that it soon gets in the right hands.

Eight hundred and sixty-six children are already on the list for the Community Santa Claus, and this is liable to be enlarged. Last year a total of but five more were cared for. Assistance for the grown-ups this Christmas will not be so needful, as many parents are earning enough to provide their families with necessities, but are not able to furnish Christmas cheer to the youngsters. Last night the local papers published a report of how the money given a year ago was used, and after reading that report we are sure that scores more of our generous people will send in their checks to make a sum of at least $1,500 available for the work this year. "Obey that impulse," as a well known advertisement says, and send along your contribution.

That the meeting tonight on National Preparedness will be well attended goes without saying. Plainfield people are fortunate in having the opportunity of having such able men as Henry A. Wise Wood and our fellow townsman William L. Saunders here to discuss this topic of paramount interest. Any person will be well repaid for wading through the largest snow drifts in the city to hear these two men.

If you have any doubt about the need for a Community Christmas Fund, read the account of what this splendid work will do for Bonnie Burn patients, which appears in our news columns today. And don't forget that the treasurer's address appears in the same article.

We could be arrested for saying out loud what we think of the fellow who clears off all his sidewalk except a little "two by twice" lump of hardened snow for unsuspecting passersby to stumble over.

Even the most ardent advocate of an "old-fashioned winter" must be satisfied with the way things have started off this season.

This sandwich of snow, slush and then more snow makes about as unpleasant conditions under foot as anyone can imagine.

The Paved-Street Town

In flitting o'er the country, with the hiker's ups and downs,
One sees a lot of villages, of hamlets, burgs and towns.
One promptly disremembers what their names are, like as not—
An alphabetic list of them would burden one a lot.
But one of them will always be upon one's mind engraved—
The brisk and busy village where the streets were neatly paved!

The others were a sea of mud in rain—in drought were dust;
One simply won't remember such a town unless he must.
The dirty, bumpy, rutty roads that made its thoroughfares,
If in one's mind they linger long, are redolent of "swears."
But he'll remember that one where the tightwads all were braved
By enterprising citizens who got the highways paved!

Whene'er I leave the bigger town and settle in some place
Where city-weary man may strike a gentler, smoother pace,
Will I pick out a wallow where the streets are lumps and ruts?
A score or more pish-tushes and an avalanche of tuts!
I'll hie me to that burg by which my fancy was enslaved—
The self-respecting, growing place whose thoroughfares are paved.

Beans

Beans are what some people don't know, about anything.

Also they are what you spill when you bungle.

The human bean is the most erratic bean there is,

Especially when stewed.

The Mexican bean has been written about a great deal by botanists.

But there's nothing in it.

That is, judging by the samples of Mexican brain work we've seen lately.

One might easily be led to believe, from the militaristic tendency down there, that the Mexican bean and the army bean are one and the same.

But they are not.

They are bush beans—ambush beans largely.

Even as vegetable beans swell when they are stewed, so does the human bean.

Doesn't it?

There is a mescal bean growing in Mexico that provides one of the most highly-spoken-of dry jags that we have ever noticed. (West Virginia papers please copy.)

No regular Indian's happiness is quite complete without a pocket full of that spirited fruit.

In California, where they raise more Lima beans than they do in Lima, O., or anywhere else, they call the brown bean that goes with a "French" dinner which also includes a bottle of dark-red ink, "frijoles."

Boston is where you run the baked bean to its lair.

In fact, they usually come in layers, alternated with fat pork.

Beans are held in great ridicule in the kitchen.

The cook is always stringing them.

Break It Gently To The Coal Man

A MEAT MARKET proprietor who recently had occasion to diminish the size of his market by one-half and economize in other sensible ways, gave out as the reason for this contraction a statement alleging that people were eating less meat than they did a few years ago; that the doctors are to blame for the falling off in the demand.

That is encouraging. Dr. Osler's dictum is at last accepted—we eat too much.

Now let's get after the coal man. He enjoys a monopoly in a commodity of which we consume more than is good for us. There is no doubt that most of us keep our dwellings too warm. It is high time to inaugurate a propagandum against the coal man.

The coal man looks with feelings of sadness upon the fad of sleeping on the up-stairs porch. He is no ardent advocate of the open-air school-room, nor the tent wards for the treatment of pneumonia, nor the outdoor treatment of anæmia, nervous trouble, tuberculosis and convalescence in general.

Coal dealers used to have a fatherly liking for thermometers. They even sent little thermometers around to old and prospective customers as a souvenir of the Happy New Year. But the propagandum against the catching cold delusion has changed all this. Coal dealers these days send customers nothing but the bill. It seems that people have been abusing the thermometers. Formerly everybody endeavored to see how high the mercury could be kept without breaking the glass; now the average householder tries to keep his living-rooms at the lowest possible temperature consistent with physical comfort. For it is getting noised about that the warmer the atmosphere of living apartments, the better for "cold" microbes and catarrhal troubles; the cooler, and hence the more moisture in the air, the healthier for everybody in the household, from baby to grandma.

This sort of movement the coal dealer has no patience with at all. Good common sense hygiene like our grandmothers practised is good enough for him—meaning an average household temperature of about eighty degrees, and the air as dry and lifeless as the Desert of Sahara.

Careful scientific experiments have shown that the fulness, fatigue and listlessness that comes on in a room where the air is "close" and foul, is largely, perhaps wholly, due to warmth and absence of a draft. Subjects confined in an air-tight apartment felt all the depressing effects of bad air after a reasonable time, but when electric fans and external cooling of the air were started, without admitting a breath of fresh air, the symptoms disappeared and the confined subjects felt greatly refreshed. Sixty degrees is about normal.

There are hard times ahead for the coal man.

Would fasting for a week be wise for a woman who weighs 190 pounds and has occasional twinges of rheumatism? She has a very hearty appetite.

Answer—It depends upon her height and her physical condition. We do not advise such fasts. We think moderate fasting better, such as cutting out a meal a day for a long time.

Poetry

POETRY is the science of teaching thought to shake its feet. It is one of the oldest of human habits, but has spread greatly in late years. Whereas at one time poets were so scarce that one poet was passed around among a thousand manors, they are now so plentiful that one editor has to be passed around among a thousand poets.

Poetry has existed since the time of Homer, a blind man, who peddled verses considerably B. C. A great many critics declare that the quality of poetry has not improved since then. However, the sale has improved greatly since Homer was in the business. Homer had to beg his bread, while Rudyard Kipling now has his metrical grouches cabled all over the world as pure reading matter and gets a thousand dollars a grumble with a bonus if it is against the United States.

In the very early days poets had to carve their verses on stone with a mallet and chisel. This was a splendid idea and kept down the output very nicely, as it took a poet a whole day to knock out a single line. Later on, however, ink was invented and since then poets have gotten entirely beyond control. The output has increased enormously and unruly and egregious poets are causing great distress—particularly in England since the war and Harold Begbie began.

To make poetry, one must have great emotions and a large supply of lithe, well-manicured words. Minor poets are supposed to make the lines rhyme and metre—metre being two-four time or three-four time or jig time or, in the case of Swinburne, Salome time. The greater poets do not have to rhyme their lines and there are some few so great that they do not have to use rhyme or metre either. The reader tells this kind of poetry from prose by the way he jerks and jumps while reading it.

Shakespeare was a great poet, and so were Tennyson, Byron and Goethe. One of the greatest requisites for poetic greatness is to be dead. The late Mr. Poe of America adopted this method with great success. However, America has produced very few great poets, because life is too pleasant over here.

In the very early days poets had to carve their verses on stone

Poetry soothes the soul and deepens the mind and lightens the heart. It also fills the stomach and keeps the mills running full blast. More than once, in the last few years, an American poet has kept a large breakfast food mill running day and night by putting two small lines of poetry in all our leading street cars.

Views Of The Press

"Preceding The Hounds"

THE bloodhound ranks as one of the oldest, if not the oldest, of all breeds of dogs, and from time immemorial his wonderful power of scent, possessed in such a marked degree by no other breed, has been made the subject of prose and verse. In bygone ages a hound of the bloodhound type was used in war; in later times they have been used for the detection of sheep stealers and other miscreants.

They are mentioned in history. After the Battle of Sedgmoor the Duke of Monmouth was tracked by bloodhounds, which were the means of his capture. Robert Bruce, the defeated King of Scotland, also was followed by these hounds, but he possessed a close and intimate knowledge of their characteristics and baffled them by wading down a stream, eventually drawing himself up into a tree by the aid of a friendly branch, and thus eluded capture. It is recorded, however, that the hounds tracked him to a ditch.

As late as the reign of James I., slough hounds, as they were then called, were used to track criminals, and frequently deserting troopers, while in the days of slavery it is well known that a species of these hounds, not the gentle beast we now know, were kept by slave dealers for the purpose of hunting down the escaped slaves. Bloodhounds (then called sleuth hounds) formerly were used in certain districts between England and Scotland which were much infested by robbers and murderers, but when the arm of justice extended itself to these regions the hounds fell somewhat in the background.

Some, however, were kept in the north in the lodges of the royal forest, where they were used either in the pursuit of wounded deer or in discovering deer and sheep stealers, who were by no means uncommon at that time. A case is on record which occurred in the New Forest in 1810. Several sheep had been stolen and some deer killed. A pedestrian getting over a stile into a field in the New Forest noticed that there was blood upon it. Thinking that this might have been from one of the deer that had been killed the previous night he gave information to the keeper. After some delay a bloodhound was taken to the spot and laid on the scent which he quickly picked up, eventually tracking the sheep killer to a heap of faggots outside of a cottage and refusing to leave the faggots or the cottage.

The sheep stealer was found inside the latter, and the deer and sheep were buried under the former. The circumstance is worth relating as it is estimated that at least sixteen hours had elapsed after the man passed over the stile before the dog was brought to the scene, and presumably many others had passed over the same spot. The pure bred bloodhound is a great rarity, and there are only a small number of them in this country.—Springfield Daily News.

People's Legal Friend

Silent Divorce Suits

The quietest divorce trial ever conducted in Nevada took place at Winnemucca. Not a word was spoken to or by the plaintiff. Both parties were deaf-mutes.

A wealthy landowner sued his wife, Rebecca, alleging desertion in October, 1910. They were married in November, 1909. She wrote this note and handed it to him:

"I can't stand living with you any longer. I wish you would leave here.—Becca." The plaintiff's attorney placed before him a written list of necessary questions, and the court waited while he wrote his answers to each.

A similar case was tried in Detroit. Working his fingers and facial expression almost unceasingly, a deaf-mute told the judge how his wife, who also is a mute, scolded and otherwise abused him. The story was told through a deaf interpreter. The deaf-mute won his suit.

Another witness, also a deaf-mute, told of things coming under his observation, and none of his testimony was objected to as being merely hearsay! The clerk administered the oath in his loudest tones to the deaf interpreter, who in turn worded it on his fingers to the witnesses. Asked to give his address, the complainant rapidly spelled and gestured something with his right hand. The interpreter, with a quizzical look on his face, turned to the judge and remarked, "Funny, but I never heard of that street," and the judge smiled and said he had not, either.

When the witness showed how his wife threw a bottle at his head, everybody ducked!—Selected.

Friends are essentials. Just as air and food and clothing are essentials. For is not he who has no Friends lacking and lonely and useless? Who ever heard of a useless man having Friends? Like attracts like. No one ever secured a Friend without first vibrating the Friend spirit within himself.

To get a Friend you must be a Friend.

The Friend art is a Heart art—all else cheapens it. He to whom we talk and confide and trust is but another of us transplanted where courage and cheer and kindness are ever alert. We go to our Friend and he lifts us up and we feel him coming back to his own again—in ourselves.

A Friend is a mutual partner with whom we need no signed agreements.

It is said of Carlyle and Tennyson that they would sit for hours together without the passing of a word and then separate. And both inspired and uplifted because of the meeting! To reach the priceless treasure veins of a Friend it is necessary to go deep. In the presence of real Friends a sort of Divinity hovers.

Back of the knowledge that you have a Friend is the secret of your ability to press on and win at your plans.

The glory of Friend joy depends not in numbers. Have but one real Friend—and it is enough! The one that will not refuse to understand you, or protect you, but that through the solid and harsh hour of test will but gladly be the other half of the fight with you.

He is your Friend who brings out of you the best of which you are capable.

You and your Friend plan no Parades. You are as you are. The sincerity of Service leads you on—makes each day as certain of Success as though it had already been completed and handed to you. If you are in doubt as to what you ought to be in the world, set yourself to the task of making of yourself a great Friend. Remembering that—

A lifetime is all too short in which to be a Friend and get Friends.

Weird War Chants

(From a British officer's letter in the London Spectator)

I have heard a lot of weird war chants already. One runs to the tune of "The Milky Cocoanut," which you may know:

Coo-oo-oolness under fire.
Coo-oo-oolness under fire.
Mentioned in dispatches for Drinking the company rum.
Coo-oolness under fire!

Then the little chanson du coeur, "I Want to Go Home."

I want to go home: (bis)
The coal-box and shrapnel they whistle and roar,
I don't want to go to the trenches no more.
I want to go over the sea,
Where the Kaiser can't throw bombs at me.
P-o-o-o-o-h! aye!
I don't want to die.
"I Want to Go Home."

There is another song called "Ee-aye-ee-aye-oh," really one of those cumulative farmyard songs, but these Welshman sing other verses besides to it. They have:

Now old Von Kluck he had a lot of men,
Ee-aye-ee-aye-oh!
And every man he had a little gun,
Ee-aye-ee-aye-oh!
With a "ping-ping" here,
And a "ping-ping" there,
And here a "ping" and there a "ping," "ping - pinging" everywhere.
It's old Von Kluck he had a lot of men.
Ee-aye-ee-aye-oh!

On the march, amid other weird and wonderful songs, they have a habit of breaking out with:

Three cheers for the Vaterland!
Ock, ock, ock!
Mein Gott!

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How the Brave Greeks Got Back To Their Ships.

"THE cave, the cave story, daddy," cried two eager children.

So daddy told them how Odysseus, the Greek wanderer, and his companions escaped from Polyphemus, the giant, after putting out the giant's one eye.

"Soon as daylight came the old giant got up off his straw, groaned with pain and rolled back the rock from the door to let out his flocks just as he was in the habit of doing. But he craftily planted himself by the door to feel if any one tried to go out. He was after another good Greek breakfest, you see! But Odysseus had thought of this and made his men harness all the rams of the flock three abreast with some willow twigs they found in the cave. With the old giant clawing his great hands along the backs of all sheep that passed it was going to be the nicest kind of planning to get out, you see."

"How did Odysseus manage it?" cried Jack, much excited.

"To the middle ram of each three harnessed together a Greek clung underneath, so protected by a ram on either side. Old Polyphemus felt on their backs and sides, but he never thought of feeling their bellies. So the clever Greeks all rode out under the rams. Odysseus waited till the last, to see that his men all passed by the giant safely. Still as mice they passed and when they got a few steps away from the old blind monster they quickly let go of the rams and drove a good part of the flock right down the hill to their own boats. Then they swiftly drove the sheep on board, hurriedly pushed off from land, and when they got a safe distance away Odysseus called back to Polyphemus, 'Old Cyclops, you must know that it was Odysseus who put out your eyesight in payment for your cruel deeds.'"

"What did Polyphemus say?" Evelyn wanted to know.

"He was so angry that he seized a huge rock, which stick up in the mountain side and, jerking it out of its bed high in the air, with all his enormous strength hurled it in the direction of the voice. Down crashed the huge rock, splashing into the water, just clearing the Greek boat by the width of your hand! The ocean at the plunge of the bowlder heaved the boat toward land, so that it almost got swamped by the waves. But Odysseus and his four sailors managed to keep the boat offshore, and when he wanted to tell the old giant some more truths his friends would not let him. When the small boat was safely making its way to the Greek ship at anchor Odysseus called back that he was safe, while old Polyphemus stood in his blind rage on the shore shouting curses to the vanishing Greeks."

Household Hints..

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

A Little Roast Pig for Holiday Dinner—A pig for this purpose should not be over a month old, as the skin of a larger pig will not develop the savory "crackle" which Charles Lamb has so graphically described. To be at its best it should not have been kept more than a day or two after the killing.

While the pig comes from the market all dressed, it requires a thorough washing in cold water, taking care that the eye sockets, throat and other portions are thoroughly cleansed. Then rinse in plenty of cold water and wipe dry. Season the inside with salt, pepper and a suspicion of powdered sage and press full of any stuffing desired. Fasten the dressing in by taking a few stitches with a long needle and coarse thread, drawing the skin together.

Roll the ears and fore legs in buttered paper to protect them. Bend the fore feet under the body and press the hind feet out backward and skewer in place. Some cooks prefer to bring both forward. Fasten the mouth open with a bit of hardwood or corncob, that it may afterward admit the traditional apple.

Rub the skin of the pig with butter, sprinkle with salt, dredge with flour, and place the roasting pan in a hot oven. Cook in moderate heat three hours or more, basting often.

Until there are drippings in the pan brush frequently with butter or olive oil, using a flat brush or piece of soft cloth tied on a stick. A quarter of an hour before removing the pig from the oven take the covers from ears and legs, that they may brown.

When the pig is roasted, lift onto a large platter on which has been arranged a bed of watercress and celery tops. Remove the skewers, take the wood from the mouth and put in a rosy-cheeked apple. Garland his neck with a necklace of cranberries or parsley, and serve.

As to the stuffing: Each to his state. Often a rich stuffing flavored with parmesan cheese is used, though the majority of cooks prefer a bread dressing, seasoned with any combination of herbs desired.

Roast pig, like roast goose, is served with tart apple sauce.

Chrysanthemum Salad for Holiday—Six small oranges, four tablespoons olive oil, eight tablespoons minced pimentoes, eight tablespoons minced celery, two tablespoons powdered mint or parsley leaves, one tablespoon lemon juice; mayonnaise; lettuce; dash of salt. This orange salad, which is not sweet, combines well with pig, duck, goose or lamb. Peel oranges and scrape off outside membrane. Cut through sections to the center, separating them from the tough skin, but cutting only to within one inch of the bottom, so that the sections will hang together. Cut out the separated membrane with the scissors and let the oranges stand twenty minutes in a dressing made of olive oil, lemon juice and salt. Then drain and fill centers with the minced celery and pimentoes, slightly mixed with mayonnaise. Arrange individually on lettuce, and strew the mint or parsley sparingly over the center and out into the petals.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

When Feet of Stockings Are Worn Beyond Repair—Go to the store and buy feet (they come in black or white and can be bought for five cents a pair). Cut the worn feet of stockings off at about the ankle. Baste in new feet, turn on wrong side and set on machine. The stocking is just like new, and if the person wears out the feet of the stocking and does not the leg, this simple thing can be done more than once.

Rubber Gloves—Rubber gloves will slip on and off more easily if powdered soapstone is shaken into them. Buy 5 or 10 cents worth at drug store and use old salt shaker to sprinkle the powder with. Kid gloves will last much longer if a little soapstone is used in them.

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. DA. LEONARD

Jaynes Is Contemplating Promotion for John Sutner.

"Well, what do you know?" asked Jaynes, as young Cane opened the office door and walked in just before closing time.

"I have found out just about what I expected to. Sutner's books had been tampered with to cover a shortage of three hundred and fifty dollars. We found six distinct alterations. Either Tyler is really a novice at the business or he meant to carry the impression that Sutner was and so did the work like a beginner. What do you think? Is he an old hand at burglary?" Cane dropped into a chair.

"It is hard to tell. It seems to me a real burglar would not waste his time on trifles like three hundred and fifty dollars. On the other hand who would think a man would risk his reputation on so small a sum?" Jaynes passed a box of cigars to the young man.

"Here's a light." He handed Cane a match. After the cigars were alight, Cane continued:

"I do not think Tyler had any idea that his reputation was endangered at all. His plot to lay all his dirty work on Sutner's shoulders was deep laid and stood every chance of succeeding. I see no way that Sutner could have proved his innocence. The figures were not like Sutner's, but would he not have deviated from his style enough to claim someone had been tampering with his books if the doctoring was discovered?"

The two men puffed away in silence for some time; then Jaynes said:

"I shall not lift a finger to ease up his sentence; shall not recommend any mercy. If he had been in hard straits and taken the money to tide himself over a rough place, as I thought Sutner had, I would have used my influence to make the sentence as light as possible. But a contemptible pup who would try to saddle his crime on an innocent young man and blight his career—no punishment is bad enough for him."

"Have they fixed his bail?" asked Cane.

"Yes, and the last I heard no one would offer to raise it. Feeling runs high against him. This is a slow little place, but the people are very excitable when aroused. No, Tyler will have time to chew the cud of reflection behind iron bars, and I for one am free to confess that I hope it is a foretaste of what is coming to him after the trial." Jaynes set his jaw and made a straight slit of his mouth.

"I've raised the wages of that plucky little stenographer," continued Jaynes, "and after I have proved to my own satisfaction that Sutner is in dead earnest about paying off his debts, I shall promote him. At present he will be happy enough to be free from the charge of theft."

"The gods certainly were on his side this trip," agreed Cane.

"Well, we may as well be going. I'll telephone to the garage to have the machine sent around." After Jaynes put the receiver down he busied himself locking up the office.

"Are you going to the Ellsons' party for Miss Osgood?" inquired Cane as they climbed into the car.

"Yes, Ellson said he hoped I would not stay away because Mrs. Jaynes was away in the east," Jaynes chuckled. "Anyone would think I cared a darn for forms. No, I leave that all to the women folks. They enjoy it, and they must have something to keep them busy."

Cane made no reply and Jaynes remained silent, his eyes fixed on the steering wheel.

"When I was married I earned fifteen dollars a week; we lived in a tiny house and I went off to work every morning with my dinner pail, and came back tired at night, but I came to a home. Gertrude did the cooking and we were very happy." Jaynes sighed. "My home is so rolled up in tinsel and gewgaws that I can't find it now. There is such a thing as being defeated by your prosperity."

"It would be hard to make most people believe that," said Cane.

"But it is the truth," reiterated Jaynes.

KITTY CHEATHAM GIVES PERSONAL CHARM TO WORK

There is scarcely a person who at some time or other has not heard of Kitty Cheatham, the writer and entertainer of children. This talented artist is to appear at the Plainfield High School, Tuesday afternoon, at a Christmas matinee, under the direction of Charles Prescott Poole. The Chicago Tribune, in speaking of Miss Cheatham, says:

"Talent, determination, and pluck—these have been the successful instruments in Miss Cheatham's artistic conception and training. She entered a field practically created by herself, and has achieved a success that few women, working in so quiet a way, have ever reaped. The personal charm which she gives to her work is hers by inheritance, the poetic touch she imparts is a part of her own spiritual nature, and the pronounced thoroughness of study and good methods observable in her productions are the outcome of her determination to succeed, which found no educational work too severe. . . . The understanding which she puts into her work, and the ability to interpret the poetry of every melody she selects to sing, is one of her strong points. One can understand and appreciate her method far better after hearing her spiritual interpretations of the old negro folk-songs, the exquisite French song groups, the tender English ballads."

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Elsie Janis, madcap of musical comedy, will be seen on the screen of the U. S. Astor Theatre today and tomorrow in a very humorous film version of one of her successes, "Nearly a Lady." Miss Janis, it is safe to say, has a larger following than any other musical comedy star among Plainfield folk and all will turn out to see her in her latest screen vehicle, which is understood to be quite the best in which she has yet appeared. "Nearly a Lady" unfolds a tale full of laughs and with just enough thrill to be interesting. Of course, Miss Janis has an opportunity to play the part of a young man which she does to perfection. Fannie Ward, in "The Marriage of Kitty," will be featured Friday and Saturday at the Astor Theatre. It is a five-part Paramount picture made by the Lasky Company.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal when it burns, leaves material, which, if not completely behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a [illegible] indigestible material, which, if not completely eliminated from the system each day becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water, with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember, inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Trenton, Dec. 15.—The city of Trenton yesterday won its fight against the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Corporation, when the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners decided that the company's attempt to discontinue the sale of six tickets for twenty-five cents was unjust and unreasonable and ordered the sale of strip tickets to be continued.

LEALS READY FOR SEASON ON COURT

Team Picked and Schedule Arranged—Squad Lightest in History.

OPEN AGAINST ALUMNI

First Game Will Be Played in the Y. M. C. A. Week from Next Monday—Heavy Opponents Left Off the Schedule This Year.

Leal's School will this winter be represented by the smallest basketball team in its history, but the fact that the dearth of husky candidates has necessitated dropping all but the lighter opponents from the schedule is not dampening the Front street schoolboys' enthusiasm. Manager Eric Parmly has arranged his schedule, and although the games with the two local high school quintets will not be played this season, a number of the smaller private schools will be on the calendar.

The first team will line up with Archie Hawthorne and Vincent Ball in the forward positions; Judson Blake, center, and "Yap" Borden, Fred Wilson and Gano Larssen, guards. The other members of the first team squad are Jack Zelie and Duncan Mellor. All the players have been practicing regularly, with the exception of Wilson, who has been taking things easy in order not to strain his left leg, which was broken in the Morristown-Leal's baseball game on Crescent Oval last spring.

Prospects for a big season are not as bright as in former years. The team suffered severe losses by graduation last June, and has not a single member of either last year's first or second teams available this winter. The boys who will represent the school on the court this season were in the third squad last year.

The annual Alumni game, which is always played Christmas week, when the former wearers of the "L" are home from College, will probably be played in the Y. M. C. A. gym, Monday afternoon, December 27. This game always excites more interest among the graduate body than any other date on the schedule, and is generally the occasion for a reunion of the grads. Chauncey Stewart, captain of the fast team that represented Leal's last season, is marshalling the Alumni forces.

FIRST MATCH OF DUNELLEN BOWLING LEAGUE PUT OFF

The first match of the newly-organized Dunellen Bowling League was scheduled for last night between the Baraca Class and the O. Z. T. fives, but was postponed, the O. Z. T. failing to appear. The next game will be Friday night, when the P. O. S. of A. and Foresters roll. There are six teams in the league.

ST. JOSEPH'S BASKETBALL TEAM OPENS UP NEXT WEEK

Now that their attention is no longer taken up with things theatrical, the boys of St. Joseph's Club are preparing to get their basketball season under way. The season will be opened with a game and dance in Saengerbund Hall, Thursday night of next week. The opposing team will be the Plainfield A. A., arrangements for the game having been completed last night.

A captain of the St. Joseph's five will be elected at the bi-monthly meeting of the club next week. William Seidel is manager of the team, and wants games with all local teams. His address is 80 Jackson avenue, North Plainfield.

SPORTING NOTES

The tennis season in the southland is under way this week with a big tournament at Pinehurst as the opener.

The news from the big baseball meetings at New York and Chicago gives us a line on the dope for the coming summer.

The final arrangements for the mill between Freddie Welsh and Charlie White will be made tomorrow, when bids from fight clubs will be considered.

Buenos Aires promises to be the coming center of the boxing map. Unhampered by laws, the promoters there are after the best American matches.

Cuba again comes on the racing map tomorrow, to rival the Juarez meet. Many Eastern horses were sent to Cuba, rather than take chances of trouble over the Mexican border.

The opening sessions of the professional billiard title of Canada are being held today at Montreal. Arnold Ibbotson is defending the title against Ernest Leigh. The game is 4,000 points at English billiards.

Barnstorming by big league players will be sure to come up today at the big league meetings. Ban Johnson says he will make good his threat to urge a ruling against the post-season tours.

The chess enthusiasts are getting anxious for that internationol tournament which will bring the masters together in New York next month.

WEINERT-SAVAGE BOUT OFF.

The boxing bout between Charlie Weinert and Jim Savage, which was to have been held at the Pioneer Sporting Club tomorrow night, has been cancelled, owing to the illness of Weinert. In place of this bout one has been scheduled between Al Reich and Al McClusky.

FIRST MOVE MADE FOR BASEBALL PEACE

National and Federal Loops Agree—up to American Leaguers Today.

The first important step toward peace between organized ball and the Federal League was made in New York yesterday at a dinner given by President John K. Tener, of the National League. Toward the end of the dinner the National League club owners were joined by President James A. Gilmore, of the Federal League, and Harry F. Sinclair, owner of the Newark Federal League Club.

The terms of the compromise which would settle the baseball war and put the game back on a normal basis were discussed, in all their phases, in a conference which lasted until the early hours of the morning. President Tener, after the meeting of the National League at the Waldorf-Astoria, yesterday, made a significant statement, in which he admitted that the two factions had come together to discuss peace.

It is now up to the American League, which meets in Chicago today. At yesterday's meeting of the National League Barney Dreyfus, president of the Pittsburgh Club, was delegated to go to Chicago to put the peace proposition up to the American League club owners at their meeting today. If the plan for peace is agreeable to the American League the Federal League will withdraw the suit now in the hands of Judge Landis.

The National League, it is understood, stands ready to go ahead and make peace under conditions which will be agreeable to the Federal League.

Just what the results of baseball peace would be, according to the baseball owners, are:

Withdrawal of the Federal League anti-trust against the National Commission.

Passing of the Federal League.

Placing of the International League on a firm foundation.

End of exorbitant salaries for players, some of which have exceeded $10,000.

Better baseball in the major leagues than has been seen for three seasons.

Sale of Chicago National League Club to Charles H. Weeghman, of Chicago, now owner of Chicago Federals.

Sale of St. Louis National League Club to Philip Ball, of St. Louis.

Advent in organized baseball, of some of the wealthy backers of the Federal League.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 21 degrees; 11 a. m., 24 degrees; 1 p. m., 29 degrees.

PLAYERS QUIT Y. M. C. A. TEAM

Five Members, Including the Captain, to Organize An Independent Team.

2 MEETINGS TONIGHT

Remainder of Y. M. C. A. Squad Will Reorganize Tonight, While Seceders Will Also Gather to Make Their Plans.

Following a break between William P. Taylor, captain of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball team, and Physical Director Robert Meermans, who is coach of the team, five of the seven members of the squad, including Taylor, have seceded, and have announced that they will meet tonight to form an independent team. A meeting of the remaining members of the team has also been called for this evening, when a new captain will be chosen, and plans for a reorganized quintet to play out the schedule will be made. The breach between captain and coach came during the game with the Chapel Club, of Summit, Saturday night, and was occasioned by a difference of opinion as to whether Ted Gavett, a Cornell grad, or George Townley, a former Springfield Y. M. C. A. College man, should play one of the guard positions.

The players who will join the independent forces are all former North Plainfield High school stars. They are Bill Taylor, "June" Dunning, George Townley, Ash Burner and "Polly" Love. Three of them are former N. P. H. S. basketball captains.

The Y. M. C. A. team this year gave promise of having a very successful season. Victories were scored over the Newark Deaf Mutes, Recreation Five, N. P. H. S. and the Summit Chapel Club, while the games lost were to two unusually strong opponents—the Chathams, of Brooklyn and the Knights of St. Peter, of New Brunswick.

New men who will be secured for the association team will make the quintet stronger than ever, according to Manager Benny Berse. Several former college stars will be added to the line-up.

New Brunswick Elks garnered two wins at Rutherford last night. The defeat dropped Rutherford out of the tie with Plainfield and Jersey City for sixth place, while the champions failure to win all three games dropped them to third position in the percentage column.

Teddy Coyne, who is employed by the Public Service Corporation, had to stay home last night to help get New Brunswick's trolley system running on schedule, and Matt Hogarty, of the Brunswick Junior League team, went with the big team in Tipperary's place. The travelers from College Town didn't get on the alleys until after 10 o'clock, the Rutherford trolley they were on being stalled between Newark and Kearny. No trains running, the Brunswickers taxied it back to Newark, and reached home between 2 and 3 a. m.

The horseshoe Burtons annexed the first game by two sticks, 825 to 823, the substitute, Hogarty, pulling the game out of the fire with a triple in the tenth. Rutherford went up to 939 in the second, while New Brunswick walked away with the rubber, 920 to 802.

MARTY O'LOUGHLIN ON CARE OF GOLF CLUBS

Don't Put Them in Corner or on Shelf—Hang Them on Wall Near Ceiling.

The right way to care for golf clubs when they are stored for the winter is a subject with which few golfers are acquainted, and at this season of the year, when most players are stowing their sticks in the attic to await the coming of spring, a few suggestions from Marty O'Loughlin, professional at the Plainfield Country Club, are both timely and valuable.

Very few amateurs take proper care of their clubs, and no one in Plainfield is more competent to talk on this subject than O'Loughlin. One mistaken idea many people have is that clubs should be placed on a flat rack, such as a closet, but this, the local pro says, will cause the shafts to warp almost as quickly as standing the sticks in a corner.

The most important precaution to take is to store the clubs where the temperature is dry and even. Dampness, or sudden changes in the temperature of the room in which the clubs are put, is harmful. In most houses, the attic is the best place, and the suggestion is made that the temperature is most even near the ceiling.

Clubs should be hung perpendicularly against the wall. Golf sticks on display in stores and shops are generally hung between two nails, occupying the same relative position as when they are in the bag.

To prevent the heads of the irons becoming rusty, they should be well oiled with 2-in-1, or any of the other machine oils. Before oiling, emery paper should be used to remove all rust.

The shafts should be rubbed with linseed oil. There is nothing to be gained by wrapping the heads in muslin, or any such other material.

GOLF PROS TO ORGANIZE.

A meeting of three prominent amateur golfers will be held shortly after the holidays to form an association for the benefit of professional golfers throughout the country, on the same basis as the amateur association, which is a very body. This move by the professionals and amateurs in the country are behind the movement, and the short existence of the best professional association, which died a premature death, has put some life into the game and gone a long way toward a better condition.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.—Adv.

BOY SCOUTS TO HEAR DR. BEAL

Noted Physician to Describe Field Service in the Warring Countries.

WORK IN THE TRENCHES

Scout Council Plans to Secure a Paid Camp Master Who Will Conduct Actual Digging Campaigns on Camp Site.

Arrangements have just been made for the appearance in this city of Dr. Beal, of Worcester, Mass., who will speak before the Boy Scouts of Plainfield sometime during January. Dr. Beal went to England and took charge of the hospital established there by the American women in that country, among whom were Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Lady Beresford and others.

Dr. Beal is home for a rest and recently has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harding, of Terrill road. He has promised that either on his way down or upon his return from Washington in January, when he makes his report to the National Red Cross, he will stop off in this city and address the Boy Scouts and their parents on the general subject of preparedness and the great need for it as he saw it in actual field service in the warring countries.

Coming here fresh from the Red Cross work in the trenches, where he has had exceptional opportunities to study conditions, Dr. Beal has a stirring story of scenes in the greatest war in history. This is only the beginning of a number of treats in store for the Boy Scouts of this city. Next summer it is the plan to have a paid camp master at the Boy Scout Camp, who will conduct actual trench digging campaigns on the camp site, arrange and execute defensive strategical programs, yet without the use of arms of any sort save those used in constructive and not destructive defensive work, namely, the pick, the shovel, the signal flag, the smoke signal, heliograph, wireless telephone and telegraph, leaf, stone and twig tracking and signalling and work of that character. At the same time the scouts will emphasize the "Do a Good Turn Daily" feature of the scout program, and develop manhood first.

It is expected that at the next meeting of the Scout Council within a short time, A. V. Searing, Jr., first deputy commissioner, will be elected first commissioner to succeed Allen E. Beals, who has just resigned.

C. M. NAGLE TO CONDUCT "CUT RATE" DRUG STORE

Attention is called to the advertisement of C. M. Nagle, the West Front street druggist, on page two of the Daily Press. Mr. Nagle has just taken over his old established drug store at West Front and Grove streets, and will conduct a "cut rate" drug business in the future. The store has been completely re-stocked with all first-class goods of standard quality as a glance at his advertisement will show. As a special inducement on Saturday he will give free with every dollar purchase or over one box of Bene Mead or Quality chocolates.

MISS VAN ZANDT WINS FIRST PRIZE IN CONTEST

Considerable interest has been manifested in the prize offering of the College Club for the best poster advertising the play, "The Bird's Christmas Carol," which is to be given in the Hartridge Auditorium tomorrow. Pupils from various schools throughout the city became interested in the contest and submitted drawings to the committee appointed by the College Club to award the prizes.

Miss Marion Van Zandt was the winner of the first prize, and the second prize was presented to Miss Lois Goetter. Both of these young women are juniors in the Plainfield High School, and the work submitted by them occasioned the highest commendation of the prize committee.

The varied posters submitted and the high quality of the work, together with the clever execution of original ideas, bespeak the highest praise for the art department of the local schools.

URGE CONGRESS TO PROVIDE DEFENSE

Knights of Columbus Members Pass Strong Set of Resolutions.

At the mass meeting held in the Knights of Columbus Club last night, strong resolutions were passed urging the United States Congress to take steps to bring about a state of preparedness in this country. The resolution was presented by Hugh J. Treacey, and was unanimously adopted. It reads:

"Resolved, That the Citizens of Plainfield, N. J., assembled in meeting under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, urge our representatives in Congress to provide immediate and ample means of defence in the navy and army so that the nation may be in a secure position against aggression."

PLAINFIELD COUPLE IS MARRIED IN BRIDGEPORT

According to announcements made by relatives today, Miss Anna Flatley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Flatley, of West Fifth street, and Howard VanArsdale, son of R. B. VanArsdale, of West Front street, were married at Bridgeport, Conn., Tuesday afternoon. The couple will make their home at Bridgeport, Mr. VanArsdale having secured an excellent position in that city.

Both young people have many local friends to whom the announcement will come as a surprise, no previous intimation having been given. The bridegroom was associated for a number of years with his father in the tile business on Park avenue. Until a short time previous to her marriage, the bride was employed in the Wirth Bakery on West Front street.

$900 MARK IS PASSED BY COMMUNITY XMAS FUND

Over $900 has been received by Treasurer DeWitt Hubbell at the Plainfield Trust Company for the Community Christmas Fund, the contributions coming in at the rate of $100 or more each day. It is hoped that fully $1,500 will be available by Wednesday of next week, as no expenditure are made in anticipation of revenue. Those who have sent in checks since yesterday include Mrs. George Babcock, Rev. John Y. Broek, Duncan W. Taylor, Mrs. J. Herbert Case, John S. Johnston, Edward J. Patterson, Mrs. Wilcox, Brockholst K. Miller, Joseph W. Sanford, E. L. Benny, Mrs. J. N. Charles, Mrs. Edward L. Finch, John Doull Miller, Councilman George S. Clay, Robert Rushmore and Richard D. Williams.

Every letter received from a child asking to be placed on the list for gifts is carefully investigated, and the distributing committee is striving to avoid aiding any persons whom individuals are planning to help. It is urged upon Plainfielders that if they plan to aid any family or children at the Christmastime, that they notify the Community Christmas by mail, so that there can be no conflict.

DR. STRONG RECOVERING FROM ATTACK OF GRIP

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, who has been confined to his house for something over a week on account of a severe attack of the grip, is now steadily recovering, but through the urgent request of his deacons is making no attempt to preach next Sunday, and arrangement have been made for supplying his pulpit Sunday morning and evening.

Dr. Strong had just begun to outline his annual Christmas story-sermon when taken sick. Strangely enough he had chosen for his title "When Santa Claus Was Sick." This narrative discourse will now be delayed until another year, but Dr. Strong has some interesting announcements to make concerning other story-sermons which will appear in these columns. This disappointment at the holiday season he feels as keenly as the many kind friends who have listened to him year by year since his coming to Plainfield, but within a very short time he will present other story-sermons, possibly a series, that will in interest fully equal any that he has yet delivered.

BRIDE AND GROOM RETURN.

Mr. and Mrs. Ormond Van Nest, who have been living in Detriot since their marriage several months ago, have returned to Plainfield and are now residing with the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Van Nest, of Mariners place.

ONLY HOPE LIES IN PREPAREDNESS

Wood and Saunders in Strong Arguments Before K. C. Club Members.

200 HEAR ADDRESSES

Events Have Shown That There Can Be No Guarantee of Peace for Any Country, They Agree, Except In Readiness For War.

A crowd of almost 200 people braved danger from slipping on the icy streets to attend a meeting at the Knights of Columbus Club, last night, where they heard strong arguments for preparedness from Dr. William L. Saunders, of Plainfield, and William A. Wise Wood, of New York, both members of the United States Naval Consulting Board.

The keynote of the address of Dr. Saunders was preparedness as an insurance. Mr. Wood dealt with the possibilities of invasion this country faces from Japan on the west coast and Germany on the east, and marshalled a startling array of facts to prove that preparedness is cheaper than war.

A. E. Kenney, chairman of the committee that arranged the meeting, presided. Mr. Kenney said that one of the sentiments that the Knights of Columbus fostered was patriotism, but that patriotism had taken on a new meaning and that it now includes preparedness. He first introduced Dr. Saunders, who said in part:

"The first thought in my mind as I stand before you to speak for a sane plan of preparedness for our countr

DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY CAUSES $100 FIRE DAMAGE

In response to a telephone alarm at 7:48 last night, Chief Doane sent the automobile apparatus from headquarters to the home of Taylor Cooper, colored, on lower Central avenue just south of Elizabeth street. The roof of the house he occupies, a two-story affair, had caught fire from a defective chimney, and when first noticed a threatening blaze was in progress. The firemen fought the flames with the chemical engine alone, although they laid in more than one thousand feet of hose from the nearest hydrant as a precautionary measure.

The damage will amount to about $100, and is practically all on the building. Cooper's furniture escaping harm through the use of chemicals. The premises are owned by the Plainfield City Realty Company, of which Percy Brown is manager. The loss is covered by insurance.

While either going to the fire or coming back, a tire chain on No. 2 engine pulled off without the firemen noticing it. It has not turned up at headquarters as yet, and Chief Doane would be gratefully obliged if any one finding it brings to his office.

CAME BACK TO DUNELLEN TO CASH TWO BAD CHECKS

E. A. Malherbe, a former employe of the H. K. Corbin Company, sewer contractors, at Dunellen, is wanted by the authorities of that place on a charge of forgery. Malherbe visited the borough Saturday night and cashed two checks signed by H. K. Corbin, which are declared to be forgeries. The victims were Mrs. Frank Margentino, who runs a fruit store on North avenue, and Thomas Frosbie, the young man in charge of the Union News stand at the local station. Frosbie cashed a check for $5.75 and Mrs. Margentino gave the forger $7 on a check for $14.

IRON CROSSES STOLEN FROM HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Somewhere in the United States there is a man, or party of men, posing as heroes of the European war, and they are wearing stolen decorations. The Plainfield police department has received a circular letter from the chief of police at Jefferson, Missouri, stating that three Prussian and Austrian crosses have been stolen from the rooms of the Missouri Historical Society. One is a commander's cross, Order of Austria; another a first class grand cross, Royal Prussian Commander's Order, and the third, a Royal Prussian Commander's cross of the second order. A reward of $100 is offered for the return of the stolen decorations.

Edward Pennock, of Dunellen, is again defendant in a new suit brought agains thim by the American News Company, for newspapers sold him. The case will be tried in the New Brunswick District Court before Judge Freeman Woodbridge. The first suit terminated in favor of Pennock who was represented by Attorney Frederick F. Richardson.

The defense then raised was that the plaintiff, being a New York corporation, had not complied with the New Jersey law requiring foreign corporations to file a certificate in this State in order to do business. It was the contention of Attorney Richardson that not having filed such certificate it could not sue. This was sustained by the court and the action dismissed.

The new suit is brought as an assignee of a New Jersey corporation which assigned its property to the American News Company. It is on this new ground that the present action is brought. The case is returnable Monday, December 20. Attorney H. C. Runyon, of this city, represents the plaintiff company.

WENT TO CRAP GAME IN AUTOMOBILES

Forty Machines Were Parked in Woods Saturday Night.

Thomas McNamara, the third of four Plainfield men indicted by the grand jury at New Brunswick, Monday, for running a dice game on Golf avenue, was arrested by the local police this morning. George Margentino and Patrick Martin were arrested yesterday and taken to New Brunswick. McNamara goes this afternoon, an official from the jail there having come for him at noon. According to stories told the grand jury, the "crap" game was a well-patronized semi-weekly event, men coming from New Brunswick, Dunellen and even as far as Newark. Last Saturday night there were more than forty automobiles parked in the wooded section where the "crap-shooters" were wooing the fickle goddess of chance, and it is said that thousands of dollars changed hands weekly. One more Plainfield man was indicted, but has not yet been arrested.

MISS JOY HAS IMPORTANT ROLE IN CHRISTMAS PLAY

Miss Helen Joy, who is to take one of the leading roles in "The Birds' Christmas Carol," which the College Club, of this city, will produce in the Hartridge Auditorium, tomorrow afternoon and night, has had considerable experience in dramatics, and her appearance promises to be one of her best impersonations of the role taken. While a student in Wellesley College, Miss Joy was the president of the Shakespeare Society, where her distinctive dramatic ability was on numerous occasions enjoyed. Plainfield audiences have had the opportunity on several occasions to see the charming young woman, her most notable appearance being in "The Rose and the Ring," produced by the College Club during the Christmas season last year.

The "Carol Bird," which will be impersonated by Miss Elizabeth Ralston, could have no more suitable person for the part. Miss Ralston will be remembered by many as the swimming teacher at the Plainfield High School last year. She is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. S. Ralston, of Netherwood.

Contrary to usual precedent, several young men are scheduled to appear in the production this year. Harlan Pratt taking the part of "Mr. Bird," and Bruce Buttfield the role of "Uncle Jack."

"CONFIDENTIAL EXCHANGE" ESTABLISHED BY C. O. S.

Persons giving Christmas dinners or remembering children with toys are earnestly urged to use the "Confidential Exchange" of the Charity Organization Society. The process is simple: Either telephone 193 and give the name and address of the family you are intending to remember, or send a letter marked "Confidential" to the secretary of the society at 323 Babcock building. All information received at the "Confidential Exchange" will be kept confidential as the name implies and these names will not be put on any public list. The exchange is open to anyone who wishes to use it for the purpose of preventing duplication and making the good things at Christmas time go as far as possible. Every individual, church or organization should make use of this exchange.

KITTY CHEATHAM'S NEW BOOK IS PUBLISHED

Kitty Cheatham, who is to give a Christmas matinee at the Plainfield High School, Tuesday afternoon, December 28, is now rejoicing upon the publication of her new book. The collection presents manuscript compositions and verses written and presented to Miss Cheatham for exclusive use. She is adapter, translator, collector and interpreter, all in one, emphasizing the eternal spirit of childhood.

Miss Cheatham has appeared with the Philharmonic Orchestra three times and with the Philadelphia Symphony. According to her critics she has blazed the trail and is the creator of a new art. She has sung before the granddaughter and grandsons of Queen Victoria. Her first recital took place ten years ago and since then she has given thirty-five recitals in New York.

AUSTRIA WOULD DODGE THE ISSUE

Reply to U. S. Note Suggests Exchange of Opinion, It is Said.

U. S. NOT SATISFIED

Secretary Lansing Refuses to Comment Until Communication is Officially Digested—Diplomatic Relations May Be Severed at Once.

New York, Dec. 16.—A cable from London says that the Austrian reply to the note from the United States regarding the Ancona case has been delivered to Ambassador Penfield at Vienna. This information was contained in a despatch received in London. According to the message the reply states that the Austro-Hungarian government is prepared in principle to enter into an exchange of opinion with the American government and leaves it to the Washington cabinet to draw the individual legal maxims which the commander of the submarine that sank the Ancona is alleged to have violated. The government expresses sympathy with the American victims, the despatch says.

Note Is Coming In.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The Austrian reply to the Ancona note is being received in code at the State Department, according to reports. It is said to be considerably over one thousand words in length. It probably will be deciphered in the next few hours and be laid before Secretary of State Lansing this afternoon.

United States Will Remain Firm.

While firmly declining to make any comment on the situation it was apparent today that Secretary of State Lansing and his advisors fully realized the gravity of the situation, treating the unofficial reports of Austria's action to be correct. The United States now finds itself in a position from which it will require all of Secretary Lansing's diplomacy to encompass a graceful retreat. It is the general belief, however, that the United States is prepared to take a strong stand, going to the extreme of breaking off diplomatic relations entirely with Austria-Hungary. If that is necessary, in anticipation of Austria's action, work is said to have been started on a second note to Vienna. This is said to be even more emphatic than the original and to insist upon Austria's compliance with the terms laid down. Intimation is given in no uncertain language, it is said, that the Washington government will not temporize on the demands made.

Austrian Charge Gets Busy.

Baron Zweidinek, the Austrian charge de affaires, called at the State Department shortly after noon to confer with Secretary Lansing regarding Austria's reply to the Ancona note. The Austrian charge de affaires was with Mr. Lansing just ten minutes. He refused to talk to newspapermen as he left the Secretary's office. Asked if he had delivered Austria's reply on the Ancona note to Mr. Lansing, he said he had nothing to say. Secretary Lansing stated that his conference with Baron Zwiedinek was confined to general discussion of the Ancona case. He would not discuss the subject further.

New List of Contraband.

Further extension of the list of contraband, exportation of which is forbidden from Great Britain, was made known today in a cablegram from Consul General Skinner at London to the State Department. Magnesite caustic beeswax, heading coal and coke, copper and silica bricks, are among the articles exportation of which is now prohibited.

Bulgars Cross Greek Border.

The Hague, Dec. 16.—A despatch from Saloniki received here says that Bulgarian cavalry have crossed the Greek border west of Bivgeli towards Majdala. French marines, it is added, have been landed at Saloniki.

Germany Calls Its Boys.

Amsterdam, Dec. 16.—It is reported Prussian youths born in 1898 have been ordered to report for examination for the Landstrum beginning today.

Troops Sent to Berlin.

It is stated that 2,000 infantry have arrived at Berlin to reinforce the garrison and maintain order.

Air Fighting In Turkey.

Constantinople, Dec. 16.—Turkish war statement:

Dardanelles front—Artillery duelling, combats with bombs and aerial fighting are all taking place upon this front."

Italians Land In Albania.

Rome, Dec. 16.—Italy expeditionary force sent to the Balkans has been landed in Albania. Official announcement was made today that the

AMERICAN LEAGUE AGREES TO BASEBALL PEACE TERMS

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 16.—The end of the baseball war came in sight yesterday when American League magnates, at their annual session here, agreed to the peace terms arranged at New York between the Federal and National Leaguers.

Within a few days, according to President Johnson, the details of the agreement, which does away with the Federals as an independent league, will be arranged, the American League having consented to appoint a committee to meet envoys from the others.

All owners were ordered to clean their sidewalks, and do this at once and they were told that every part of the walk must be made absolutely free from snow or ice. They have been leaving blocks of snow in the center of the walks and this is in violation of the law.

Mayor Calkins issued further warning to property owners in the following statement:

"Notwithstanding the public notice issued last Tuesday, and similar notices issued last winter, there is throughout the city a very general disregard of the sidewalk ordinance and citizens who habitually clean their walks of snow and ice are complaining at police headquarters against other citizens who habitually do not. Several hundred violations have been reported. It is therefore but right to warn all persons that the ordinance is going to be enforced this winter, but reasonably, and after the several notices that have been given out, there will be no ground for annoyance if some of our highly respected citizens are politely requested to appear in court for violations of the ordinance.

"Once more I will summarize the law, which applies to sidewalks in front of vacant as well as occupied lots

"1. Ice must be covered with ashes or sand within four hours of daylight after it forms, and removed within twelve hours. Snow must be cleared from the sidewalks within 12 hours of daylight after it falls. There is a penalty of $5 for each offense, which may be imposed on either the occupant or the owner of the property. A violation of the ordinance might also make the offender liable for damages to any person injured by his neglect.

"2. The ordinance also empowers the street commissioner to clean all sidewalks which have not been cleaned within said twelve-hour period. The cost is charged on the tax bills to the owners of the lots and this is in addition to any fine which may be imposed on the owner himself or the occupant for violating the law, which requires him to keep the walks cleared.

ENDICOTT ENTRIES WIN.

One of the biggest winners in the Union County Poultry Show, which opened yesterday in Elizabeth, were the entries of the Endicott farms, of New Market.

DECREE OF DIVORCE GRANTED.

A divorce was granted yesterday by Vice Chancellor Backus to Mrs. Helena Brose from Henry C. Brose, of this city, in the Court of Chancery at Trenton.

FORD'S PARTY NOT ALLOWED TO LAND

England Will Not Even Permit Communication With Shore.

London, Dec. 16.—The liner Oscar II. was still at Kirkwall this afternoon. No communication between the ship and shore was permitted, and the British naval authorities would allow none of the passegers or crew to land.

GESANG AND TURN VEREIN PLAN HOLIDAY AFFAIRS

The entertainment committee of the Gesang and Turn Verein, of which Jacob Schlick is chairman, has practically completed arrangements for the big holiday affairs that have always been held in Saengerbund Hall. More elaborate plans than have been consummated heretofore will be in evidence this season, and the members of the organization are looking forward to a real old-fashioned German Yuletide.

The firt of the affairs is scheduled for Christmas Day. In the afternoon there will be the usual Christmas tree for the wives and children of members, and in connection with which there will be a pleasing entertainment. After presents have been distributed by Santa Claus, the main hall will be cleared for dancing, and this will continue until midnight. Refreshments will be served during the evening, and the various diversions of the hall will be thrown open to members.

The second of the committee's holiday affairs is scheduled for New Year's Eve, when the annual New Year's dance will be conducted. On this occasion also the lower floor will be thrown open to members, and beside prize bowling, progressive pinochle and a German supper, there will be a number of surprise features. Chairman Schlick is assisted in making the arrangements by Herman Klinsman, Herman Theis and Julius Fischer, these four comprising the entertainment committee.

OPPOSE WAR REVENUE BILL.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The minority report was submitted to the House today by the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee opposing the proposed extension of the war revenue law which will expire on January 1 next.

1,600 BALES OF COTTON BURN.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 16.—Several box cars, 1,600 bales of cotton and a warehouse were destroyed by fire in the Central of Georgia Railway yards today. The loss was estimated at $100,000.

A Punctured Metaphor.

"Did you write this note to Maria?" asked the young woman's mother.

"Yes," replied the susceptible youth.

"And you considered it proper to remark that her teeth were pearls?"

"It's customary to say things like that."

"Well, young man, let me tell you something. If Maria's teeth were pearls she wouldn't be wastin' 'em on ham and cabbage an' chocolate drops. She'd string 'em an' wear 'em around her neck an' take her chances on an imitation set of household jewelry for everyday work from the store."—Washington Star.

Bridal Customs In Spain.

In Spain a bride has no girl attendants to stand at the altar with her, but instead a "madrina," or godmother. Neither does she have a wedding cake nor any festive going away after the ceremony. The wedding pair depart quietly to their new home, where they remain until the following day, when they start on their honeymoon. Before departing they pay a formal visit to their respective relatives.

Stark Realism.

An advance agent for a theatrical production was speaking to a newspaper man with reference to the wonderful powers of the leading woman.

"Do you know," he said enthusiastically, "that in New York, when she appeared as the dying mother in the last act, an insurance man who had written her a policy for $10,000 actually fainted in the theater!"—New York Times.

His Mistaken Idea.

"But, my dear," remonstrated Mr. Meekum, "there's a good deal to be said on both sides."

"No, there isn't," answered his spouse. "I've told you what I think about it, and that's all that is going to be said."—Chicago Tribune.

Aiming to Please.

Husband—Why in the world do you have our bills come in weekly instead of monthly? Wife—You told me that you didn't want them so large, didn't you?—Boston Transcript.

Safety First.

"They conceal the orchestra in this restaurant. Why?"

"Well, wait till you hear it play."—Exchange.

TRAPS FOR UNWARY VICTIMS.

Waterside Houses With Floors Opening at the Push of a Lever to Drop Its Fleeced Occupant Into a Watery Grave—Ghost Boats of the River.

London's great artery, the river Thames, hides many a grim story under its murky waters, some of them centuries old, some of them merely incidents of yesterday. Just as no other river has quite the same wonder as belongs to the Thames, so no other river is so wrapped in mystery, so surrounded with stories of tragedy and crime.

Many of the old waterside houses which rise sheer with the bank, contain rooms in which the floor is built directly over the water—floors upon which one could stand in apparently perfect safety while some one in an adjacent room worked a lever which caused the floor to open and his victim to drop into the river.

A gambling club is said to have met in such a room once a year to play for tremendous stakes. The party played on until one of their members was ruined. Then the rest of the men went away in silence, while the ruined man went down into the dark waters.

One of the old waterside houses at Wapping, too, is among the bits of the Thames with a reputation for being haunted. A flight of steps leads from the house to the river, but these steps are disused, and the door at the top of them is walled up. Despite this, often people passing by on the river at night time swear to having seen two men come through the walled door and down the steps. Then, after lowering some bundle into the waters, they return to the house. The identity of the men and the contents of their bundle remain among the insoluble stories of the Thames.

The Thames police force of about 300 men is employed to guard against all sorts of additions to the mysteries of the Thames, and their task is of far greater magnitude than might be casually imagined. Most imperative is it that each member of this force shall be an expert swimmer and understand the right methods for dealing with persons rescued from the water.

A very large number of persons are saved from intentional and accidental drowning in the river every year, an average number somewhere between seventy and a hundred. But the number of persons who are "found drowned" strikes a still greater average—it is never less and often more than 100 in a year—besides which it is well known that the waters of the river close above many persons of whom nothing more is ever seen or heard.

But if stones could speak the bridges across the Thames could tell many pitiful and grim life stories, especially Waterloo bridge, which has such sad associations as to have gained it the sobriquet of "The Bridge of Sighs."

Incidentally, Waterloo bridge is another part of the Thames which is said to be haunted. It is not so very long since a more than usually clear sighted man went to the police with the information that he had seen a woman jump from the parapet of Waterloo bridge. He had been crossing the bridge late one night, when he had noticed a woman in black walking in front of him. Suddenly he saw her make an appealing gesture, but before he could reach the woman she had disappeared.

That was all. There was no splash following her disappearance, and no result came from the search which was made. Those who are familiar with the history of the river said that the man had seen the ghost of Waterloo bridge—the tragic woman in black, of whom nothing is known save that she haunts the London "Bridge of Sighs."

Another mysterious thing about the Thames, which no amount of police supervision will destroy, is the "ghost" boats which have been and are frequently seen in various parts of the river. It is a fact that river police patrols have actually given chase to such ghost ships, to find there is nothing substantial to be found on reaching the place where the ships had seemed to be.

One of the most curious stories of this kind is that of the mysterious boat which was seen making its way along the water toward London bridge one day, about a quarter of a century ago. As she neared the bridge there was a tremendous explosion, a vivid burst of light, and then—nothing! Not so much as a splinter of wood remained of the boat which had been, and the story of it lingers from that day to this as one of the hundreds of tragic unknown things which form the secrets of the river of mystery.—London Answers.

DOMESTIC SCIENCE CLASS SERVES FIRST LUNCHEON

The domestic science class of the Plainfield High School served its first luncheon at noon yesterday in the practice cottage which is attached to the school. Those who attended the luncheon were Superintendent of Schools Dr. Henry M. Maxson, Lindsey Best, principal of the school; Henry Hubbard, vice principal, and Arthur Hopper, supervisor of the industrial work of the school. All were enthusiastic in their praise of the various dishes, which were prepared entirely by the young women members of the class, under the direction of Miss Lucille Jackson, the domestic science teacher.

The interior decoration of the practice cottage, which is situated in the rear of the High School building, facing Arlington avenue, is rapidly nearing completion. The furniture of the home is being made entirely by the members of the industrial class; the curtains, table linen and painting by the young women of the school. The brass nut set and the raffia basket centerpiece used yesterday were made by the arts and crafts department, and the place cards by the art department.

LEAL'S WILL PLAY ONLY SEVEN GAMES

Shortest Schedule Ever—Not a Single Private School Opponent.

Only seven games will be played this season by the Leal's School basketball representatives. Manager Eric Parmly has four games carded to be played here and three out of town. It is unlikely that any more contests will be billed.

As usual, all home games will be played at the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Probably for the first time in the history of Leal's, not a single private school team will be encountered. The only opponents, outside of the Alumni, are the High School quintets of Springfield, Roselle, Morristown and Cranford. The first game will be played one week from next Monday and the last contest is scheduled for March 13.

The schedule is as follows:

December 27—Leal's School Alumni at home.

The Eagles' pinners will probably be Bill Smith, Jim Mahoney, Albert Jaeger, George Miller and Harry Radin.

PLAINFIELD ELKS BOWL UNDEFEATED HOBOKENS

Plainfield Elks bowlers will go to Hoboken tonight. The Germans haven't lost a series this season, and have been in first place for some time. They have taken the odd from four teams, including the champion New Brunswick outfit, and scored a clean sweep against New York. The Hoboes are humming along at a 927 average pace just now and as they have always given the locals a hard fight on their home alleys the series tonight will demand everything Plainfield can muster in the way of good pinning and good luck if the Queen City Bills are to put a halt to their hosts' winning streak.

GIRLS' AND BOYS' GAMES ON COLUMBUS HALL COURT

The first game for the Catholic basketball championship of the city and borough will be played at Columbus Hall tonight between the Knights of Columbus and the T. A. B. Society teams. A girls' game between the Plainfield Five and St. Mary's Social Club will also be decided.

RECREATION FIVES WIN THEIR GAMES

P. H. S. Girls Defeat Men From Saurer—Boys Lick Pick-up Combine.

NEITHER GAME CLOSE

Saurer Employes Can Make But One Point Playing Girls' Rules—Ricketts and Marston, and the Misses Hummel Star.

The two Recreation teams scored decisive victories over their opponents in the Plainfield High School gymnasium last night, when the Pegs defeated the Incos by a score of 25 to 11 and the Recreation Five downed the Plainfield Stars by a score of 32 to 12.

The P. E. G. S. played the preliminary game with the Incos, a team composed of the young men employes of the International Motor Company's office, and although one half was played with nines and one without, the young women showed their adeptness in both phases of the game. During the first period the Incos were held to a solitary foul goal, aged by Captain Wiegand, while eleven points were totaled by the Misses Hummel. Given the privilege of going all over the floor the young men fell more at home during the second period, and during this session made five pretty field goals, while the Pegs tallied six goals and two baskets from the fifteen-foot line.

Miss Helen Hummel was the individual shooting star of the Pegs while Captain Wiegand, who in passing says he played only [illegible] games in his life, numbered five of the eleven points scored by the Incos.

Captain Ricketts' aggregation had little difficulty in running away with the Stars, the latter being woefully lacking in team work, passing and shooting. The Recreation Boys had things their own way throughout the whole game, and shots taken at the most difficult angles resulted in neat baskets. Allegar, Marston and Ricketts did the principal scoring for the home team, while Moulton was the highest point scorer for the Stars.

MOTHERS' WORK

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

Across the World.

Across the whole world a fire is lighted,
It laughs and it leaps at every turn;
In its color and cheeriness old wrongs are righted;
For love, too, is kindled where Christmas fires burn.

Across the whole world a wreath is suspended,
Its wonderful sweetness is everywhere shed;
Its green is for memories, brightened and blended,
With joy in its ribbons of Christmassy red.

Across the whole world is written a story
Of little old Bethlehem, starlit and fair,
And through it, re-echoing good-will and glory,
The song of the angels resounds everywhere!

A. E. A., in Primary Education.

The organization of parents is the grandest trust company which history will have to record of this century, for if the parents of this country combine to make homes what they should be, who dares limit the power for truth and righteousness which, as a nation, we may become? "The standard of a nation's greatness is set in its homes."—Child-Welfare Magazine.

Teaching Morals.

The following selection, taken from a lecture on Reading, given by Carolyn Everts, before a Teachers Institute, contains valuable hints for parents as well as teachers:

"A charge is made, which does not seem to be entirely without foundation, that the present generation is seriously lax in its attitude toward responsibility, respect for the property of other people, the keeping of promises and the telling of lies. This laxness is attributed to many different causes, among others, that it is an age of doubt, or, rather, let us say, an age in which hypocrisy cannot live, when authority must show its credentials. Grown-ups are reconstructing their moral codes, and during this period of reconstruction are preaching less strenuously and with less dogmatic conviction than the last generation, the moral standards they would have their children accept. The children are quick to detect this uncertainty of conviction, often even before the grown-up is aware that it exists, with the result that the fifteen-year-old flounders, and, without the background of experience that steadies his elders, finds himself utterly without a working moral code, except such as may be unconsciously formed for him by his companions He dares not live by a standard that is obviously higher than that of his mates, and, therefore, too frequently pretends a sanction of wrongdoing which he does not feel, but which he mistakenly imagines his companions do. His views upon moral questions are either very hazy or extremely narrow. They can be clarified and their justification tested by expression Let us not preach at the child, but let us give him ample opportunity to preach to himself and to his classmates. He craves such expression; he needs it, they need it; the reading class gives him his best, most natural, and perhaps only opportunity. His companions there will not be slow to approve or disapprove, and it is their censorship which counts most with him. Let it suffice to say, that, at the present time, that poems such as those referred to (Longfellow's 'Builders,' Kipling's 'If,' Lowell's 'Commemoration Ode,') which provoke naturally a discussion of moral questions, if presented with tact and earnestness, and with time enough to allow for much freedom of expression and digression, if need be, do seem to have power at times to tremendously influence the ideals that go to form the permanent moral code which boy or girl of early adolescent age is beginning to rapidly construct. Because these poems are difficult, and not easy to make entertaining, is no sufficient reason for neglecting them They are potent with what may be strong impetus in the right direction at a critical time."

Mrs. Ford in Peace Move.

Mrs. Henry Ford has given $10,000 to be used by the Woman's Peace party in starting a mothers' movement toward a conference of neutral nations for a just settlement of the war. A country-wide appeal will be made, asking women's organizations to join in wiring President Wilson urging him to call the conference.

SILK INDUSTRY IS IN GRAVE DANGER

Thousands of Workers in New Jersey May Be Thrown Out of Work.

Thousands of mill workers in the State of New Jersey are in danger of losing their jobs as a result of a scarcity of dyes, according to a circular which has been sent out by Ramsay Peugnet, secretary and treasurer of the Silk Association of America. The letter follows:

"At the direction of the board of managers of the Silk Association of America you are advised that the committee on dyestuffs has reported a most dangerous shortage in dye materials, and of late in all other chemicals, and that there is absolutely no help in sight.

"Silk manufacturers should be most careful in assuming guarantees for deliveries on dark colors, and every effort made to encourage the use of light colors.

"Notify your salesmen and customers of the serious situation. Deluge your Congressmen with requests for immediate relief and protection for an American dye industry.

"Your committee on dyestuffs is and has been striving its utmost to alleviate the perilous condition without seeing any immediate results.

"The emarbgo on logwood which has just been announced adds another appalling menace to the market.

"You are again urged to use great caution and to be prepared for any emergency, as the dyestuff situation may at any moment cause a catastrophe to the silk industry and put its more than one hundred thousand operatives out of work."

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

New York—Compulsory education for all adult immigrants is advocated by Dr. Finegan, assistant commissioner of elementary education in this State. He believes the State should immediately take part in educating the foreign-born, the adults being treated on the same ground as the children of foreigners. Dr. Finegan would have this training given by the public schools, the adults being compelled to attend night sessions.

Philadelphia—To comply with the new child labor law, the Pennsylvania schools are preparing to inaugurate continuation schools on January 1 The State Departments of Public Instruction and of Labor and Industry are co-operating to obtain the establishment of the continuation schools. According to Governor Brumbaugh, at least three-quarters of the children working in this State will be provided with continuation school facilities next month, when the new law goes into effect. Every boy and girl under sixteen years of age, employed after January 1, must attend one of these classes at least eight hours a week.

Boston—Educators throughout the country are awaiting the report of the survey of the public school system of Boston, which is now being conducted by the Finance Commission. Dr. James H. Van Sickle, superintendent of schools of Springfield, and formerly of Baltimore, is in charge of the survey. Associated with him are Dr. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Russell Sage Foundation; Lewis H. Carris superintendent of industrial education at Trenton, and E. E. McNary, supervisor of manual training at Springfield. The survey is not so extensive as that conducted at New York, but is apt to have beneficial effects, for it is being conducted under auspices not attached to politics.

Cambridge, Mass.—The youngest professor of the American university world is Norbert Wiener, of Harvard, nineteen years old. He is assistant professor of philosophy at Harvard and is instructing men who are his elders. At thirteen he was graduated from Tufts College, and at seventeen he won his philosophy degree at Harvard.

Chicago—Chicago University is planning to fittingly observe its twenty-fifth anniversary next year. The university was incorporated on September 10, 1890, and Dr. William R Harper, of Yale, was called to the presidency of the new institution. It started with a faculty of one hundred and now has a faculty of four hundred The grounds originally comprised twenty-five acres, and the university now comprises 165 acres, including the grounds of the Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis Fifty thousand students have been graduated

That prison reform, now agitated in America, is an old measure, is shown by a report from Japan that the Japanese tried out the idea over two centuries ago. Self government among the prisoners of Tokio prisons was established in the seventeenth century. It worked out satisfactorily, but was abandoned for some reason not known.

AT 70, COLLECTS PENSION.

San Francisco, Dec. 16—Charles Ashton, a seventy-year-old Grand Army veteran, has collected his past pension payment, and will appear in court tomorrow to plead guilty to the charge of stealing a team of horses. He was granted a stay of pleading by the court so that he could collect his pension money. The old man has served terms for murder, forgery and burglary. Governor Markham pardoned him while he was serving a sentence for complicity in the Whitecap murder cases. A few weeks ago he was up again for grand larceny, and pleaded not guilty. He stated he would plead guilty after getting his pension, and will be brought into court tomorrow, and sent to his old cell at San Quentin.

TRAVELLING COAST BATTERIES.

One of the valuable lessons of the war that the army ordnance experts are applying to our own defense is the use of mobile guns. Germany and Austria have shown that it is feasible to mount big guns on motor vehicles, facilitating their transport wherever there are good roads. There have also been interesting examples of field pieces mounted on armored railroad cars of special construction.

It is pointed out that this principle could be applied advantageously to our coast defense. Coast guns need no longer be fixed immovably to one spot. The defensive power of our present forts can be indefinitely multiplied. Guns similar to the great German 42-centimeter howitzers can be kept at stragetic points and moved quickly to any spot along the coast, provided there are good roads or tracks. The problem is simply to build the guns, mount them on motor trucks or railroad cars, and construct solid highways or stratgetic railroads along exposed stretches of coast where there are no railroad tracks already.

A single big gun of this mobile type might be able to prevent the landing of an invading force even under the protection of warships, for land guns always have the advantage of guns of the same caliber mounted on ships.

"WATCH YOUR SNEEZE."

The sneeze is doomed. At least, its liberty is to be greatly restricted. Librarians have requested us not to sneeze into library books and now the school children of New York have opened a "watch your sneeze" campaign.

It's a good move to interest school children in sneeze control. What the youngsters set their enthusiasm against generally has to go in the long run. Witness the "swat the fly" movement which has swept the country in the past few years and which really is making life miserable for the house fly.

Perhaps the fly will never be completely swatted from the face of the earth. But the campaign against it has undoubtedly had many good results. Not the least of these is the spreading knowledge of the fly's germ-carrying habits and the necessity of getting rid of the fly as permanently as possible.

While the sneeze may not be quite such a dangerous enemy to man, it is nevertheless a germ-scattering medium. It's main danger lies in the careless and unconcerned attitude of people toward it. Now that a campaign against it is really begun people may come to realize its dangers. "Watch your sneeze" is a serious and sensible warning.

Councilman Juan A. Babcock, chairman of the local police committee is right when he says that a man should not be barred from serving on the force, just because he is a fraction of an inch under the required height, if he fulfills all other qualifications. If those having charge of the work used a little discretion in the matter, and forget the fractions, there would not be so much trouble about getting competent men to protect Planifield property. As it is now, there are a number of vacancies and men are frequently being drafted to work in New York banks and other more lucrative positions. If their places are to be filled less attention will have to be paid to such a detail as the height.

Very few local automobile owners have applied for new licenses for their cars, Agent McCann having issued but sixty up to yesterday. In all probability the motorists do not realize that on January first, 1916, every car must be equipped with new numbers, and no "month of grace" will be allowed next year, as has heretofore been customary. Commissioner Dill has sent notice out that every car must have its new number on January first, and he says that he will enforce the rule. Plainfielders said that there was a great demand for a representative of the Motor Vehicle department in this city, but up to the present time they have shown little appreciation of the opening of the office.

Two days without a single case in police court, and following such a storm as that of Monday, which usually causes men to imbibe too freely, is some record, and speaks well for the character of Plainfield people.

AEROPLANE IS TWELVE YEARS OLD TOMORROW

Washington, Dec. 16.—Twelve years ago, on December 17, 1903, the first successful flight of a human being in an aeroplane driven by mechanical power was accomplished by Orville Wright. Over the bleak sand dunes of Kitty Hawk, N. C., Wright sailed for thirty-six seconds. It was not a long flight, but it served to confirm the Wrights of their success and to prove that navigation of the air in heavier-than-air machines was a reality.

That first flight marked the beginning of a new epoch in history. During the dozen years that have intervened, much has been done in the development of the aeroplane, in the face of its pitiful toll of life. There is much yet to be done, for the navigation of the air is yet in its infancy.

The Wrights, Wilbur and Orville, had been studying the problem of flight for several years before they had completed their preparations for a trial trip away from terra firma. Men of greater scientific knowledge and attainments were trying to reach the same end. But the American young men "beat them to it," by patient and persistent labor and the use of their good American brains. The European countries were spending fortunes backing their scientists, and placing every known aid at their command.

After the first actual flight, it took the Wrights three more years to bring their machine to a state of perfection sufficient to convince a credulous public that flight had been attained. It was not until 1908, when Wilbur Wright took his air-craft to Europe and made flights in all the larger countries there, that the world was aroused to a full consciousness of the fact that the problem had been solved.

France fairly jumped at the invention and paid the Wrights a large sum of money for rights. The French had been working on dirigibles and aeroplanes with indifferent success for several years. With their quick intuition, they had sensed the coming of the flying machine. The mere notion of fighting the Germans in the air and among the clouds touched the imagination of the French people, and within the past year they have seen the actual performance.

All of the nations were aroused to the use of the flying machine as an offensive and defensive arm of service in war, and as a result the air scouts are playing the most important roles in the present great conflict. The eye of the great eagle that first soared at Kitty Hawk, N. C., a dozen years ago, has changed the strategy of war.

The Foxy Caller

She always comes back after something—you never are sure she has gone!
She'll stand 'round and talk till you're certain she's said all there is, and some more.
Then she'll sail for the street in a hurry and, if no one's been "putting you on,"
She'll be back at the door, after something, just when you exclaim "What a bore!"

She's caught half the folks in our village, expressing opinions of her—
I can't see just why she desires it; it surely can't give her much joy.
She's heard women say, "Well, thank heaven, she's gone!
 Why she clings like a bur!"
And she heard Milly Penrod once shouting, "What else CAN she say to annoy!"

Now those who are wise always watch her from window, veranda or door,
To see that she's surely departed ere some one cuts loose with the truth.
And then while the sentinel's guarding they freely proclaim her a bore;
Until there a "Shoosh" from the picket, they knock the old dame without ruth.

This George Stuff

Anyone who wishes to make the world smile ought to see to it that he is christened George. No sure hope for him if he isn't labeled thus.

You see George Fitch's keen essays every day; George Bernard Shaw is so funny he sometimes smiles at himself; George Cohan has produced more laughs than any other stage man except George Ade; George Wettin, king of England, admitted some time ago that it was a horse on him, and nearly everybody except the queen laughed; George Arliss makes the ghost of d'Israeli smile for the public; George Gibbs writes and makes pictures with a good vein of comedy; George Randolph Chester gave us Blachie Daw, who is far funnier than Wallingford. And George Madden Martin never would have so stirred us with Emmy Lou if she had adopted any other pen name. Then think of George Harvey and George B. McClellan.

George is the great comedy name, all right, and we are sore because our ignorant parents overlooked such a fine bet and gave us no chance whatever.

Your Card Of Identification

IT may well be that eventually every individual in the country will have his thumb-prints, Bertillon measurements and personal description filed in the office of the Prefect of Police. This would be a good thing for us all.

Merely as a matter of self-defense it is a wise precaution to carry on your person some sort of identification mark, especially if you happen to be a traveller or a subject of any chronic disease.

Think what a lot of trouble the fellow escaped who was subject to sudden spells of unconsciousness and wore about his neck a chain to which this notice was attached: "If found unconscious, the bearer, John Jones, of Hickville, desires no operation. His appendix has already been removed four times!"

Seriously there is good reason for carrying some identifying mark at all times. Sudden injury; poisoning by gas, drugs or otherwise; apoplexy; uremia; diabetes; alcoholism; epilepsy; amnesia; certain heart diseases; simple fainting; it is a common experience in every city to find persons unconscious with one of these conditions, and too often the identity of the victim is established only after much trouble, if at all.

Of course, the individual may be stricken without warning, but in most cases there is at least some inkling of the possibility of such an emergency to warn the victim of the need of taking precaution.

One of the simplest marks of identification is the writing of name and address in the labels of clothing. There are numerous other marks of identification which will serve the purpose, provided no deliberate effort is made by an assailant to remove such clues. The victim of a crime, however, is more readily identified than the victim of disease, for the simple reason that machinery for the former purpose is always available, whereas the problem in the latter case is usually left to a few disinterested observers.

Put your John Hancock in your clothes and protect yourself against one of those "strange disappearances" which occur so frequently in the news of the day.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Peroxide Dangers

(1) Does peroxide injure the tissues or tissue cells if used in fresh wounds? (2) Does it (as claimed by some) tend to scatter germs or infection when used as a mouthwash, instead of killing them? (3) Do you consider it more injurious than useful as an antiseptic?

Answer—(1) Yes. (2) Not in the mouth, but in wounds, especially punctured or deep wounds, it tends to drive infection deeper. (3) Yes. We think its value very limited, and we consider it unadvisable for promiscuous use. A few drops of tincture of iodine in a few tablespoonfuls of water would be preferable as a mouth wash or lotion for infected wounds (not fresh wounds).

Suspended Function

Will you please suggest what would be proper treatment for suspended function in the case of a young girl whose health seems below par?

Answer—Absolutely nothing should be done except to learn the cause of the poor health and have that properly treated without particular regard to the suspended function.

Pie

PIE is a solid shot fired at the stomach by the Pilgrim Fathers. Like all other ordnance, however, it has greatly increased in deadliness by modern science.

Pie originated in New England, but, like most of New England has gotten a long way from home. It is now found from Sawgatuck to Saguenay and from Knight's Key to Bellingham, Wasn. It is composed of a Harveyized shell filled with dessicated groceries, the whole roofed over with a manhole cover made out of dough. When the lid is clamped on, the pie is kiln-dried until it will turn a fork point. It is then cut into wedge-shaped pieces and is eaten with avidity, and sometimes with a knife. Thus pie may be said to be the entering wedge of dyspepsia. (Fifteen minutes for recuperation here.)

There are many different kinds of pie, including the open faced, hunting case, jail window, frosted face and ventilated pie. There are also spoon pies, fork pies and finger pies. All pies, however, are similar in two respects. They have a bottom crust, corresponding to a concrete foundation, and they are round. It is no more possible to make a square pie than it is to make a square barrel. A square pie would probably not explode while baking, but it would not come out right when cut, and the eater would very likely become confused and choke to death on the unfamiliar angles.

Of all pies, apple pie is perhaps the most popular. A sour apple pie alleviated with cloves and sugar and cream will produce more internal joy and exaltation than $10 worth of goose livers. Berry pies are also delicious, but fragile, and no man who has misplaced a berry pie during a picnic can ever forget it. The pumpkin is lowly and unloved until it is worked into pie, after which it becomes the theme of poets. Mince pie is a meat and fruit hash with an internal revenue flavor. Lemon and custard pies are noted for their delicate construction, but are exceedingly handy as missiles in a pinch. Pies are also made out of vinegar, cheese, rhubarb, prunes, persimmons, pawpaws, grapes, chickens and oysters. A pie was once made of live blackbirds in England, which is about as near as the English ever came to solving the pie problem, anyway.

Four pieces of pie do not constitute a lunch

Pie is severely attacked by European critics and is also regarded with much suspicion in America. This is because pie is being made by too many rank amateurs, and is being eaten by too many enthusiasts. Four pieces of pie do not constitute a lunch, as many men fondly imagine, and a peck of miscellaneous material on a gutta percha foundation is not a pie, as too many housewives are prone to believe. Pies are like paintings—when they are good they are magnificent, but the world has no place for bad pies or bad paintings, either.

Views Of The Press

The Typical Farmer

A DISPATCH from Wichita this week tells how three confidence men "sold" the Scottish Rite Temple there to a "typical farmer." This "typical farmer" told the police that "them slickers" had got him to sign some paper "so long, so wide, and so folded" and had obtained all his money.

The Kansas Industrialist says it doesn't know the attractive young man who wrote the story; it infers that he is attractive, because newspaper men regularly are, and young because of the story that he wrote. The Industrialist ventures to infer further that he has never seen anything nearer a farm than the Wichita school garden, or anything nearer a farmer than the "hecker" cartooned in the metropolitan daily on the exchange table. This idea of a typical farmer is the cartoonist's idea—a tall, gaunt, stooped old man with scraggly, gray-brown whiskers through which the southwest breezes blow. When this typical farmer comes to Wichita, his dirty duster flaps wildly behind him as he sets his brown valise down on the sidewalk, sticks his twine-tied green umbrella under his arm, and stares up at the tall buildings. Then the "slickers" get him.

"Now there are such farmers," the Industrialist goes on to say, "living in districts remote from railways, telephones and the other appurtenances of civilization. But they are as far from the typical farmer as day is from night. The typical farmer of the United States has property worth $8,000. He takes a daily newspaper. He has a telephone. He obtains market quotations from the nearest city whenever he pleases. He owns an automobile or a good team and carriage. He has a razor, and uses it. On the farm he wears such clothes as the town mechanic wears. In the city he dresses like other citizens. You couldn't sell him the linen duster of the cartoon, let alone the Scottish Rite Temple of Wichita. He stops at a good hotel and doesn't attempt to blow out the gas or the electric light. The typical farmer is a business man with an investment equal to that of the typical town business man, and he is becoming every day more and more familiar with the modern principles of business efficiency."—Emporia Gazette.

A Lucid Explanation

Recently a certain Baptist church in Mississippi, property of a colored congregation, was destroyed by fire. The tracks of the Illinois Central Railroad Company were directly in front of the church building which was on the west side of the track, and almost directly in front of the church, on the opposite side of the track, stood a saw-mill plant.

Upon the day the church building was burned sparks were emitted from the smoke-stacks of passing locomotives, and from the smoke-stacks of the saw-mill.

The church sued the railway company, alleging that its church building was destroyed by sparks from the railroad company's locomotives. The railroad company pleaded that the church building was destroyed by sparks from the smoke-stacks of the lumber company, or from some other cause.

The plaintiff opened its case and introduced as its first witness a negro, who was clothed with the title of trustee and deacon. He was much impressed with the importance of the occasion, and, after being sworn, testified as follows:

"How far was the church from the track?"

"I don't just remember, but——"

"Well, about how far? Wasn't it as far as the saw-mill?"

"The saw-mill is further than the church. It's 10 or 15 feet different in each side."

"What is it that is 10 or 15 feet?"

"Difference in the length of the church from each side of the railroad."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean that it's further on one side over on the east side of the railroad—difference in the east side and west side—there is 10 or 15 foot difference in the length of them."

"Length of what?"

"Difference there is in them."

"Length of difference?"

"Yes, sir."

"What is the difference?"

"I couldn't tell you exactly unless I had a statement of it."

"Do you really know what you are talking about?"

"Yes, sir, I know."

"Well, explain it."

"I'll explain what I am talking about. I mean to tell you that on the railroad side where the saw-mill is, it's further from the railroad than the railroad is from the church on the other side."

"You mean to say that the saw-mill is further from the railroad than the church is from the railroad?"

"I mean to tell you that the saw-mill is further back from the church than the saw-mill on this side of the church is from the railroad. I'll show you what I am talking about. Here's the saw-mill over here. (Using a blotter for an illustration.) I mean to say that the saw-mill here is further back from the railroad here than the church is over here from the railroad on the other side. You caught my idea?"

After the laughter in the court house had somewhat subsided the lawyer managed to say:

"I didn't know whether you had any or not."

"That's what I'm trying to show you," replied the dark witness, beginning to show signs of confusion.

"You have succeeded, then," replied the lawyer, and the court burst out once more into uncontrollable mirth.—Case and Comment.

The "George" Habit

If you only realized how much you miss in Pleasure, Growth and increased Power every time you push Responsibility upon someone else, you would never again let a chance pass to do what comes to you to do.

Once for all, break the "Let George Do It" habit. When a task steps up before you—take hold of it and do it Yourself.

In every community—in this community—there are always big, ready, generous, willing people quick to respond to any call for Service at the moment someone else shirks. They are the "Georges." And if you will let them perform your work, they will do it. But when they do—you move Backward. YOU—be a "George."

Work that should be done by Yourself is never done so well when shifted to someone else.

You are either a Do or a Let Do. It is a personal matter of Success or Failure as to which you are.

The "Let George Do It" folks are easily spotted. They line the sidewalks of every busy street. They do the "easy" jobs in the Stores and Factories. They are the fellows that board at Jails and Alms Houses and keep the Lawyers busy. They are the men and women that are "too busy" to do what is asked and required of them to do.

Don't "Let George Do It." Do it YOURSELF.

The Blind Heathen

The heathen in his blindness
 Bows down to wood and stone,
His spirit walks in darkness
 By a thorny path, alone;
But we, in our enlightenment,
 Bow down to wiser things:
To gold and silver, pomp and show,
 To kaisers and to kings;
To fashions and formalities,
 To crinoline, to creed,
To Grundyism, Toryism,
 Poppycock, and greed.
And sometimes when our homages
 Invade the heathen's mind,
The heathen in his blindness
 Must be mighty glad he's blind.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— Where Anne's Canary Bird Came From.

He Would Break Into a Beautiful Song.

"I WISH we could have a story about the farm tonight," said Evelyn when daddy gave the children their choice.

"Once when Anne was a young girl, a time so long ago that no one remembered it, she had a parrot that she was very devoted to. When it died at a great age she said she would never have another pet, but on her birthday Uncle Ben once gave her a canary that she finally loved almost as well as she did Bibbley Wah. The parrot's cage she kept all wrapped in newspapers up in the garret, and the only time she ever allowed any one to touch it was when she gave it to Hank Fritz to keep his woodpecker in. But the canary's cage she hung in a south window among a beautiful bower of ferns and palms, where she let her pet exercise and hop about every day after she had locked her cat in the cellar. With Carlo and old Ned and Bibbley Wah's pet crow, Hamlet, and the boys' squirrels this made a lot of pets, you see."

"I thought the boys kept the squirrels at their truly home!" cried Jack.

"They had squirrels at both homes," daddy explained. "And some night I'm going to tell you how Bobbie lost his at the farm. But this is a story about Anne's canary, and you must please not tempt me to stray away from him. He was a beautiful deep yellow, and his song was Anne's delight. She would screw up her funny old wrinkled mouth, that never said any but kind words, and cheep and whistle at him, and he would answer her by breaking into a beautiful long sweet song that kept the whole farm happy. One Friday night when the three children went down to spend the holiday with Uncle Ben it came to Jim that nobody knew where Anne's canary came from. Even Bibbley Wah knew the birthdays of old Ned and Carlo and the turkey gobbler and all the other pets. 'But the more the children talked about the beginning of Anne's canary the more of a mystery he became. 'He can't be a faded oriole,' said Jim, 'because Anne could never climb a cherry tree to catch one.' 'Perhaps Bibbley Wah caught an oriole for Anne by putting salt on his tail,' teased Bobbie. 'Let's ask Uncle Ben!' cried Bibbley Wah. But Uncle Ben was fishing at Willst pond, and Anne always made a great secret about her bird, because he was so old that she imagined people could tell her own age by his. So the children guessed and imagined till it became a real necessity to them to know where the canary came from. When the boys got so excited with guesses that they almost yelled Bibbley Wah jumped off her chair and shouted: 'I know! Anne raised him from canary seed!'"

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. DA LEONARD

"We Are Rich in Friends," Molly Sutner's Consoling Thought.

"Wasn't it a lovely time?" asked Molly as she carefully slipped the blue silk dress into its sheath and hung it in the closet. "The Ellsons know just how to entertain. Olive makes everybody feel perfectly at home and calls out the best that is in him."

"She certainly does. How do you like Julia Osgood on closer acquaintance?" asked John, thumping his shoes on the floor in his haste to get to sleep.

"Very much indeed. It is evident that young Cane is very much attracted by her. Don't you think so?" Molly was rapidly rolling her hair in curlers.

"So? I did not notice."

"Oh, no question about it. You don't observing to have to ask. Wouldn't it be delightful if her good turn to you was the means of bringing the right man into her life. She looked so pretty, and the way she took being the lion of the occasion was great."

"Well, I like young Cane. They can have my blessing," said John cheerfully climbing into bed. "Now, how long are you going to keep that light shining right in my eyes?"

"Not long; my hair is most done," came Molly's reassuring reply.

"It's the queerest thing. I believe I could wait till you were all undressed before I began to get ready for bed, and then I would have to lie with the light in my eyes a full half hour before you would have that everlasting hair done up and the skin lotion on and——"

"Why, John!" exclaimed Molly. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself. If I put up with the inconvenience of sleeping in these abominable curlers for the sake of trying to look a little more decent you surely ought to be able to stand the light a few minutes while I am doing them up."

"Well, hurry up, do. I've got a big day's work ahead of me and I am tired." John rolled over with his back to the light.

"Did I tell you that I heard Mr. Jaynes say that Tyler had been indicted by the grand jury and his trial set for the spring term of court?" Molly threw up the window preparatory to blowing out the light.

"No; I hear that he can get no one to go his bail and he will have to stay in jail till the trial comes off. Isn't that awful?" remarked John as Molly climbed into bed.

"I am glad he has no wife," said Molly feelingly.

Soon John's regular breathing told Molly that he was sound asleep, but she was wide awake and lay there thinking over the pleasant evening, making a long list of things to be thankful for.

"We are rich in friends, anyway," she thought, "and Mr. Jaynes was particularly nice to us. He is interested in John now and will notice how hard he works and perhaps, who knows, he may find it in his heart to raise his salary one of these days." Molly lay enlarging on this delightful thought, and planning what they would do with the increase.

Suddenly she stopped herself with a jolt.

"This is mere idle dreaming. Mrs. Morton said I must learn to face conditions, and this dreaming of a raise does not fit me to live on eighty dollars a month," she thought and turned over and went to sleep.

(To be continued.)

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

The housewife is the "official buyer" for the home—in almost all families. She is, consequently, the official "ad reader" for the home.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Celery should be allowed to lie in water, in which a little salt has been added, for at least an hour before serving. This makes it crisp.

In putting away white dresses from one season to another, to keep from yellowing make a bag of an old sheet, wash clean, dip in strong bluing water and dry. It should be very blue. Put unstarched clothes in bak loosely and hang in dark closet.

Making an Old Rocking Chair into a Sewing Rocker—Take a rocking chair without arms and fit a drawer underneath the seat. Put handle on drawer. Inside make different compartments, for scissors, buttons, thread, etc. Place drawer on right-hand side.

THE TABLE

Bisque of Oysters—Drain and wash twenty-five oysters by pouring cold water over them. Throw them into a hot kettle, shake until the gills curl; drain, saving the liquor. Chop oysters with a silver knife and return them to liquor; add ten drops onion juice, a cup chopped celery tops and pint of boiling water. Boil ten minutes and press through colander; add one level tablespoon cornstarch moistened in one-fourth cup cold milk, add teaspoon of salt; boil a minute, add pint of hot milk and pour in slowly well beaten white of one egg, beating all the while. Pour at once into bouillon cups and dust top with paprika.

Cuban Stew—Cut bacon in cubes, fry out in kettle, add two pounds beef stew, two peaches, two pears, two onions, three apples, three tomatoes, one red pepper. Cover with water, salt to taste, cook slowly.

Soup for Invalids—Boil two pounds lean veal and one-fourth pound pea barley in a quart of water, very slowly, until it becomes the consistency of cream. Pass it through a fine sieve, salt to taste; flavor with celery seed if liked, or use fresh celery—a very small quantity will suffice. Let it simmer very slowly.

Potatoes au Gratin—Cut leftover or freshly boiled potatoes into small cubes. Mix with white sauce made of two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one cup milk, one-fourth teaspon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Put mixture in buttered baking dish, cover with finely cut cheese (York state or Swiss), and buttered bread crumbs. Bake on top shelf of oven until brown.

Grape Gelatin—Use your favorite gelatin recipe with peeled and seeded California grapes. Use with or without other fruits. Delightful with grapes alone. This is not only delicious, but a beautiful dish to serve during holiday season.

Grape Pie—Separate pulp from skins and boil skins till tender. Press pulp through colander, add to skins and sweeten. Cool and put in pie. Bake with upper crust.

Raisin Pie—One cup seeded raisins, one tablespoon sugar, one teaspoon vinegar. Cook raisins in enough cold water for one pie; add one tablespoon butter; mix all together. Bake in tow crusts.

Bran Muffins—One quart flour, one quart bran, one tablespoon soda, one tablespoon salt, six tablespoons molasses, one pint sour milk. These muffins are delicious, and beneficial as a laxative.

Brown Pudding—Take one-fourth pound bread crumbs, one-fourth pound flour, three ounces suet, small teacup brown sugar, half teaspoon bicarbonate of soda, half teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon mixed spice one and one-half pints milk poured upon a tablespoonful of jam; mix well together. Steam two hours. Sauce for pudding: Beat yolk of one egg with tablespoon sugar, add one teaspoon corn flour, one ounce fresh butter and one teacup water. Put in small saucepan and stir till it boils; add a glass of fruit juice and serve in a sauce tureen.

Apple Conserve — Five pounds brown sugar, five pounds sour apples, three oranges, two lemons. Grind apples, chop other fruit; boil slowly till right consistency.

Pumpkin Custard—Steam enough pumpkin t omake one cup of mashed pumpkin; add to it, while hot, a teaspoon of butter and sprinkle over it a tablespoon of flour. Mix. Beat yolks of three eggs with four tablespoons sugar, add a little salt and one pint milk. Stir pumpkin into this. Flavor with cinnamon. Turn into baking dish and bake until set. Beat whites to a stiff froth; add three tablespoons powdered sugar and beat until fine. Heap on custard, tard, dust with sugar and brown in oven.

HOPE LIES IN PREPAREDNESS

is to regret that a situation should arise in this peaceful land of ours that should divert our minds, our energies and our means to the building up of armaments for human destruction. Had this meeting been held two years ago there would not have been a baker's dozen of you in the audience, and I surely would not have been here to advocate preparedness. I say in all frankness, that up to a recent period I might have been classed as a pacifist. I believed in and trusted to a spirit of national integrity, through the enforcement of treaties, which I thought would safeguard a nation, which was inspired only with peaceful intentions, against attack. International law seemed to me to have a significance as the law of nations, and as this law was repeatedly strengthened through conferences at The Hague it seemed reasonable to believe that the great progress which the world had made during recent generations in civilization and industry would act as a permanent barrier, so far at least as the larger nations were concerned, against the lust of war and conquest.

"It would be quite unfair to criticise those who still hold to the views which I have expressed. Many of them, in fact most of them, in their sincere desire for peace, and through their abhorrence of war, prefer to see this great republic remain as it is, the one example to the world of a nation too proud to fight. The very fact that there are people amongst us who discourage increased armaments is in itself an evidence of the tendency of republican institutions in the direction of perpetual peace. This is a wholesome sign of the times. If wars are ever to cease it will not be because man is becoming more perfect but because nations are controled and restrained by the governing influence of the people as a whole and not by a few individuals who sit on the throne of influence and power. Some four hundred years ago there was inscribed on the arms of the French nation this inscription: 'War is the final arbitrament of kings.' It is said that this inscription still remains on the cannons of the Prussians. Napoleon, when first consul of France, deliberately sold Louisiana to the American people in order that he might have sufficient money to conduct a war, the main purpose of which was to satisfy his own ambition. In olden times war was almost invariably the result of the spirit of conquest which was instilled among the people through their rulers. That spirit was usually an avaricious one. They sought not only territory but spoils, and in those days preparedness was a deliberate policy of aggression.

"Our hope for permanent peace in the world lies in democracy; but our first concern at the moment is not of the future but of the present. Democracy, though well established on the American continent, has but a light foothold in other parts of the world. We should, therefore, be governed by the situation as we find it, and our acts should be controlled not by sentiment but by practice. The question is not what we should like to do, but what is the part of wisdom and prudence to do in the face of existing conditions.

"What are existing conditions? Europe is an armed camp. International law has, on the statement of the highest official in one of the belligerent governments, been violated on the ground that necessity knows no law. Agreements made at The Hague have been cast to the four winds of Heaven. The high seas are no longer safe for our people or our merchandise. The most valued products of our fields—wheat and cotton—are declared contraband. The United States Government is in a sharp and dangerous controversy with belligerent nations. The broad expanse of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans no longer serves as a Chinese wall to protect us, but it has become an avenue of ready approach. We seldom stop to think that an army marching on land can only cover thirty or forty miles a day while at sea almost as much progress is made in a single hour. The War College division of the General Staff, our only board of experts on this subject, who presumably know the situation, tell us that two of the belligerent nations in Europe are sufficiently supplied with transports to land in this country in six weeks two expeditions totaling one million officers and men and over two hundred thousand animals. That one of these belligerent nations might in forty-six days land more than eight hundred thousand troops on the soil of the United States; that Japan in two months' time could land two hundred and thirty-eight thousand thoroughly equipped troops provided with the means of intrenching themselves at some selected base on the Pacific coast, pending the arrival of further reinforcements, and seventy thousand animals.

"Why then should we hesitate to be adequately prepared for defense? Is it because of the expense incurred? What does it matter, if in a nation of one hundred millions of people, we spend one hundred millions a year, as Secretary Daniels has proposed in our first line of defense—the navy? This is but one dollar per capita and an insurance which every wise business man would readily take to protect his property. The growth of this country in increased valuation has been prodigious. In the life time of many of those in this audience the wealth of the United States has grown from seven thousand million dollars to nearly one hundred and eighty-eight thousand million dollars.

"This valuable property is bordered by twenty thousand miles of seacoast, most of which is unprotected. We have spent nearly four hundred million dollars on the Panama Canal. Is it not the part of wisdom to protect this? We have incurred obligations at Cuba, Porto Rico, Hayti, Hawaii and the Philippines. Much of this territory is at a distance from us and some of it lies near a country which seeks more territory to provide for its increased population. We have a State policy on the Pacific coast which excludes Asiatics on the ground that American labor must be protected. Whether we agree to this policy or not the law exists and it serves as an irritant which might at any time precipitate trouble, and whether we believe in keeping the Philippines or not they fell into our hands during the Spanish War and they have cost us many millions of dollars. It takes more than one-quarter of our present army to police the Philippines. Are we not ready to follow, in some measure at least, the advice of military experts in providing safe protection for the things that belong to us, and in respect to which we have incurred obligations?

"The plans for preparedness are not impulsively chosen. They represent the conclusions of those who have made a deep study of the subject. They do not go as far as our military experts would like us to go, but they are a substantial step in the right direction. We have been progressive in everything but preparedness. The unit of efficiency is no longer the individual, either in industry or on the firing line, but it is the relative capacity of the individual to command, through organization, the maximum efficiency in the mineral and industrial resources of the nation. We are highly organized on an industrial basis. Industrial organization and efficiency are in this day the sinews of war. Today we see the armies stretched across more than six hundred miles of territory. We hear of defeats resulting from a lack of munition. Little is said about the heroism of individuals or the effect of cavalry charges. The strength of an army depends mainly upon its capacity to handle the machinery of war and the quantity of such machinery involved is in stupendous proportions. No one can handle mechanical things properly without experience and training. Just as one individual in our industries is capable of reaching an efficiency ten or twenty times greater, through the use of machinery, than in the old days of hand work, so it is in our armies and navies, where trained mechanics are really the men behind the guns.

"Just as industry involves more machinery, more men and more money, so does defense against attack involve new and more appliances, a greater number of men and more efficient training. Where fifty years ago we were reasonably prepared, in the proportion which our preparedness bore to military conditions at that time, so is it expected that today we should progress to meet the conditions as they have been changed and enlarged.

"Finally, while our first thought in preparing for defense is one of protection to life and property on sea and land, we should not forget the great example which this nation has within its power to create by maintaining for all time peace on the American continents. Let our arms be the props of peace. What higher motive could a nation have, actuated as this nation is by the spirit of peace and good-will, than that it intends to maintain by force of arms if necessary the integrity of every foot of territory on the American continents? That while it will not permit a foreign nation to acquire new territory here it will also enforce the Monroe Doctrine to the point of protection to all American republics against the loss of territory through conquest.

"It has been said that there never was a just war. Nearly a thousand years have passed since Peter the Hermit, stirred by religious zeal, led the Crusaders to recover the Holy Sepulcher from the hand of the infidel Turk. With bared arms, on which the sign of the cross was marked in human blood, these plumed knights of old succeeded in planting the standard of the cross on the hills of Jerusalem. We have a cause as sacred and as noble as that which inspired the Crusaders. Let the legions of liberty loving freemen of the new world enlist for services under the standard of Peace. With an unselfish singleness of purpose let us see to it that the great power in national wealth, which Providence has given us, is used to destroy the evil of aggression, to repel invasion, to kill the dragon of conquest, and to maintain forever a lasting peace over all the Americas. If ours is the true land of the free, it is ours to be men true and brave."

In his introductory remarks Mr. Wood told of a meeting of the Women's Peace party that he addressed in New York a few nights ago where he was preceded by a Socialist who argued against preparedness. Only four men in the crowd had the courage to applaud his remarks, he admitted, and they were promptly shoved out of the house. A soldier, who commented favorably on the address, was pinned to the floor, while workers hissed the advocate of preparedness. In the commotion that followed the janitor turned off all lights in the hall to prevent a riot and the last Mr. Wood heard from his audience was a warning from the rear to "look out or they'll get your watch."

He said that the pacifists would live in an ideal world, an earthly Heaven, and that it was all right to play at Heaven if all would join in the game, but that it was very foolish when the other fellow was playing hell.

Of the past 800 years England has spent 419 at war, declared Mr. Wood, in presenting a startling recital of statistics on world wars. During the twelfth century the British nation spent 54½ per cent. of its time at war with other nations, and during the nineteenth it spent 53 per cent., showing that civilization has not brought about a cessation of war. France spent 36½ per cent. of the twelfth century at war and 35 of the nineteenth, while Germany spent 58½ per cent. of the twelfth at war and only 13 of the nineteenth. The difference in Germany was due to preparedness. The nation learned to fight, and when it became necessary it went into war prepared and soon ended its difficulties.

He said that after the American revolution the United States army was reduced to 80 men, and that when the war of 1812 broke out this country had little more than 2,000 trained soldiers. If it had been able to put an army of 10,000 men in the field, it would have been an easy matter to have gone into Canada and whipped the British force of 4,500 men there, not only ending the war within a few months, but adding Canada to the United States.

The White House stands today as a national monument to unpreparedness, he said. When English soldiers routed a vastly superior force of untrained Americans in 1812 and burned the Capitol at Washington they left the city in ruins. The Capitol, built of a native stone, was rebuilt and to hide the scars it was painted white.

Mr. Wood said that the United States today was fat, flabby and prosperous, and that the American people did not want to fight, but that they should be ready to protect their homes—to preserve peace.

Mr. Wood said that of all the nations that had solemnly agreed to submit questions of international dispute to the Hague conference for arbitration, only poor little Serbia had remembered, and her only because she was smaller than Austria-Hungary, with whom she had a dispute. This, he argued, shattered any dream of a guarantee of peace for the United States or any other nation.

"I have been informed by experts that with the present equipment in the way of transports, Germany could land an army of 750,000 trained soldiers on our shores, fully provisioned for three months, within forty-one days after war is declared. Japan can put 300,000 troops similarly equipped on the California coast in sixty-one days," he continued. "Now remember that I am not an alarmist, but am telling you the result of investigations that have been made by authorities.

"The seas are no longer and insulation for this country, as some people seem to think. An army, marching at the very top speed can make thirty miles a day. A group of transports can make 300 miles a day. The answer is that we must have a navy to measure with that of Germany on one side and Japan on the other. We must restore it to the position of the second strongest navy in the world. It is now between third and fourth.

"I have criticised the administration because it has not seen what the Naval Board sees. Suppose there should be a coalition between Japan and Germany at some future time. With our present navy we would be helpless. We do not want to fight but we must be ready if it comes. We must have an army large enough to destroy the largest shipment of troops that can be made from a foreign shore before another shipment can be landed. We should adopt the plan proposed by the general staff of the army, and not that of a civilian secretary of war who changes with every administration. We must not let the expense stand in our way, or let the matter be settled by politics."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Starting tomorrow and continuing the rest of the week at Proctor's Theatre Frank Keenan, in "The Coward," and Eddie Foy and the seven little Foylets in "A Favorite Fool," both Triangle Plays, will be offered. "The Coward' is not only flawless in its manner of production but its basic theme is a strong one, and it will undoubtedly be added to the list of films that stand for the greatest in motion picture achievement. Sharing honors with Mr. Keenan is Charles Ray, who contributes the best bit of acting that has been seen on the screen in some time. Another feature is the photographed battle scenes. In the Triangle Keystone comedy "A Favorite Fool," Eddie Foy, assisted by the seven little Foys, makes his debut in motion pictures. This picture is uproariously funny. The action, and there is plenty of it, revolves around circus life, and Foy plays the part of the clown. The funny antics of Eddie Foy and the supporting cast provide a half-hour of wholesome fun. Beside this splendid program of photoplays, the management will also offer the following vaudeville entertainers: Louis Leo, who will appear in a sensational suspended ladder act; the Cullen Brothers, novelty dancers; the Classy Trio, three charming instrumentalists, and Jack and Aldie Mason, in a laugh-provoking skit. Special mention is made of the big bazaar tonight, at which time a large number of appropriate gifts will be distributed. The special toy matinee for the children will take place Saturday, as usual, and a large number of Christmas presents have been secured for the occasion.

THREE TO BE HANGED.

Hillsboro, Ill., Dec. 16.—James Comer, colored, who confessed to killing his wife by choking and then dismembering her body with an axe last summer, will be hanged tomorrow morning.

Murphysboro, Ill., Dec. 16.—Elston Scott, colored, who was convicted of the murder of his sister-in-law, is under sentence to be hanged tomorrow if the sheriff will carry out the sentence privately. Governor Dunne granted a reprieve for a month, and declares he will issue futher reprieve unless Sheriff White guarantees a private execution.

Montreal, Dec. 16.—Sebastiano Areno will be hanged tomorrow for the murder of Andrew Domenico, who was a boarder in his home.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The press representative of the Plainfield Theatre is the authority for the statement that the new bill which comes to Manager Shannon's playhouse today is the best he has put on this season. It is composed of six big numbers, every one of which is worthy of being a headliner, although this place is given to "The Dainty New Yorkers." Nine people are in the company, six of them being girls, and, with the aid of a carload of costumes and electrical effects, they present a number worth the price of admission alone. Beside "The Dainty New Yorkers," the program for the last half of the week will include "The Cornells," singers, dancers and comedians, direct from a ten weeks engagement at the leading New York houses; Dare Austin and company in the funniest of all farcical sketches, "His Wedding Morn;" "The Three Collegians," presenting a variety act combining singing, talking, music and dancing; Godfrey and Henderson, rapidfire comedians, and Harry Roberts and Horace Adams, billed as "Those phuriously phunny prellows," in an original vehicle designed to exploit their talent as singers and talkers.

Today's program will include the latest installment of the greatest of all comedy serial films, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." Hundreds of Plainfielders are watching this picture, and they corroborate the assertion that nothing like it has ever been flashed on the screen. Another of the popular "country stores" is scheduled for tomorrow night. Get in on the ground floor, you may be numbered among the lucky ones.

—Money that you may fear is "tied up" in real estate may be un-tied through a campaign of classified advertising—and you may un-tie more of it than you tied up!

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous and you appear years younger.—Adv

HOT TEA BREAKS A COLD—TRY THIS

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once.

It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.—Adv.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which irritates and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Adv

HEAVY BOND FOR CRAP SHOOTERS

Plainfield Men Are Arraigned in New Brunswick Court.

PAT MARTIN IS IN JAIL

Boast of Politician That Games Could Not Be "Touched" Started Official Investigation — Nelson Puts up $2,000 Bond.

Before Judge Peter Daly in the Middlesex county court at New Brunswick this morning, pleas were entered by four local men as a result of the crusade conducted by the Middlesex county authorities and the Plainfield police against certain alleged gambling places conducted on the outskirts of Plainfield and Dunellen. Those who appeared before the court were Herbert Nelson, of Dunellen, and Patrick Martin, of Golf avenue, Piscataway township, both of whom, through counsel, protested their guilt; George Margentino and Thomas McNamara, of Plainfield, who pleaded guilty. Bail for Nelson in the sum of $2,000, for Mangentino and Martin in the sum of $500 each was furnished. Bail for Martin in the sum of $1,500 could not be secured, and he is being held in the jail at New Brunswick.

Nelson, who is alleged to have conducted a place at Dunellen under the guise of the Raritan Club, was represented by John P. Haggerty, of New Brunswick, while John P. Owens appeared for McNamara, Russell Watson, of Highland Park, for Mangentino, and Edmund Hayes for Martin.

The cases of the four men were first taken up by County Detective William J. Ferguson and Prosecutor Florance, of Middlesex county, several weeks ago in connection with Chief P. S. Kiely, of this city. The two places have been run for a long time and were frequented by prominent men from Plainfield, Dunellen, New Brunswick, Elizabeth and Newark. It has been said that as many as forty automobiles could be counted about the two particular places involved on Saturday nights and Sundays. Knowledge of rendezvous was common talk in New Brunswick, and it was openly boasted by one young Middlesex county politician that neither the place alleged to have been kept by Martin on Golf avenue or the Nelson place in Dunellen could be touched by the police, because of political influence that would "break" anybody getting too "nosy." News of this came to the ears of the authorities and the investigations were commenced.

Mangentino and McNamara, who it is said, were not the real offenders in either instance, will be arraigned for sentence within the next few days. The police of Plainfield and Middlesex county have the names of fifty men who are visitors to Golf avenue and the Raritan Club. One Plainfield man is said to have lost $1,000 shooting craps in a single night and his wife was one of those who aided the police in getting sufficient evidence.

ELKS BAZAAR COMMITTEE ENTERTAINS ASSISTANTS

One hundred person enjoyed a social and dance at the Elks' Clubhouse on Watchung avenue last night, as the guests of the committee which conducted the Elks' bazaar last October. Invitations were issued to all who had assisted in making the bazaar the success it was, and there was a hearty response. Music for the occasion was furnished by Harry Wetton's orchestra of four pieces. The program was a delightful one, and the music so greatly appreciated that three and four encores were frequent. Refreshments of home-made cake, ice cream and coffee were served at a late hour, making a fitting finish to one of the most pleasing affairs the Elks and their friends have had this season.

The bazaar committee which made the arrangements for the reciprocal dance was composed of Messrs. Walter S. Marder, chairman; Francis J. Blatz, Chalmers L. Crist, James F. Coleman, Chauncey F. Stout, J. Fred MacDonald, Alfred Prudhon, Edward C. Searing, Vincent W. Nash, Jr., William R. Townsend, Samuel P. T. Wilbur and Charles S. Woolston.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY DISTRIBUTES BIG BONUS

New York, Dec. 17.—The Guaranty Trust Company is today distributing to its 700 employes an amount equal to a substantial percentage of their annual salaries as an appreciation of extra services performed by them during the year. It is understood that this distribution is in line with a semi-profit sharing idea which the company has in mind.

MERRY CHRISTMAS FOR ALL IS NOW ASSURED

Community Fund Has Passed $1,000 Mark and Will Probably Exceed Last Year's.

That the amount of money to be given by generous Plainfielders for the Community Santa Claus this year will exceed the $1,500 subscribed last year seems to be assured, as money sent to Treasurer DeWitt Hubbell at the Plainfield Trust Company has now passed the $1,000 mark. The purchasing committee have about completed their work, and about 900 children will have their Christmas Day gladdened with toys, candy, warm clothing, rubbers and other necessities, while their parents will receive flour, coal and those things which go to keep the family comfortable. There will be no unhappy Christmas celebrations in Plainfield because of lack of supplies, if the Community Christmas Committee can help it.

Subscriptions received since yesterday include those of Howard McWilliams, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. M. E. Darby, Francis W. Frost, Mrs. Charles Eoff, George L. Babcock, Mrs. Seymour Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Williams, Mrs. George H. Goddard and Alexander Gilbert.

EVERYBODY'S GOING TO HOSPITAL DANCE

Competitive Dancing and a 1916 "Surprise" Will Be Some of the Features.

If straws show which way the wind blows, certainly the demand for tickets shows where the crowd goes, so there is no doubt that everyone who can motor or drive, hobble, walk or even skate, is in some way or other going to the hospital dance at the Plainfield High School Auditorium on New Year's Eve. The dance is given under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital for the benefit of the hospital. The hours are from 9:30 p. m. to 3 a. m.

At 11 o'clock there will be competitive dancing, for which two prizes have been donated. The judges chosen to award the prizes know all the fine points of the graceful art, and the fortunate couple carrying off the honors may be congratulated. After the competitive dancing there will be supper and a "surprise," as the vaudeville houses say, but what the surprise is will not be known until the first moment of 1916.

Dancing will continue until 3 o'clock in the morning. Anyone wishing to prolong the festivities beyond that hour will have to hire a hall of their own. Tickets are on sale at Riker-Hegeman's, Randolph's and Armstrong's, and also may be obtained from the committee in charge—namely, Miss Eva Browne, chairman; Mrs. J. Whitney Baker, Mrs. Henry D. Brower, Mrs. Frederick Goddard, Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, Miss Helen Harman, Mrs. Walter L. Righter, Mrs. William B. Taylor and Mrs. Edward Waring; also from the the following members of the floor committee: Messrs. Warren Ackerman, J. Whitney Baker, Henry D. Brower, Kenneth Browne, Thomas M. Day, Jr., Owen Fleming, James Fleming, William Flanders, Frederick W. Goddard, E. W. Jeffcott, Sherman B. Joost, John Martin, J. Hartley Mellick, Roger Mellick, James P. Murray, Walter L. Righter, Rex. Schoonmaker, Lawrence Smith, William Palmer Smith, Jr., Edward F. Stevenson, John Valiant, William B. Tyler and Edward J. Waring.

MRS. HENRY BROSE IS GIVEN ABSOLUTE DIVORCE

Decree of divorce has been granted Mrs. Helena Brose, of this city, from Henry C. Brose, also of this city. Bird & Swackhamer were counsel for the husband, while W. H. Apgar, of Trenton, represented the wife. After Vice Chancellor Backes heard both sides of the case, he granted the divorce on charge of obstructive desertion and Mrs. Brose was given the privilege of resuming her maiden name, Miss Helena Liable.

WILLIAMS-JONES.

The marriage of Miss Emma Jones and Stanley Williams, both of this city, took place last night in the parsonage of the Shiloh Baptist church. Rev. E. W. Roberts, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by a number of friends of the couple. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Williams left for an extended honeymoon, the destination of which was unknown. They will return to this city after the Christmas holidays.

PETTY JEALOUSY CAUSED THE WAR

That is the Opinion of Miss Richards Expressed in Her "Current Events" Talk.

HISTORY IS REVIEWED

Does Not Believe Kaiser Wanted War, But Was Influenced By Arrogant Class of Idle Officers—The "Triple Alliance."

Historical facts were brought forth by Miss Janet E. Richards yesterday afternoon when she gave the fourth of her series of winter "Current Events" talks, to a large audience of women in the auditorium of the Hartridge School, telling of the distressing periods passed through before the unification of the German empire became a reality. To Bismarck belongs much credit for the realization of this solidity of the various kingdoms, he being the man who brought about the "Triple Alliance" between Germany, Austria and Italy and which has been renewed since '82 every six years until

CLEVER HANDIWORK SHOWN BY CHILDREN

Work of Opportunity Class at Franklin School Attracts Many Patrons.

The sale of articles made by the Opportunity Class of the City, held in the auditorium of the Franklin School, Wednesday and Thursday, was a success from every point of view. Articles will continue being on sale and anyone wishing to view same is cordially invited by the members to call at the Stillman building.

That the public do not realize the character of work done by these classes was readily seen from the fact that questions as to whether or not the articles shown were actually made by the children themselves, were asked by almost every person who had not previously become acquainted with the work.

Each department was well represented. The sewing class offering aprons, and children's dresses for practical use, laundry bags, towels, scarfs and pretty articles of fancy work in embroidery and crocheting. The woodwork department offered chairs, sewing tables, sleeve boards, plant stands, tabourettes, desk sets, mission paper baskets, and a number of other useful articles.

The reed and raffia department offered many beautiful and useful articles in the line of serving trays, sewing bags and baskets. The toy display was a surprise to the grown folks and a delight to the little ones. During the exhibitions Miss Bullock, of the Franklin School, served chocolate and cocoa to the attendants. An invitation was extended to the public to visit the classes at work in the Stillman building at any time, where the teachers will be pleased to exhibit the work.

CAN HIT WOMAN IF SHE CUSSES YOU

Somerville Justice Responsible for Overthrow of Chivalry.

Somerville, Dec. 17.—That profane language addressed by a woman toward a man is provocation for his striking her, was a decision handed down by Justice Nevatto in the trial of Fred Kruger, of Somerville, here, Wednesday. Kruger was arrested on complaint of Marie Tarangelo, of Raritan, who charged that he struck her in the face with his fist. It was proven that she used profane language toward him, and the justice said that while he did not believe a blow was struck, there was sufficient provocation for one.

HIS GIRL TOOK CHRISTMAS FUND

Joseph Schultz Has Her Arrested for Larceny of Forty Dollars.

After saving all the year that he might have a Christmas fund, Joseph Schultz, colored despite his German name, was rudely shocked when he counted his money yesterday and found that he had only $20. It was not the fault of the bank that Joseph's Christmas fund was shy, but that of Mabel Johnson, also colored. Mabel had started the Christmas saving fund. After putting in $1.80 she quit and turned her card over to Schultz. He made deposits each week during the year but did not change the name on the card, and the girl took it in this week and drew out the $66. She gave Schultz $20 and told him that was all he could have. He had her arrested for larceny and in court this morning Judge De Meza promised to let her go if she would turn over the money to Schultz. The woman insisted that someone had stolen it from her but promised to get it today and the case went over.

SALVATION ARMY MAKES ITS ANNUAL APPEAL

The local officers of the Salvation Army, in making their usual Christmas appeal to the public of Plainfield on behalf of the poor and needy of this community, are mindful of the substantial assistance given in support of the cause a year ago, which enabled them to carry out their purpose in furnishing a dinner for those worthy, with entire satisfaction. They are now confronted with the same object, only greater in proportion, to the funds already in hand.

In making this call for means, the officers anticipate an open-hearted and generous response in money or provisions suitable, that will not only meet the requirements of a dinner this year, but will permit them to extend a welcome to as many as wish to partake of your liberality. All donations will be appreciated and acknowledged by the Army.

LODGE MARKS HISTORIC SPOT

Attractive Memorial Building Now Occupies Site of Washington Rock.

SURROUNDED BY PARK

A. V. D. Honeyman, in Somerset County Historical Quarterly, Gives Interesting Review of Playground Centre Now Controlled by State.

The Somerset County Historical Quarterly, the editor of which is A. V. D. Honeyman, in its January number just published, contains an article of unusual interest concerning the Washington Rock Park Lodge, located at Wasnington Rock. Accompanying the article, which is reprinted below, is an interior and exterior view of the building. The article, from the pen of Mr. Honeyman, gives the first accurate story concerning this spot, which is now controlled by the State.

The Washington Rock Park Lodge was completed about April last un-

MARTINE INVADES REPUBLICAN CONFAB

Enters Sacred Precincts of the "Red Room" and Holds a Reception.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The copious liberality and tolerance of Senator James E. Martine manifested itself this week at the New Willard Hotel, which for a few days at least, contained the essence of all that is anti-Martine and anti-Democratic. Mr. Martine boomed his way into the very citadel of the Republican party, the Red Room, where the national convention was about to convene, and held a reception without a moment's hesitation or embarrassment over the alien atmosphere.

The first individual that Mr. Martine was privileged to take by the hand and clap on the back was none other than former Senator Murray Crane, of Massachusetts. They acted like lifelong friends and kindred spirits. Next, the New Jersey Senator walked into Senator Catron, of New Mexico, as fine a stand-patter as Martine is a radical. Mr. Catron intimated that perhaps Mr. Martine had mixed his dates and got into the wrong place, but the Senator from New Jersey said out loud that he had merely called in to spread the gospel of righteousness and a little Democratic optimism among the leaderless hosts of Republicanism.

The Senator went on to say that it was always a delight to him to meet his friends of the Republican party, even though they persisted in error, when Franklin Murphy, who hopes to succeed Mr. Martine in the Senate, walked in. Neither saw the other and the Senator's visit was then cut short by the dropping of the gavel by Chairman Hillis. It was patent from the pleased expressions on the faces of the Republicans, that they had enjoyed the exuberance that was exuded by Mr. Martine.

F. J. BLATZ CHOICE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Election of Fourth Ward Councilman at Tonight's Caucus Seems Assured.

That Francis J. Blatz will be chosen as president of the City Council for 1916, provided the members caucus tonight, is positively stated by supporters of the Fourth ward man. His opponent for the honor is Jpan A. Babcock, who was re-elected last November as one of the three members-at-large. Mr. Babcock agreed to have his name submitted to the caucus a few days ago at the urgent behest of friends in the Council, although he has maintained from the first that he would not ask a single member to vote for him.

There is a possibility that the caucus may be postponed until next week owing to the fact that Councilman-elect Levis M. Booth is out of the city and will be unable to attend. Some of the members think that it would be only fair to show Mr. Booth that courtesy.

While Mr. Babcock is known to be a candidate for the presidency, his friends say that if it is shown that a majority of the members favor Mr. Blatz he is likely to withdraw and throw his support to the latter. At present Mr. Blatz seems to have the greatest strength, and his election by practically a unanimous vote would not be surprising.

VISITING NURSE ASS'N ACTIVITIES

Local Charity Organization Accomplishes Much During Past Month.

At the meeting of the Visiting Nurse Association held yesterday, interesting reports of the nurses' work were given. Thirty-two new cases were reported during the month, making a total of 206 under care for that period; 856 visits were made to sick people, 73 of these were obstetrical cases, 258 school children, 73 babies, 192 tuberculosis patients and the other patients in the Industrial Home, Day Nursery and those needing general care.

The total attendance of girls at the meetings of the Little Mothers' League was 101 for the month. Here the girls are taught to bathe and dress their baby sisters and brothers and to give them such good care as they need.

The treasurer reported that the response to appeals sent out with the annual reports last month had brought in only $97.50. One large gift of $100 in addition to these has made it possible to keep up the work of the association, but funds are badly needed to continue the work.

Prompt action in reporting cases of suspicious sore throats in two instances, at least, have prevented the spread of contagious disease. In both cases the patient was a child too young for school attendance. The nurse who was called in immediately called a doctor and also notified the school nurse. The other children belonging to both families were thereupon excluded from school and kept at home. In one instance scarlet fever developed and the other diphtheria, but no one was exposed except the children in the family with the patient, and no other cases have developed from either of these.

In one very sad case of cancer where the patient was a girl only twenty years old, the nurse took the girl into New York to St. Rose's Free Home for Incurable Cancer, where she received good care until her death.

WAS ALABAMA BOUND AND HAD NO BUSINESS HERE

Charles Smith, "Alabama Bound," was stopped in Plainfield for a few minutes yesterday while he explained to the judge why he left Saginaw, Michigan, in such a hurry. Smith did not wait for railroad fare, because it was too cold there, he said, and Judge De Meza decided that a man who wanted to go South bad enough to rideoutside on a freight train should not be stopped in Plainfield, where the snow is six inches deep, so he told the traveler to go on his way.

AUSTRIA REJECTS DEMANDS OF U. S.

Friendly Relations Are to Be Severed at Once, is Report.

NOTE IS UNFAVORABLE

Crisis Between Two Countries Will Cause President Wilson to Cut His Honeymoon Short—Ultimatum is Being Prepared.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The Austrian note was before the Cabinet meeting today and it was regarded as entirely unfavorable to the continuance of friendly relations between the U. S. and Austria. Secretary of State Lansing declined to discuss the note after the Cabinet meeting and said that no arrangements will be made for its publication at present. It was learned in other circles, however, that the note is regarded as a rejection of the demand of the U. S. and that therefore a break of diplomatic relations is inevitable unless Austria assumes a new point of view. Reports are current today that a new note practically amounting to an ultimatum will be sent to Austria in the next forty-eight hours. It is suggested in some quarters that the President's wedding trip may be abandoned because of the crisis.

The reply was in the hands of Secretary Lansing last night and this morning he took the note to a meeting of the cabinet, where it was practically the sole subject of discussion.

There are possibilities of the Ancona case breaking in on the honeymoon of President Wilson and Mrs. Galt, who are to be married here tomorrow night. Secretary of State Lansing will hold another conference with the President tomorrow and it will be the last before the honeymoon starts. If it is necessary the Secretary of State will visit the President while he and Mrs. Galt are away in order to decide what action shall be taken.

It is said that the official note is identical with the newspaper digest published yesterday. Officials declare that a diplomatic break between the United States and Austria-Hungary is imminent.

32,000 Shells Fired at Turks.

Constantinople, Dec. 17.—Turkish war statement:

"Dardanelles front.—At Sed El Bahr the enemy fired 32,000 shell against our centre in the course of one cannonade, but no important damage was done. A cruiser, which was bombarding our right wing from Sed El Bahr, was hit by our shells and forced to withdraw.

PROBASCO BIBLE CLASS ENJOYS MONTHLY SOCIAL

The Probasco Bible Class held its regular meeting last night in the Sunday-school rooms of the First Baptist church. A special program was enjoyed by an attendance of forty of its members. Excellent selections were played by F. J. Higgins, representing the Edison machine. C. B. Hayes gave vocal solos, accompanied at the piano by Wendell Glover. The latter also held keen interest with his mastered solo selections at the piano.

The next meeting of the class will be in the evening of Tuesday, January 18, and special events will be in order. This also will be called Ladies Night, when the Matlock Bible Class will participate and each member is privileged to bring his friends. The teachers and officers wish at this time to offer their heart welcome to any young men not already affiliated with an organization of this character.

CULTIVATE JUDGMENT.

Its Possession Is What Makes a Man Successful In Business.

It was one of the intellectual shocks of my young manhood to discover that an analytical chemist could often get only $50 a month. I had long looked with awe upon the accurate percentages and detailed reports of the analytical chemist. This water contains 2.341 grains of such and such substance per gallon. I wondered at the marvelous man who could get out such fine results, and to learn that he at times gets but $50 a month was a shock.

The explanation is this. The chemical analysis of ordinary specimens is a technical process of a perfectly definite character. If a work is definite and therefore capable of being reduced to clear cut instructions the pay that it commands is not likely to be high, even though the work itself is complicated. It requires good memory and painstaking obedience to instructions. Many persons have these qualities. The scarce attribute is judgment, that indefinable quality capable of meeting a new situation and handling it with common sense or gumption, to put it in a homely term.

Judgment is indefinite. We cannot lay out instructions in advance to tell the manager how to meet situations. To buy good raw material he must learn to know the raw materials, and many of the tests he applies are too fine for words to reduce to instructions. He must decide for indefinite reasons that now is a good time to enlarge or retrench; that here is a good place to open up business; that now is a good time to buy or to run low on stock; that this man needs to be hired; that this man needs to be fired.

It is in the making of decisions that successful management lies. And most of these decisions are beyond rule. They are indefinite. They are judgment.—Engineering Magazine.

SHE WAS SYMPATHETIC.

But Her Attempt to Be Chatty Brought an Embarrassing Moment.

This is an extract from a letter written by a woman who is willing to share a good joke, even if the laugh is at her own expense:

"It was a damp, windy day—the sort of day that turns straight, straggly blond hair like mine into a mass of strings and ends that stick out about the face and neck with frightful effect. I was downtown on a shopping expedition that was exceptionally trying, and I knew I looked so bad that I carefully avoided all chance of glances into mirrors, for I was sure I could not, under the circumstances, improve my appearance much. Recklessly I entered a tearoom with a friend whom I happened to meet.

"As I placed my shopping bag on the floor near the table at which we were to sit, another bag, exactly like my own, was put beside it. Quite naturally my glance followed the hand and arm up to the face of my neighbor, and as I met her look I said to myself, 'She has hair just like mine—sticking out in every direction—and she looks even worse than I do, poor thing!'

"Naturally, my heart went out to her in a great wave of sympathy. We smiled simultaneously as our troubled eyes met, and I said aloud and quite distinctly, 'If we are not careful we shall get our shopping bags mixed!'

"The moment the words were out of my mouth I wished very earnestly that the floor would mercifully open and let me through. It did not require the subdued snicker from the nearby tables to awaken me to the realization that I had been addressing the image of myself in the mirror of which the entire side of the shop was formed. Do you get the picture?"—Youth's Companion

A Natural Inquiry.

Helen was a very inquisitive child who greatly annoyed her father each evening with endless questions while he tried to read the newspaper. One evening, among other things, she demanded, "Papa, what do you do at the store all day?"

Exasperated at her persistence he answered briefly, "Oh, nothing!"

Helen was silent a moment, and then asked, "But how do you know when you are done?"—Harper's Magazine.

How Do You Make a Circle?

The intelligence of people may be gauged by asking them to make a circle on paper with a pencil and noting in which direction the hand is moved. The good student in a mathematical class draws circles from left to right. The inferiority of the softer sex as well as the male dunces is shown by their drawing from right to left. Asylum patients do the same.—London Family Doctor.

Had Followed Directions.

"Now," said the nervous old lady to the druggist, "are you sure you have that medicine mixed right?"

"No, m[illegible] [illegible]d the conscientious apothecary. "I wouldn't go as far as that, but I've mixed it the way the doctor ordered it."—Chicago News.

Snubbed.

"Yes; we pay spot cash for everything."

"Ah, I often speak to my husband about the time when we had to!"—Puck.

A Long Sidewalk.

The annual product of bricks in the United States is 25,000,000,000. This is enough to lay a five foot sidewalk eight times around the world.

Good Reason.

"Why live in the past? Why not forget it?"

"The bill collectors won't let me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

DAUGHTERS OF POCOHONTAS HOLD ANNUAL ELECTION

[illegible] Council, [illegible] Pocohontas, meeting [illegible] last night, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Prophetess, Mrs. Corrine Doyle; Pocohontas, Mrs. Millie Dunn; Wenona, Mrs. Marion Thompson; Powhatan, Louis K. Mattis; keeper of wampum, Mrs. Edward Bowman; trustee, [illegible] eighteen months, Mrs. Thomas [illegible]; pianist, Miss Viola Mundy. Previous to the election of officers [illegible] proposition for membership was received and a number of candidates were disposed of. PETTY JEALOUSY CAUSED WAR

[illegible] the outbreak of the present war, when Italy refused to be a party with Germany and Austria against the Allies. The greatest opposition to Bismarck's policy was felt in Prussia, where the aristocratic class would [illegible] their own way and [illegible] created the [illegible] against [illegible] of the lower classes. Many [illegible] expressed the belief that the land-owning class of [illegible] aristocrats and army officers [illegible] more to do with bringing about the present war than any other group of peoples, inasmuch as the prime wish was to seek [illegible] and amusement. Practically devoid of any national feeling, this class, which is composed primarily of cousins, who enter the army service and rain promotions as officers, lieutenants and aides attaches, have aroused a feeling of racial hatred and jealousy among the people which far from expresses the spirit of Germany. Continuing, Miss Richards declared that she did not believe the Kaiser wanted this war, personally, but that his decisions were influenced largely by this arrogant class of idle officers of the army who glory in military adjustement. In time of peace, Germany has developed by leaps and bounds into one of the greatest commercial nations in the world.

Petty rivalries and jealousies such as is between brothers and brothers sometimes, have developed between England and Germany, said the speaker, and this antagonism in a [illegible] has resulted in their present [illegible]. Relations had been [illegible] for years, by the intermarriage of rulers' families, but the diplomacy of England was [illegible] to Germany as well as the [illegible] of the latter to the [illegible]. The resulting effects felt in this country because of the war are evident everywhere, said Miss Richards. She supported her remarks by calling attention to the congestion in our ports, lack of shipping facilities, lack of cars on railroads and congestion of some on certain roads. A review of the president's address to the joint session of the House of Representatives and the Senate, last Tuesday, took up a portion of the time, during the course of which the speaker called the [illegible] to the principal question, namely, "Preparedness," which was taken up in the address. She also made an account of the visit to President Wilson of the delegation of women to ask him to recommend a constitutional amendment enfranchising all the women of the United States at once. Miss Richards, who was one of the party, warmly praised the attitude with which the Chief Executive received the 300 women and to whose petition he answered he would give consideration later.

NEW YORK AMUSEMENTS

AT THE COLUMBIA.

Sam Howe will bring his Kissing Girls to the Columbia Theatre the week beginning Monday afternoon December 20, and present a two-act burlesque called "The Kissing Maid." The first act is laid in the palace of the Khedive at Cairo, and the second shows a cafe in Paris, during the action of which a complete, up-to-date cabaret show is given. Mr. Howe will appear in his well-known impersonation of the Hebrew capitalist, Iky Umsky, in which he has achieved considerable popularity with patrons of burlesque. Incidental to the performance there will be an attractively arranged vaudeville program contributed to by the principal members of the organization, as well as by a number of specially engaged acts. The production is said to reveal a scenic and costume equipment of unusual beauty. The supporting company includes Eva Muil, Margaret Flavin, Charles Moran, Vera Desmond, Stephanie Anderson, Harry Prescott, Anthony Cortelli, Butler Manderville, Al Pearson, Ed Smith, Earl Wood, Fred Rith and Ned Silvery, and there is a large chorus made up entirely of girls. It is announced that special efforts have been made to bring forward in this performance an exhibition of all forms of dancing, for which experts have been employed. Mr. Howe was among the first of the producers in this form of amusement to get in step with the demand for meritorious shows, and his present season's offering is regarded as a distinct advancement upon anything he has heretofore produced. This, it is asserted, will be especially noticeable in the appearance and efficiency of the large chorus, whose work is relied upon to give that quality of snap and liveliness so essential to the enjoyment of a burlesque performance.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

That Plainfield amusement seekers appreciate the efforts of Proctor's management in providing a picture entertainment that is second to none interspersed with classy vaudeville acts, is shown by the increased attendance at that popular theatre. Triangle Plays are the talk of the town. With such men as D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mac. Sennett attending to the producing and directing of Triangle Plays, and with such stars as Douglas Fairbanks, Billie Burke, Raymond Hitchcock Dustin Farnum, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Eddie Foy and a host of others equally as famous, they cannot but help to live up to their name of "The Best Pictures Made." Yesterday a new program of Triangle Plays were preented and will continue the rest of the week. Frank Keenan appears in "The Coward." Eddie Foy and the Seven Little Foys deport themselves in a very funny farce entitled "A Favorite Fool." This is Foy's first appearance in pictures, and he scores a decided hit. There is also offered four vaudeville acts. Louis Leo appears in a sensational suspended ladder act, the Cullen Brothers are dancers who perform many difficult feats, while the Classy Trio furnish a musical entertainment Jack and Aldie Mason, billed as comedy entertainers, live up to that title. A special toy matinee will be held tomorrow for the kiddie, who will receive a handsome present. Next Wednesday evening the big bazaar will be an added feature.

FIERCE MIDNIGHT FIRE TOUCHES THREE HOUSES

Somerville, Dec. 17.—A Willard Totten, of Middlebush, awoke at 2 o'clock this morning to find the entire rear of his houses in flames. He awoke his wife and together they barely managed to escape with their two small children, only getting a few articles of clothing out of the home. The home of Elmer Smith, next door, and that of Mary Emma DeHart, also caught fire. Mrs. DeHart was in bed with a broken leg. Neighbors carried her to safety. A volunteer force of more than fifty men worked for hours to prevent other houses in the neighborhood from burning. Elmer Smith and Judson Cain, two of the volunteers, were both overcome with smoke.

MAN WHO INSULTED WOMEN IS PAROLED

Italian Will Be Watched by Probation Officer for Three Years.

Somerville, Dec. 17.—After pleading guilty to four charges of immoral conduct, Nick Caravalina, this morning made a plea for leniency through his attorney, Fred A. Pope, and was put on three years parole by Judge Daniel M. Beekman.

Caravalina is the man who has been insulting women in this neighborhood for many months. It was proven in court that he has a wife and two small children, whom he supports, and that he is also taking care of his mother and father. While Attorney Pope did not attempt to excuse the crimes of the Italian, he did point out that the man had not had the advantage of moral training, and that he was deficient in this development.

Because of the strong public feeling against the Italian, it was thought best to put him in the care of a county officer, and he was paroled to Probation Officer John Osborne, who will watch over him carefully. Judge Beekman warned the Italian that he would give him the limit on the slightest evidence of further criminal actions.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. CONOVER

Obsequies Both Here and at Asbury Park Attended by Large Gatherings.

Following a large and impressive service held in the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, yesterday afternoon, the body of Mrs. Josie Elliott VanArsdale-Conover, wife of Rev. Garrett M. Conover, of Asbury Park, was brought to this city this morning and at 2 o'clock this afternoon a further service was held for the local friends. It took place at the home of her aunts, the Misses Elliott, of 120 Grove street. The residence was Mrs. Conover's father's home for many years and it was there that she was married twenty years ago.

The services here was in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and was attended by scores of people who had known Mrs. Conover since childhood. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, assisted in the obsequies, reading poems and Scriptural passages that were favorites of Mrs. Conover. A trio composed of Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Etta Raybert and William Holmes sang three selections: "Peace, Perfect Peace," "Asleep In the Arms of Jesus," and "Abide With Me." Interment was in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being: William S. Vroom, of Somerville; E. Miller Krymer, of Elizabeth; George Ayers, of Germantown, Pa.; Arthur Van Arsdale, Ernest Powlison and Levis Ayers, of Plainfield.

The Grand Avenue Reformed church at Asbury Park, of which Mr. Conover is pastor, was filled almost to its capacity when the service was held yesterday afternoon. The gathering included relatives and friends, many of the latter coming from towns in which Mr. Conover held pastorates since their marriage. These were Hawthorne, West Nyack, New York, and Rocky Hill. The service was in charge of Rev. Lester G. Leggett, of Red Bank, and he was assisted by five other clergymen, Rev. Dr. Aaron Ballard, head of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association; Rev. Dr. Leon K. Willman, pastor of the First M. E. church, of Asbury Park; Rev. Alfred Duncombe, of the Long Branch Reformed church; Rev. P. T. Gates, of Asbury Park, and Rev. William Bruce, of the Park Hill Reformed church, of Yonkers, N. Y. The last named pastor preached the sermon. There were scores of beautiful floral tributes both at Asbury Park and at the local service, many of them coming from distant points.

DEATH SUMMONS MRS. S. A. MARTIN

Widow of Captain James H. Martin Passes Away at Daughter's Home.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Martin, widow of Captain James H. Martin, died at 4 o'clock this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank A. Weeks, of 825 West Seventh street. Her death came after a brief illness which first became apparent last Monday night. Pneumonia developed Wednesday and she had been in a comatose condition for the past forty-eight hours.

Mrs. Martin, who was seventy-five years of age, was a native of Hartford, Kentucky, but had been living in the North since 1874. Her husband was captain of a Kentucky company on the Union side in the Civil War. He died in Brooklyn eighteen years ago and four years afterward Mrs. Martin came to Plainfield, making her home here since that time. Although a member of the Congregational church and the possessor of a true Christian character, she was not active in circles outside her home, her family always being her first consideration. She made friends with all with whom she came in contact, and her sudden death comes as a great shock to each one.

Beside Mrs. Weeks, Mrs. Martin is survived by one son, John R. Martin of Park avenue, who has been connected with Armstrong's pharmacy for many years; also two brothers, John C. Thomas and E. Peter Thomas, of Hartford, Kentucky. The funeral will be held at the late residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30, and will be in charge of Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First Methodist church. Private interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

UNION SERVICES AT CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH

There will be no Sunday-school services at Warren chapel Sunday morning, because of the union services for all schools at the Crescent Avenue church at 3 p. m. Sunday afternoon. Pupils of Warren, Hope and Bethel chapels will join in these services.

WHILE OFFICERS GUARD DOORS BOY GETS AWAY

While Constable George A. Scheney and an officer from the reform school at Jamesburg were busy "surrounding" the home of Charles Romp, near Dunellen, yesterday afternoon, to capture Henry Romp, his son, who recently returned from the school, the youth jumped out a window and ran away. The officers gave chase, but were soon outdistanced. They did not see the boy who ran away from them, but believe it was the one they wanted. While the reform school guard went to the front door, and the constable to the rear, the youth jumped out a window on the side and before they could get close enough to make out his features he was gone.

MOTORCYCLE CLUB MEETS AND DEVOURS BEEFSTEAK

A busy winter season was planned at last night's meeting of the Plainfield Motorcycle Club, one of the event being a sleigh ride party for the members and friends. Following the business meeting last night the members sat down to a beefsteak dinner at the Queen City Hotel. An interesting letter from Percy Haberle, a member of the club who is in New Orleans, was read at the meeting.

At the next meeting of the club, to be held January 6, nominations of officers will take place.

CORK FORESTS.

Money Making Trees That Grow in the Poorest Kind of Soil.

The cork oak is a kind of jack at all trades among trees, and its service indicates well the kind of new freedom that trees may give us by their new helpfulness if we will just give them a chance. If the garden of Eden story had been written in Spain or Portugal I think the fortunate couple would have been placed in possession of a cork forest. If a man in either of these countries has a forest of good cork trees you will find him in Madrid, Lisbon or Paris. His cork forest works for him, and he stays in town.

Cork trees grow on the rockiest and poorest land. The poorer the land the finer the quality of the cork. Every eight or ten years the outer bark is stripped from the trees to furnish the ever more highly prized cork of commerce. By dividing the land up into blocks this decennial harvest will produce a fairly regular income.

These same oak trees produce acorns, often heavily, which are sold to some farmer, who drives his herds of lean hogs into the forest, where they harvest the acorns and turn them into salable meat. A Portuguese hog is expected to gain two pounds a day for ninety days when acorns are ripe.

More than this, there is beneath the oak trees some herbage fit for goats to eat. Thus the cork forest owner in Lisbon gets income from three contractors—the cork stripper, the pork raiser and the goat raiser. And with care the forest lasts forever. The individual cork tree is good for a hundred years or more, after which it is a fine big salable tree, with enough young ones near it to take its place when it is gone to market. In Portugal a cork tree, ready for its third stripping, is considered worth $25. When in full bearing an acre of these oaks will yield from one to three tons of cork at a stripping, now worth about $70 a ton to the grower. Most of this is profit. The pork is profit. It is the common rule that the income from the pasture pays the small cost of caring for the forest.—J. Russell Smith in Country Gentleman.

CLOTHES AND THE MAN.

To Be Well Dressed Means to Be Attired In Good Taste.

Dress is a subject frequently in the minds of many. Some think too much about it and some not enough. No one, however brilliant in ability, even a "genius," can afford to be careless in this matter. "He is best dressed," says Trollope, "whose dress no one observes." Little touches of individuality in one's clothing are well, but it is not in the best taste to adopt any peculiar striking style that will make people in the street turn their heads for further observation.

One should beware of extremes in fashion. Means and occupation should be considered in choosing what to wear. Even the poorest garments, if clean, in order and properly worn, give a good impression of the wearer. Women should give sufficient attention to dress to decide what is suitable for the time and occasion and that it is rightly adjusted and no further attention.

To be well dressed is a passport opening doors otherwise closed.

To be lavishly dressed betokens a shallow mind. It would appear that one thought his clothes the better part of him. Even children's dress should be thought of with care. Their clothing should not prevent free action in their play. Nor should it be so rich as to give them an idea of superiority to children less expensively dressed and so make snobs of them.

The carefully dressed man shows more self respect than the sloven.—Milwaukee Journal.

When Cruelty Isn't Cruelty.

The magistrate of the department of Seine-et-Oise, in France, once gave a decision in a claim of cruelty to a horse which is remarkable as a legal subtlety. The law provides that the offense is punishable only when committed in public. If the sore is covered by the collar, he holds, the offense is not committed in public. If it is not covered by the collar there is no cruelty. In either event the case must be discharged.

Matter of Endurance.

"My dear," said Mr. Hawkins to his better half the other evening, "do you know that you have one of the best voices in the world?"

"Indeed?" replied the delighted Mrs. H., with a flush of pride at the compliment. "Do you really think so?"

"I certainly do," continued the heartless husband; "otherwise it would have been worn out long ago!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Can't Be Done.

The Wife—This paper says that New York doctors have formed a society to study methods for staying the advance of old age. The Husband—Well, tell 'em you've tried prevarication and reducing the number of candles in your birthday cakes, and neither will do it.—Yonkers Statesman.

Some Consolation.

"There's one consolation about being in jail, mum."

"What is it, my poor man?"

"After I once go to bed nobody here makes me get up and go down to be sure that the back door's locked."—Detroit Free Press.

Yachting Ethics.

In yacht racing every yacht is bound by rules to abandon the race and go to the assistance of any yacht or person in peril.

Work is the best thing to make us love life.—Ernest Renan.

Christmas Gifts of "Things Men Wear"

When we read of a firm making absurdly untrue statements, it reminds us of the words of "Golden Rule" Jones, who said: "Beware of the store that sends up wordy skyrockets; you won't get anything but the stick."

When you consider purchasing, consider also the probity of the store that sells the merchandise.

Consider the ballast given to a gift that bears "The Rothberg Label." Can you say more plainly to the recipient that the best is none too good?

Just now this store is laden with Christmas Giveables that are a "little bit different," but not a "little bit more."

Numerous "Gift Things" for men and boys in Clothing and Fixings.

And with them goes "The Rothberg Name"—consider that!

It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

KNIGHTS' FIVE WALLOPS TABS

Columbians Take First Game for Local Catholic Court Title.

SCORE IS 29 TO 13

Both Sides Have Large Turnout of Rooters Present—Winners Show Up Well For First Game, Every Member Playing Creditably.

By defeating the T. A. B. S. quintet on the Columbus Club court last night the Knights of Columbus aggregation earned first place in the race for the Catholic championship of the city, for which the T. A. B.-S., K. of C. and the St. Joseph's Club representatives will contest during the season. The final score, although it does not signify how closely the battle was waged, stood 23 to 13, in favor of the West Front street players.

Both teams had about the same number of rooters, who kept up a din of noise from the first appearance of their respective favorites until the end of the game. The teams were about evenly matched, and no supposition could be made at the beginning of the game as to which would be the winner, although the West Fourth street players were thought by many to be the most likely winners, inasmuch as they had played several games already, while the Knights opened their season with the game last night.

George Linke and Bill Coyle, playing at forward for the Knights, put up an excellent exhibition, the former caging six goals and the latter tallying three ringers. Dan McAfee, occupying the pivot position, continually rolled the ball to his team-mates, who, by rapid passing, recorded a two-point tally practically every time. Joe Carty's return to the game was most auspicious, the fast guard playing a fine all-round game, as well as keeping his forward scoreless throughout the game.

Eleven of the thirteen points scored by the Tabs were made by Captain Art Kyle, who caged three pretty ringers and five foul goals. "Bats" Gleason scored the other baskets. In Al Bryniarski the Tabs found their greatest stumbling block the versatile guard continually returning the ball to his territory after it was thrown dangerously near the opponents' goal. Beside playing a fine defensive game, Bryniarski numbered seven goals from the fifteen-foot line, each time the sphere going through the net without touching the rim.

A return game will be played on the Tabs' court later in the season.

Following the game dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, Professor Squiers' orchestra furnishing the music.

PLAINFIELD FIVE SCORES 64-2 WIN

Overwhelms St. Mary's Club Girls—Ida Hummel and Helen Bryniarski Star.

The Plainfield Five had little difficulty in scoring an overwhelming victory over the St. Mary's Social Club on the Columbus Club court, last night. The score was 64 to 2 in favor of the Plainfield Five, the two forwards on the winning team each gathering thirty points. Miss Gill made the solitary goal for the St. Mary girls.

LOG CABIN GUNNERS WILL SHOOT FOR TWO TROPHIES

Two trophies will be at stake tomorrow at the Log Cabin Gun Club traps. The regular handicap shoot for the season point cup will be held at 3 o'clock, and at 4 p. m. a 15-bird duck shoot for the Take Home Cup will begin.

TABS' HOUSE WARMING TO BE GALA OCCASION

Tomorrow night will be one of the red-letter dates on the calendar of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society, for the formal opening of the new addition to the Tabs' clubhouse will take place. The brand-new bowling alleys and billiard table will be used for the first time, and in addition to the opening, a dinner, which will be attended by most of the members, will be served.

CITY HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS GO TO BLOOMFIELD HIGH

The P. H. S. basketball maidens are going to make their second attempt to register a win when they play Bloomfield High School at that place tomorrow afternoon. Miss Ruth Wean, the locals' coach, has been working hard since the Battin defeat last Friday, and has succeeded in putting new spirit in the outfit. Miss Elsa Palmer will probably not play more than half a game at forward, as she has but just recovered from an illness. Irma Goode and Dorothy Butler will start in the forward berths, Clementine Bremble will be at centre, Natalie Geotter at side centre, and Persila Pennock and Jennie Bremble will fill the two guards.

EAGLES NOSE TABS IN CLOSE SET-TOS

Win First Game by One Pin, and Second by Two, on Their Own Lanes.

The Tabs lost an unusually close fight on the Eagles' alleys last night the Birds having a margin of only one pin in the first game and two in the second.

The opening tilt was decided by the closest margin possible, the winners returning 894 and the losers 893. In the second game the Tabs bowled 825 and the Birds 827. The home team went up to 952 in the final, and won by 57 pins.

George Miller's 232 in the last game was high score. Jim Mahoney rolled 193 and 199, Mannis hit 203, while Smith and Skinner touched 200.

There was lots of rooting, and excitement ran high, especially during the first two games. A return match will be rolled next week on the Abstainers' new alleys.

CUTTERS AND HIGH STEPPERS ARE EXPECTED OUT TOMORROW

Local horsemen expect to be out in force tomorrow afternoon with their cutters and high steppers. Provided conditions are favorable, a large number of racers will be showing over the Park avenue course. The drivers have been waiting all week for the snow to get packed down, but up to the present time it has been too deep for fast work. It is expected that the speedway will be in shape tomorrow, in which case the first snow racing of the winter will be seen.

TWO BASKETBALL TILTS AT Y. M. C. A. TOMORROW NIGHT

Two games will be played on the Y. M. C. A. court tomorrow night.

The Men's League team, of Arlington, will oppose the local association representatives, while a preliminary between the Spicer and First Baptist quintets will be staged.

The Men's League Five was formerly the Union Club team, of Arlington, and played Plainfield four or five years ago against the association boys. Their record last season was twenty-one victories and three defeats. They will line up as follows: Margetts—H. Cook and Fairservice, forwards; Shindel, center; Sargent, A. Cook and Kingsland, guards. The Y. M. C. A. will line up as follows: Moulton, Love, forwards; Manley, center; Gavett and Burner, guards.

The games will start a half hour later than before, at 8:30 instead of 8 p. m.

CANADIANS MAKE IMPORTANT ADDITION TO HOCKEY RULES

New York, Dec. 17.—With the big match between the St. Nicholas team of New York, and the Montreal Stars set for tomorrow night at the local rink, the hockey season is getting into full swing. The international rivalry is having an unusual introduction for the season. St. Nicholas journeyed to Montreal last week and won the opening game, and the second is set for this city. If there is a tie, the third game will be played here on Monday night.

Cleveland, Detroit, Boston, Pittsburgh and other hockey cities are already in the field with fast teams, and the outlook is most promising. The college puck chasers are also busy, and most of the big universities have taken up the ice sport.

The Canadian Hockey Association has adopted one of the rules of basketball for application to its hockey contests this winter, which is being endorsed in American rinks. The new rule is an important step to penalize a foul made deliberately to prevent a shot at goal. The player thus prevented is to get a free shot on the goal of the opposing team, with a clear field and only the goalkeeper opposing him.

Tonight—Jersey City at Newark.

Urged by some of the noisiet rooting ever heard at a local bowling match, the Watchung Council pinners won all three games in a Knights of Columbus League series against Ascension Council, of Jersey City, at the Columbus Club, here, last night. The triple victory put the Plainfield team in third place.

In all three games the local Knights hung up a higher total than they have in any previous league this season. They rolled 892, 908 and 927 for an average of 909.

None of the games was close at the finish. The first game was even until the eighth frame. Plainfield led all the way in the second, while in the third the homesters were 100 pins to the good in the fifth, but this advantage fell to 20 three innings later.

George Taylor hit 224 in his second game, George Hoe rolled 202 and Madden 200.

The Paterson-Bayonne match, postponed from last week, was decided last night, Paterson winning two games.

JERSEY MAY GET MET OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

J. J. O'Donohue, Jr., Makes Request—Want a Later Date for Amateur.

New Jersey stands an excellent chance of landing the metropolitan open championship. At the close of the M. G. A. meeting in New York the other night Joseph J. O'Donohue Jr., offered the links of the Hollywood Golf Club. It was back in 1906 when Hollywood last handled the M. G. A. open, and on that occasion the whole affair was financed by the club. Now the association furnishes the prize money.

The New Jersey State Golf Association has asked the Metropolitan Golf Association to hold its annual amateur championship a trifle later than a year ago. June 7, 8, 9 and 10 has been suggested, for the reason that the Jersey body would like to take June 1, 2 and 3 for its meeting.

Ever since these associations have existed it has been customary for the M. G. A. championship to precede the New Jersey affair, and until last season the latter part of May was the chosen period for metropolitan. The reason the New Jersey officials now wish to lead off is that it would be natural for the golfer winning that tournament to want to go after the higher honor. They have felt in the past that the opposite effect resulted when a Jerseyman began by first winning the metropolitan. In other words, he might not always care to take a chance of defeat the next week in the Jersey.

There are those who feel that the M. G. A. would be the gainer by the arrangement, as the weather is usually more settled the second week in June. The only excuse the metropolitan body had for taking the last week in May for so many years was that of following custom.

N. P. H. S. GIRLS WIN AT WESTFIELD HIGH

Borough Team Given Hardest Fight of Season, but Finishes Little Ahead.

Another victory was collected by the girls' basketball team of North Plainfield High School yesterday afternoon, at Westfield, when the local team defeated the home maidens by three points, the score being 15 to 12. The boroughites encountered the stiffest opposition they have met this season, and at several periods the score was very close. The N. P. H. S. combination was weakened by the absence of Miss McCullough at center, Miss Keller being substituted from her regular position in guard to the pivot station.

The contest was rough at stages, the guards fouling frequently in their endeavor to stop the forwards shooting.

Miss Burtis and Captain Spencer totaled the fifteen points for the winners, the latter scoring three baskets and two fouls, while her team-mate shot three two-pointers and a foul.

FRATERNAL LEAGUE CHAMPS WILL BE OUT FOR REVENGE

The Westfield Club and Red Men fives, of the Westfield Bowling League, are scheduled to meet tonight. The last time these two teams hooked up the Red Men dropped all three games, but this is not likely to happen again, as it is rarely the Indians fail to register at least one triumph.

HUNDRED ROOTERS GO WITH GRAMMAR TEAM

Four Sleighloads See Local Basketeers Win a Roselle Park.

Basketball players representing the Plainfield grammar grades won on the court of the Roselle Park grades' team yesterday afternoon, 31 to 12. Van Winkle starred for the local boys, caging 10 goals.

Five teachers and about ninety pupils accompanied the Plainfield team, the trip being made in four sleighs. On the homeward journey, the entire party stormed a Cranford drug store for refreshments.

The next regularly scheduled game of the team is for January 5, but it is more than likely that one or more games will be scheduled, probably for next Tuesday.

Christmas Gifts that Last

A Cabinet Gas Range of the latest model makes cooking a more pleasant task by the saving of time and work.

A Gas Heated Flat Iron may not be much of an ornament, but it is mighty useful and very necessary article to have in the house.

A pretty Reading Lamp improves the appearance of any home besides providing a lot of comfort during the leisure hours of the evening.

One of the new style Semi-Indirect Gas Fixtures makes the dining room, or living room, much more cheerful besides giving good service.

Any of the foregoing would make a very desirable and a much appreciated Christmas Gift for wife or mother. Any of these articles would last and be a constant reminder of the giver. How much better to give a present such as these than some article that would quickly perish or serve no good purpose and be quickly forgotten.

Buyers Are Found by Advertising—Because They Are Opportunity-Hunters!

If you have something to sell—real estate, personal property of any sort—there's a buyer for it. You don't know who he is, or where he is. You'd be helpless in trying to locate him—but for the fact that he is trying to locate you!

For buyers are opportunity-seekers. And they have learned that the Plainfield Daily Press classified columns are 'the Happy Hunting Grounds' for opportunities. Thus, when your "ad" starts upon its quest it meets the man for whom it was written—also upon his quest. And that's how "results" follow classified advertising.

der the superintendence of the Washington Rock Park Commission, established by direction of the Legislature of this State and approved by Governor Fielder on May 12, 1913. The names of the commissioners appointed were: Mrs. Frederick Frelinghuysen, Mrs. John T. Harman, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Percy H. Stewart and William J. Buttfield—all of North Plainfield and Plainfield—and, also, the Adjutant-General of the State and the Commissioner of Roads.

As will be recalled from a previous note on the subject published in the Quarterly for July, 1913, the Continental Chapter, D. A. R., of Plainfield, first moved in the matter of placing a suitable memorial on Washington Rock, the same, with ten acres of adjoining woodland, having been purchased by Charles W. McCutchen, of North Plainfield, with a view to its preservation from destruction by prospective stone-crushing buyers, and it being understood that Mr. McCutchen would transfer the title to the property to the Society or to some trustees in trust, as a free gift, if with the assurance that plans for the preservation of the Rock would be carried out. The matter coming before the Continental Chapter, it decided to erect some monument on the spot and to connect the two rocks with solid masonry. This was done in 1912 at an expenditure of over $3,000, and both the monument, which is a stone cairn surmounted by a high flagstaff, and the connecting masonry alluded to, prove the satisfactory efficiency with which the chapter performed its work. Besides the fine platform on the line of masonry connecting the Rocks, there is a high background of rubble work the platform of which is even with the top of the hill on which the rocks are located. A long stone bench fronts the rubble wall, where visitors may be seated. The view from this point, as is well known, extends for many miles over the valley, and as far to the east as Staten Island. On a clear day the range of view is superb, even taking in the Woolworth building and other large buildings in New York city.

On the face of the cairn a bronze tablet was placed in which, in large raised letters, are the following words:

From this Rock
GENERAL GEORGE WASHINGTON Watched the Movement of the British Forces
During the anxious months of May and June, 1777.
Erected by
The Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution and the People of Plainfield and North Plainfield.
1912.
"Lest We Forget."

After this praiseworthy action by the Continental Chapter, the original idea was broadened, and the State was asked to take over the Park, a bill for that purpose being introduced by Senator Smalley, of Somerset county. As a result, the Legislature of 1913 empowered the Governor to appoint the Commission and granted an appropriation of $5,000, to be used to acquire lands adjoining "not to exceed one hundred acres," and to take over, care for, keep, improve, maintain and develop the said lands as a public park in commemoration and appreciation of the importance of the events transacted in said locality during the Revolutionary War."

After the passage of this act, Mr. McCutchen made a free deed of the land to the State of New Jersey, and enough more was purchased to make the whole tract consist of ninety-seven acres. Proceeding under this authority, the Commission, in 1914, erected what is known as "The Lodge," to be occupied by a caretaker, and also for the use of the public, at a cost of about $4,600. The architect was Henry Keith White, of Plainfield, who very generously donated his plans. Within, the furniture of the tea room, consisting almost entirely of antique pieces purchased in New Jersey, was given by the Continental Chapter. There have also been other valuable gifts of antique articles. All is plain, but in excellent taste. The idea, consistently carried out in the whole building, has been to give to the present generation a picture of the simple life of the country farmhouse of Colonial days, as well as to provide a comfortable and attractive spot to any visitor, who may desire a cup of tea or an hour's rest. As a matter of fact, if visitors give sufficient notice, by telephone or otherwise, to the care-taker or his wife, a more substantial luncheon will be prepared at almost any time. Tea is always served from 3 to 6 p. m.

The plans for the future development of the Park, as suggested by Charles W. Leavitt, who laid out the Palisades Park, and who went over the ground about two years ago, include a tennis court or two, a baseball diamond for small boys, one or two rustic shelters, or summer houses, at viewpoints, and an open, out-door fireplace, where picnic parties can prepare hot lunches. It is not the intention of the Commission to make simply a usual, formal and local park, but rather a playground and breathing place for the people at large.

It now remains for the public to appreciate this valuable asset to Somerset county and to the State by visiting it whenever opportunity offers.

PLANS FOR TRADE FLEET OWNED BY UNITED STATES ARE READY FOR CONGRESS

Secretary McAdoo Wants Appropriation of $50,000,000 to Create a Real Merchant Marine.

Says Defeat of Ship Purchase Measure Has Cost the Country Many Millions of Dollars.

THE [illegible] of an up to date merchant marine is one of the designs of William Gibbs McAdoo, secretary of the treasury. The [illegible] which consumes much time and attention in the consideration of means and methods for building or buying ships to transport products of American industry to foreign markets, which are crying for our exports but which are unable to obtain them because of the shortage of ships.

Mr. McAdoo will present to congress a bill somewhat similar to the ship purchase measure, which was defeated last [illegible]. The new plan proposes an appropriation of $50,000,000, which is to be expended by a shipping board to consist of the secretary of the navy and the secretary of commerce as ex officio and three members to be selected by the president and confirmed by the senate.

Under the plan advocated by Secretary McAdoo the shipping board would be empowered to organize a corporation or corporations and to subscribe to their capital stock in whole or in part and have authority to vote this stock in the election of directors. The officers and employees of the corporation would be chosen by the directors, and in this way, Secretary McAdoo points out, they would be removed from all political influences.

Board Would Operate Ships.

The plan includes the authorization of the board to establish steamship lines to countries where American trade needs such accommodation. It gives the board power to operate ships or lease them to others, and also to reform navigation rules and regulations, study shipping problems and make recommendations to congress for legislation to encourage and develop a great merchant marine under the American flag.

Another suggestion to Mr. McAdoo is that the shipping board, acting in conjunction with the interstate commerce commission, should have authority to arrange for through bills of lading by rail and steam lines to foreign ports and for special through rates to foreign ports, so that the American steamships and railroads might meet foreign competition in the markets of the world.

Mr. McAdoo declares the time has come for congress to consider the regulation of merchant marine companies. He does not press the point that such regulatory powers should be given to the shipping board, but he contends that the recent withdrawal from the ocean trade of the ships of the Pacific Mail company, which he criticised, would have been prevented if congress had passed the shipping bill offered at the last session. In that case, he said, the shipping board would have bought the Pacific Mail's ships and kept them in the oriental trade.

In emphasizing the need of naval auxiliaries in plans for preparedness and defense Mr. McAdoo said:

"The most indispensable factor in any sensible plan of national defense is a powerful navy, both offensively and defensively, supplied with essential naval auxiliaries in the form of an American merchant marine, and manned by American seamen who are ready and willing to fight for the stars and stripes against any enemy on the face of the earth. We cannot with safety rely upon our ability to charter or purchase suitable naval auxiliaries when a crisis appears. The very essence of preparedness for the navy is to have these vessels of suitable types and construction where we can put our hands on them quickly.

"Our neglect to provide in the past the necessary naval auxiliaries gives us, however, one great advantage. By building them now we can develop a type that will be better than anything the world has yet produced. Our one and indispensable need is ships, merchant ships of American registry. We can get them by creating the necessary naval auxiliaries."

Failure of Bill Expensive.

Mr. McAdoo says that American business has paid dearly for the failure of the shipping bill at the last session of congress. He asserts that the increased freight rates to shippers in the last year have exceeded several times the $40,000,000 which the shipping bill authorized the government to expend on merchant vessels. Losses, he declares, have been incurred also because producers have been unable to ship their products at all. Referring to the opposition which has been offered to the creation of a merchant marine, Mr. McAdoo says:

"Our antagonists have offered nothing but criticism. They roundly denounced the plan proposed at the last session of congress, but have never offered a practical suggestion as a substitute."

Secretary McAdoo has written to Secretary of the Navy Daniels asking him what number of merchant vessels would be required to have the American navy as it is today, at its maximum usefulness and efficiency in time of war. Admiral Benson replied to Secretary Daniels that it would require [illegible] for [illegible] miles, with a total of 1,172,000 gross tons.

Secretary McAdoo says that these 521 ships [illegible] could be supplied from the [illegible] shipping [illegible] of the 1,172,000 gross tonnage needed for other auxiliary purposes. Vessels of not more than [illegible] gross tons manned could be converted into naval auxiliaries from our present merchant marine. This, the secretary concluded, leaves us with a deficiency of about [illegible] gross tonnage to meet the needs of our navy as it stands [illegible].

He explains that the government should proceed immediately with the construction of these auxiliaries as a part of the program of preparedness. The designs for the vessels should be passed upon and approved by the navy department.

Plan of Operation.

Mr. McAdoo describes his plan for the government operation of these auxiliaries in foreign trade as follows:

"A really useful naval auxiliary should consist of fast passenger and cargo ships as well as ordinary cargo ships. The combined passenger and cargo ships would be suitable for operation on specific routes, such, for instance, as lines running as follows:

"To Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina and touching at the important ports of those countries.

"To Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Chile and along the west coast of South America.

"To the orient, touching at Honolulu and the leading ports in Japan, China and the Philippines.

"To bring about these results a shipping board could be created, consisting of the secretary of the navy and the secretary of commerce as members ex officio and three members to be selected by the president and confirmed by the senate.

"I suggest that the secretary of the navy be a member of the board instead of the secretary of the treasury, as proposed in the shipping bill introduced in the last congress, because at that time the necessity for naval preparedness was not so apparent as it is now.

"The secretary of commerce, whose department has its hand constantly upon the business pulse of the nation, should obviously be a member of the board.

"Congress should appropriate and put into the hands of this board a fund of $50,000,000. This would be sufficient to create a naval auxiliary of suitable fast ships of from 400,000 to 500,000 gross tons. This board should have authority to establish as quickly as possible steamship lines to the east and west coasts of South America and to the orient.

"In order to [illegible] satisfactorily the shipping board should have authority to organize a corporation or corporations and to subscribe to the capital stock thereof in whole or in part as the board may determine will most effectively carry out the objects in view.

"The board should have authority to vote the stock belonging to the United States for the election of directors. These directors will in turn choose the officers and employees of the corporation. By this means they will be removed from political influences just as the Panama Railroad company and steamship line, in which the government is the sole stockholder, is unaffected by political influences.

"The board should also have authority to operate them in commerce when ever suitable lessees cannot be found or whenever in its judgment the interests of our commerce would be best subserved by such direct operation through the medium of a corporation or corporations, as I have already described.

"The shipping board should have power to reform our navigation rules and regulations; to study shipping problems and recommend to the congress the necessary legislation to encourage and develop a great merchant marine under the American flag.

"The time has come when the congress should consider the creation of some instrumentality for the regulation of merchant marine companies. As it stands today, no ocean transportation company is subject to the least regulation or control by the government.

Board Should Control.

"Marine companies operate their ships, change their sailings or discontinue the operation of their ships when and as they please and regardless of the rights of shippers. They fix rates and change rates without notice, arbitrarily and in total disregard of the rights of shippers. They determine what cargo they will or will not carry and discriminate in favor of one shipper against another.

The Pacific Mail Case.

"What could argue more strongly in favor of governmental regulation of ocean carriers than the recent action of the Pacific Mail Steamship company? Here is a company which has operated a service between San Francisco and the orient many years. Our business men, manufacturers and producers have built up great trade interests with the orient upon the faith of this service. All of a sudden and without adequate notice and with utter indifference to the injuries that might be done to shippers and the interests of this country, the Pacific Mail company sells its ships and announces that it will discontinue its service.

"Suppose that the directors of the Union Pacific Railroad company should decide that they could make more money for their stockholders by tearing up the rails of their tracks and selling them and their locomotives and cars to some belligerent government because that government is willing in time of war to pay fabulous prices therefor. What do you suppose the indignant people along the line of this railroad would do to the officers and directors of that company? No common carrier on land would be permitted to do such an arbitrary and injurious thing as our common carriers on the high seas may at any time do with impunity.

Seamen's Bill Not Cause.

"The Pacific Mail people claim that the passage of the seamen's bill forced them to discontinue business. I am told that the seamen's bill was not the main reason for the transfer of the Pacific Mail vessels. The Panama canal act, which denied railroads owning competitive steamship lines the right to operate them through the canal, and the present abnormal rates for cargo space on the Atlantic, which made it possible for the Pacific Mail to sell its ships at more than their real value, were, I understand, the true causes of their sale.

"It is certain, however, that adequate steamship facilities between the Pacific coast and the orient are vital to the interests of our country. Suppose they cannot be maintained except at a loss. Must we then do without these facilities? I say no. In those circumstances some service should be provided under our flag, and, if private capital cannot afford to provide it because it involves a loss, then the government should provide it and take the loss for general welfare of all the people and for the protection of our trade and prosperity, especially when the vessels for such service become a part of the naval auxiliaries essential to the national defense.

"The shipping board should also have the power, acting in conjunction with the interstate commerce commission, to arrange for the issuance of through bills of lading between our railroad lines and steamship lines operating under the American flag in the foreign trade and to provide the means whereby special through rates can be made between our railroads and steamship lines to enable them to meet the competition of foreign carriers in the open markets of the world. I am sure that plans and regulations of this character if properly worked out would give our shippers and business men the opportunity of largely increasing their business in foreign markets by putting them in better position to meet competition.

"Our splendid isolation has been neutralized in great measure by the developments of modern science. The great ocean barriers have largely disappeared, and we may become the object of attack by hostile powers.

"The navy bought for the war with Spain 102 vessels as naval auxiliaries and paid, in round numbers, the fabulous sum of $18,000,000. Unhappily we have learned nothing from that painful lesson and are in worse condition today than we were in 1898.

"As a part of our naval program of preparedness we should provide every element of a well equipped, highly efficient and perfectly balanced naval fleet and organization.

"We cannot afford on private capital to create these naval auxiliaries. The government should proceed immediately with the construction of these auxiliaries as a part of the program of preparedness.

To Expand Trade.

"When we have built the merchant vessels as naval auxiliaries the question is what shall we do with them? They will not be required for actual service unless a war breaks out. There are two methods. First, tie them up in our harbors and allow them to remain idle and rot; and, second, operate them under some intelligent plan for the protection and expansion of our foreign commerce.

"The operation of the ships will keep them in fit condition to respond to the immediate call of the navy. Even if a loss is incurred it will be a small price to pay for national safety. While thus preserving the ships and creating a highly efficient naval reserve, we can enlarge our foreign trade and carry our influence, both financial and commercial, into the open markets of the world.

"Having few American ships in the foreign trade, we are dependent today on the flag of Great Britain for the carriage of the greatest part of our commerce.

"Suppose that a war between Great Britain and the United States should ever break out. Her ships would be withdrawn, and we should be involved in immeasurable disaster.

Calls Risk Too Great.

"The risk is too great for any first class power to take. We are, moreover, paying to foreign steamship lines more than $[illegible],000,000 a year.

"The time has come when the congress should consider the creation of some instrumentality for the regulation of merchant marine companies. As it stands today no ocean transportation company is subject to the least regulation or control by the government."

NO PEP.

The boss dropped in on one of his subordinates.

"How's the job?" he asked.

"Fine, thanks," was the reply.

"Like it?"

"All to the good; great!"

"Anything new?"

"No, not to speak of. Everything seems to be running all right."

"How long have you been here?"

"Seven or eight years."

"Got it down pretty fine in that time, haven't you?"

"Sure have. Runs like clockwork."

"Ever think of looking around for something better?"

"Not I. That is, not lately. I used to feel I ought to be getting ahead faster, but I guess I know now when I'm well off."

"Happy and contented now, eh?"

"Feel like I own the place, that's all."

"You said awhile ago that 'everything seems to be running all right.' What did you mean by that?"

"Just that."

"Oh. Any suggestions to make?"

"About what?"

"Anything."

"Let's see— No, I don't think so."

"Just happy and contented and no kicks coming anywhere?"

"That's my middle name."

Seven or eight years for preparation and not ready yet!

The next day a promotion he might have had was given to another man.—The Telephone Review, New York.

PREPAREDNESS A VIRTUE.

Preparedness, in matters of health and business as well as national protection, is the subject of a timely editorial in The Telephone Review, New York, from which we quote:

Preparedness in a broad sense is a cardinal virtue which perhaps is violated by mankind more than any other in the whole category, large or small.

Take, for example, the matter of health. We know or can easily ascertain how to keep well, but knowledge alone is not sufficient—it must be put into practice. We must prepare ourselves with health to resist sickness. If we are unprepared to resist it, we can hardly expect to escape it, for disease is insidious and attacks wherever the armor of health is weak.

Health is the vital principle of bliss, and exercise of health.

Or again, take our success or failure in the vocation we follow. Here we have the same principle from another angle. It is the virtue of preparedness again. We do not court failure—actually and purposely want to fail—any more than we are anxious to be sick, but there are around us all kinds of pitfalls which we must guard against, the exactions of the work we have to do, and the rivalry of a great many others who are seeking the same goal that is before us.

Our deeds determine us, as much as we determine our deeds.

The world has come to realize as never before that peace among nations depends upon preparedness against any and all enemies. Every nation has enemies within as well as without, and even though there may be none without, there is always a horde within—pride, selfishness, ambition, caste or class distinctions, demagogues, voluptuousness, greed—all enemies preying upon the body politic. Overtaxing one's strength is as harmful to health as anemia, and an autocracy in a republic is as wrong as lawlessness. We must guard against these things as much as against a possible foreign foe, and by our nation's strength prevent ravages from within and fend off attacks from without.

Preparedness is more a matter of defense than offense, therefore. It means protection from deterioration as well as from aggression, whether it be our health, our business or our country. It is a cardinal virtue, and it is up to us.

It is not enough merely to possess virtue, as if it were an art; it should be practiced.

"BATTER UP."

In a lively article entitled "'Batter Up' By Telephone" The Telephone Review, New York, maintains that "baseball by telephone has beaten its own record."

"We've heard of disabled players," says The Telephone Review, "who followed each play in the closing games of the World Series by telephone, when they were unable to be at the field even to see the glorious finish. But now comes the report from San Francisco of the actual moves in more than one big game being conducted by telephone from the bedside of the temporarily knocked-out manager."

Manager Wolverton of the San Francisco club met with serious injury in an automobile accident, but although obliged to remain in the hospital, he refused to relinquish his duties to his team. Telephone connections were made between his bedside and the bench, and Wolverton, being informed of every play, dictated the policy of his team, and the games went on as if the manager was on the bench, instead of miles away in a hospital.

Baseball by telephone for players, and now for managers. What about the fans? It must indeed be an emergency use of the telephone, we think, that will ever take the place of the "grandmother's funeral," but the telephone does effective work for the business man who is at the game. Go to the game and have a telephone at your elbow to keep you in touch with your business. That is what a baseball enthusiast of Topeka, Kansas, is doing. He has a private telephone wire from his place of business to his box at the baseball park, and as a result he feels free to go to all the games, since any one wishing to do business with him can reach him at the park as well as if he were at his office.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I noticed in a recent issue of the Plainfield Daily Press that the Mayor and Council had purchased the property at Watchung avenue and East Sixth street for a city hall site. Nothing has happened in Plainfield since the purchase of that now famous $36,000 farm for the sewer disposal plant that has created so much talk among the taxpayers. It is on the tip of most every taxpayer's tongue one meets. With one exception, so far as I have heard, the property is too far one side. That exception is a man who owns business property on Watchung avenue.

It is a splendid property for some purposes. A church, for instance; but for a city hall it is not central enough. Lots of taxpayers think that the price is a little high. Some time ago the city officials intimated that the public would be given an opportunity to express an opinion before any considerable money was going to be spent. Have they forgotten about that. They seem to think the deal was made very quick. Even since a city hall has been talked of it has been given out that the authorities wanted to get all city offices under one roof as near as possible. Now we are going away off one side with the city hall. Quite a distance from the police station and further away from the center of town on a side street. Why not have it where strangers going through our city can see our new city hall?

If it is not going to be built adjoining the police station, why not nearby, say on the opposite corner from where the Y. M. C. A. is going to build at Sycamore and Fifth streets. There is a good property that would show up well. Or another good place would be the Boice property on East Front street, opposite Church street. On that property there would be ample room for all the street department's wagons, etc., along the pond with an entrance from the rear lot on Elm place. Front street is more traveled by automobile than any other street, and strangers would see our public building there more than any other place in town.

The city offices could all be located there. Might move the police station to that point, where it would be more handy to the business section. If it is located on Watchung avenue, strangers will never know we have a city hall. When North Plainfield is annexed, which will happen some day, Sixth street will be a long distance from that portion of the town. Someone has said, don't be a kicker? What would Plainfield have had today if in the past there had not been enough vigorous kickers to turn the light of publicity on mistakes that have been made. No better town site ever existed than Plainfield. Nature gave her every advantage with a sewer outlet at Amboy Bay, the best water to be found under every foot of Plainfield, good drainage for surface water, the best gravel bottom to start building on, no blasting for cellars, the finest views to be had from either Netherwood Heights or the Watchung Mountains. It is situated on one of the best-equipped railroads that comes out of New York. In summer the prevailing west winds sweep up the valley, fanning Plainfield when she most needs it. Now, if we are going to have a city hall, let's have it where it will attract attention. Let the taxpayers have a say. If put to a vote, I am positive they would say, sell the Sixth street property and buy one more centrally located. There was some talk of sending in a monster remonstrance to the Council, but that seems to have fallen through. I think this purchase is one of the best arguments for a commission form of government that Plainfield has had since the sewer disposal farm was purchased. Don't hide our best building where it can only be seen by people of one locality. If we are going to have a city hall, what better advertisement could Plainfield have than have it placed where it would show up well to strangers. By all means locate it centrally.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Seven beauties direct from the bright lights of Gotham, in an act of nine people, with new songs, regular musical-comedy, electrical effects and lots of spice, feature the bill for the latter part of the week at the Plainfield Theatre, and critics who witnessed the two performances of yesterday pronounce the show one of the best that Manager Shannon has offered this season. The big act is known as "The Dainty New Yorkers," and it is by far the best of the girlie offerings that have been seen here. Among the others on the bill—there are six acts altogether—is Edward Lewers and company in "His Wedding Morn," a comedy playlet, in which the bridegroom forgets he is to be married, and remains home drunk. Tonight there will be the weekly hit for which many Plainfielders have learned to wait—the country store. A good list of prizes has been arranged by the management, as usual, and they will be given to holders of lucky seats in the audience.

SHOPPING THOUGHTS.

"Patience, courtesy, self-control, mercy and good temper," have been suggested by the Philadelphia Public Ledger as good words to keep in mind from now on until Christmas, while shopping. It is too late now to "Do your Christmas shopping early," but it is never too late to try to make life a little easier for those who are behind the counters in the stores. There is more than one way for those who never have had to work in a store to learn just what a trying task it is at this time of the year. If any of the readers of the Press have any doubt about this statement, we suggest that they try to find out in the privacy of their own homes, through the following schedule of exercises which the Ledger has compiled:

Unpack and repack the bureau drawers a great many times, wrapping each article and tying it up, then untying it and unwrapping it again. Climb the stepladder frequently. Do not sit down once for many hours at a stretch, and snatch a bite of lunch along toward the end of the afternoon. In the meantime conduct a question-and-answers club of as many persons as can crowd in and out of your apartment, and prepare to find much of the interrogation scornful or insolent, so that it is a struggle to keep your temper.

If, after you've done all that, you still feel that you want to be unpleasant when you go shopping, you are beyond redemption, and belong in the grouch class. We must all remember that while Christmas is looked forward to by a large majority of the people as a time for making merry, and enjoying life to the full extent, there are a lot of those who only look at it as a time of the hardest drudgery for three or four weeks, ending up in a grand rush the day before which so exhausts them that most of Christmas day must be spent in bed recuperating.

Not only should the men and women clerks be thought of in this connection. There are the delivery boys, the wagon drivers, the postmen, and scores of others that you never see in the stores, but who are just as much pushed as the salesperson behind the counter.

In declaring for Elihu Root, of New York, or Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indiana, for the Republican nomination for president, Franklin Murphy, New Jersey's member of the Republican national committee, gives evidence of his intention to represent the boss element and not the voters of the State. New Jersey Republicans demonstrated three and one half years ago that they are able to think for themselves and that they will not swallow any man whom the bosses choose to put up in the name of the party. If Murphy were working for the re-election of Wilson he could not make a better move than to support Root or Fairbanks, both of whom had a part in the national steal of 1912, when Taft was given the nomination that should have been Roosevelt's. The Progressive element of the Republican party is just as progressive today as it was in 1911; it stands for the same things today that it stood for then, and it will not bow to the dictates of self-appointed bosses in the name of Republicanism. Root cannot by any stretch of the imagination be called a Progressive. It is true that he made a spectacular fight against bossism in the New York Constitutional Convention, but there are few who give him credit for sincerity in this, and he will have to produce a longer record of good deeds to wipe out memories of his steam-roller tactics of 1911. Fairbanks is a horse from the same stable, and even the most rabid Republican is not blind to the fact that Wilson could beat either man without leaving his desk at the White House. There are approximately 150,000 Progressive Republicans in the State of New Jersey and they are entitled to representation in the national council of their party. To ignore them, as Mr. Murphy would do, means another knock-out for Republicanism, and four more years of Wilson.

Through the courtesy of A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, we have received a copy of the Somerset County Historical Quarterly for January, 1916. This publication, of which Mr. Honeyman is the editor, is unique because of the fact that it is the only one of its kind published by a county society in the United States, so far as is known. The issue in question begins the fifth year, and it contains information which is almost invaluable for future historians of the State. One of the most interesting features is a description, with illustrations, of the new lodge which has been placed on Washington Rock by the Commission created by the Legislature of 1913, and which is dwelt on in further detail in our news columns today.

After every heavy snow fall, such as that of Monday, there are a large number of limbs of trees broken off by the weight of the snow. The wood is gathered up and carted to vacant lots far from the center of the city, where it does no one any good. It has been suggested that the city would make a good move, and help many worthy people, if they found a place in the center of the city where this wood could be dumped, and notice given through the newspapers that the public could help themselves. There may be some reason why this is not a practical suggestion, but it sounds like a good one.

SHERMAN B. JOOST MADE A SERGEANT

Off Again On Again

STRICKLAND W. GILLILAN

The Chief Essential

There are sore disappointments in plenty, that we
In faring along our earth-journey may see.
Some of them are bad, while some others are worse—
We don't seem to get anywhere with this verse!

We started to say that a dingy hotel
Is closest our earthly idea of the hereafter,
But we'll swallow our grievance and stand for a lot
If the hot-water spigot runs water that's hot!

Full half of the time, in the rooms we are given
By some one who runs a hotel for a livin',
We turn on the spigot for washing or shave,
And the juice that emerges is cold as the grave.

'Tis then that the world seems a sad place to be,
And always that landlord "get's his'n." But we Will ignore all the rest and will hallow the spot
If the stuff from the hot water spigot is HOT!

Aristocratic Ducks

Now if the ducks in this pathetic story of animal-intelligence, from the Nashua, Ia., Weekly Post, had been little chickens and able to enunciate the word "Cheap!" they would not have needed to desert the car.

"Orlo Stevens . . . was riding along in his Ford, the back seat of which was occupied by a bunch of twenty-two ducks. In some way one of the back doors flew open and one by one the birds proceeded to take their departure without the knowledge and consent of their owner, alighting in as graceful a manner as could be expected of a duck. When Mr. Stevens noticed what was happening his flock had dwindled down to six, but he made the back trip and succeeded in capturing most of the wandering birds."

Not Guilty

We hate to do it, for we need all the glory we can get. But sometimes one gets glory for renunciation. If we didn't believe we would, we wouldn't renunciate, you can bet on that!

But here's what we started out to say:

There is a beautiful little poem going the rounds of the press with our name signed to it. The poem is entitled "Things Worth While," and starts out "Look at a sunset once in awhile." Now we were not the author of this poem, though we should be proud to be—would have been, in fact, if we had thought of it first. But we weren't, so newspapers had better credit it to "Anon," that versatile cuss, or "Exchange," another voluminous writer, or to London Tidbits.

A Misused Word—Partly

We have grown accustomed to considering anything in the shape of a small segment of the moon, a "crescent."

Ever stop to think what crescent means?

It means "increasing."

Yet when we see a little lunar sliver that is shrinking and will be plumb out of business before tomorrow night, we boneheadistically call it crescent just the same!

It isn't anything of the kind, of course.

It is clearly a diminuescent.

So hereafter when you see something shaped like a curved hunk of the moon—a sickle or anything of that sort—don't go calling it a crescent, and exposing your ignorance.

Simply say it is the shape of a crescent or a diminuescent.

Then EV-erybody will think you are crazy.

Have You A Little Carrier In Your Home?

CONSERVATIVE analysis of the results of thousands of examinations of the nose and throat in school children warrants the conclusion that at least one in every hundred children harbors diphtheria germs in nose or throat, even if the child has never had diphtheria.

Can such a child spread diphtheria? And does such a child spread diphtheria?

Under ordinary conditions probably not. Still, under extraordinary conditions, the precise nature of which is at present unknown, the susceptibility to infection by diphtheria increases, and then the innocent carrier might be the cause of an epidemic.

Most sanitarians believe that individuals who have really had attacks of diphtheria are more dangerous carriers, providing the germs remain present in the throat or nose after convalescence. The carrier in this instance has obviously acquired sufficient immunity to recover completely, yet he may still harbor virulent diphtheria germs in the secretions of his nose or throat.

Now for every known or unknown carrier of diphtheria bacilli there are probably a dozen carriers of ordinary "cold" germs, or pneumococci. If the truth were told, maybe you have a little carrier in your own home.

Children with adenoids or enlarged tonsils are notoriously subject to infectious inflammations of the upper respiratory tract—the nose, the throat and the bronchial tubes. Formerly, this was ascribed to lowered resistance. But the conviction is gaining ground at present that the explanation is that these children are "cold" carriers, and they "catch cold" from themselves every little while, besides passing it on to the rest of the family at frequent intervals.

The diseased tonsils and the thickened adenoid masses furnish ideal hotbeds for the propagation of "cold" microbes. With a hardy stock of well-developed pneumococci always on tap is it any wonder the child "takes cold so easily"? Have the little carrier's tonsils and adenoids properly treated by the family doctor and notice how favorably the operation reacts upon the family "cold."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Liquor Habit

Can the treatment for liquor habit be given by a family physician at the patient's home, or is it necessary to enter a hospital? I refer to the Lambert treatment you mentioned some time ago.

Answer—Any competent physician can administer the treatment, but as a rule, the patient must be in a hospital or other institution under the care of trained attendants.

Cure For Warts

Please advise through your department of the paper a sure method for the removal of warts.

Answer—Local anesthetic and the scalpel in the hands of your family doctor.

Old Maids

THE subject of old maids must be approached with caution, just as one approaches old maids themselves—especially when they are endeavoring to become young married women.

An old maid is a middle-aged young lady whose name is so durable that she has never had to replace it. Women usually begin to become old maids at the age of thirty and continue to be old maids at that age, or thereabouts, until they die. When it comes to a matter of birthdays the old maid is one of our most unprogressive citizens.

Some women are old maids because their faces are their misfortunes; some are old maids because they are equally afraid of men and mice, while others are old maids because when they were young and beautiful they fished for whales and threw back one minnow too many. In general, the sect is divided into two classes—those who have not yet lost hope and those who are still afraid that in some moment of foolishness they may yet get married.

Old maids live alone or with some fragment of their families and busy themselves with teaching, literary clubs, embroidery and missionaries. Old maids are the mainstays of the missionaries, and many a maiden lady who wouldn't allow a man within three miles of her home, if she could help it, will work her fingers to the bone supporting a fat missionary in Zululand—and probably one to whom she has never been introduced.

Many old maids have become famous and have lived in history. Elizabeth was an old maid, and if Mary, Queen of Scots, had remained an old maid, or even a first degree widow, she would have died in peace instead of in pieces. In general, it may be observed that very few of the noted women of history who have gotten into unfathomable trouble have been old maids.

A long time ago the term "Old Maid" was used as a reproach. Today, however, it is more or less of a decoration. Old maids are among our best citizens. In the mere matter of divorce alone, they hold an unsullied record. No old maid has ever been divorced. Old maids very seldom wear harem skirts and dingbat hats, and nowadays when a young lady becomes an old maid she packs most of her hair away in barrels in the attic and only wears what isn't detachable. For this reason alone old maids are now being hunted so madly by would-be husbands that there is grave danger of their extermination.

When a young lady becomes an old maid she packs most of her hair in the attic

A Leader

EVERY crisis produces a leader. In the affairs of nations down through the ages this maxim has proven true until the present war in Europe. Most of the nations of the old world now fighting for their existence have yet to find the Joshua who can lead them on to victory.

Germany has a leader who served them well in their Kaiser, whose rule is absolute by the inexorable law of the empire. If Germany fails it will not be because there was no one to guide her destinies. Great Britain has many able statesmen, brilliant diplomats and good soldiers, yet she has passed through one Cabinet crisis and faces another without finding an Alexander or a Cæsar, a Lincoln or a Grant.

France has twice seen a cabinet fall and still no great leader shines forth to lead her on to victory. Russia had high hopes in Grand Duke Nicholas, but the Czar's empire has seen him fail. Little Servia's King, Peter, has once saved his nation from destruction, taking personal command of his armies and averting catastrophe when all seemed lost, but the small Balkan nation is too impotent to settle the fate of Europe, even with such a doughty leader, for his valiant army is so hopelessly outnumbered.

But down in the land of the Hellenes t[illegible] appeared a man of indomitable will who bids fair to take high place when the history of Greece is written. Convinced that the future hope of his nation lies in taking sides with the entente allies, he holds all the people with him. He has twice overridden the will of his sovereign, who, through ties of blood, desires to cast the die with his brother-in-law, the Kaiser.

His name is Venizelos. No man the King has found has been able to hold him back. It seems not improbable that even the throne of Greece may totter if the monarch refuses to permit his people to follow this man in whose ways they have confidence. Venizelos, though citizen of a small nation, towers above the statesmen of the rest of Europe as a leader whom a crisis has produced.—Worcester Evening Gazette.

"As A Man Thinketh"

"During the recent past there have occurred several glaring instances of prejudgment of certain individuals accused of crime, with all the details thrown in of 'Appearance of a degenerate,' 'His face discloses a vicious disposition,' 'His every expression denotes familiarity with crime,' when these suspicions have been proved to be groundless in stated instances," says the Lawrence Journal-World. "Twenty-five years or so ago a photograph of William Dean Howells was submitted to a group of detectives and policemen at police headquarters in St. Louis, with the intimation accompanying it that 'He has a bad record. What do you think of him?' A dozen professional chasers of criminals without exception pronounced the subject of the photo to be a hard case, desperado, secretive criminal and dangerous man. Not one of the bunch recognized the photo as that of William Dean Howells, of whose real character anything that might be said in this connection would be superfluous. One of many conclusions that might be reached is that these men had become so habituated to looking for and recognizing criminality that they could see nothing else, understand nothing else, were blind to other qualities, and their imaginations and habits of thought obscured with criminal imaginings a flawless physiognomy. We put it up to the psychologists."—Emporia Gazette.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

An Inaccurate Description

Q. An acquaintance of mine wanted to buy some real estate. The owner made a written contract with him, agreeing to deed him the property on a specified date. It seems that the property is not very accurately described in the contract. Will this fact do any harm?

A. While a description of the property is essential, it does not need to be minute or precise, and it will be sufficient if it is of such a character that the property to be conveyed may be identified, even by a resort to other evidence than that afforded by the writing itself.

A Non-Resident Guardian

Q. Would a court have the right to appoint a non-resident guardian for a minor child?

A. Non-resident guardians are not appointed, as a rule, but under some circumstances they may be and are appointed.

Man-Afraid-Of-His-Job

We are all a bunch of Job holders, no matter the name by which we are known in our work. To work is to be dignified, whether 'tis a shovel or a pen that is hitched to our Brain. There is but one worker in all the drama of work who dishonors the whole profession. He's The-Man-Afraid-Of-His-Job. Get this into your head—

YOU are "The Man Higher Up!"

If you will but be this, from this minute you will grow and gather Power. For The-Man-Afraid-Of-His-Job is the man who fears somebody else above him, behind him, sidewise to him. He has no Independence for he is all Dependence.

YOU are "The Man Higher Up!"

Results take care of themselves. First be YOURSELF. You may lose your Job. But what of it? You will have then gained a bigger one—Master of Yourself. Cromwell once said that "A man never rises so high as when he knows not whither he goes." And Emerson says: "Why should we import rags and relics into new hours?" Keep busy.

YOU are "The Man Higher Up!"

Believe it and pass on. Honor your Job—be it ever so humble—and it will Honor you. Be Positive. Cut partnership with The-Man-Afraid-Of-His-Job. Go at your work with the belief that you alone know best your own work and it won't take long for others about you to realize for a fact that—

You ARE "The Man Higher Up!"

Current Poetry

My First Dog

You may rave about the special breeds of dogs
Which occupy the benches at the show;
You may even show me oodles
Of such animals as poodles,
Or a lot of other pups that I don't know.
Though you state, in awe-struck hollers,
That they're worth a million dollars,
I will never have the thrill of old-time joy
Which I'd have if one should be Half as beautiful to me
As the half-breed dog I cherished as a boy.

He possessed a most enthusiastic tail;
His eye was full of laughter and delight;
And I never caught him lagging!
Up ahead, with body wagging,
He would prowl and hunt and snuff from morn to night.
Never once did he neglect me:
He'd have perished to protect me,
And my love for him was mixed with no alloy:
There's no dog that I could buy
That would so impress my eye
As the half-breed dog I cherished as a boy.

You may keep your Brussels Griffons and your Pugs:
Your Poms and Skyes and Spitzes please me not;
And your long-haired tykes and fyces,
Which command such awful prices—
Why, I wouldn't give a dollar for the lot.
It's because I think with sadness
Of the days of perfect gladness
Which the passing years so rapidly destroy—
And I know I'll nevermore
Find a pup that I'd adore
Like the half-breed dog I cherished as a boy.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning before breakfast a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.

WORKING THE WIRELESS.

The Jump From Long Island Over the Ocean to Germany.

The wireless station at Sayville, N. Y., is the most powerful in the world, flashing messages direct to Nauen, near Berlin.

Fifty miles out from New York city is Sayville, a small town whose principal industries are roadhouses and wireless telegraphy. Here the automobile parties stop for the few bites that always take many dollars before running on into New York, but if it were not for the wireless station the town would never be heard of.

Near the ocean, dropped in a mosquito infested field, the great Telefunken station sprawls over 100 acres. A mile away it looks like a huge spider web, with all its slim poles reaching into the air, interlaced with slender wires.

The little low building is rigged on every side with towering poles—antennae, as they are called. Five hundred feet high they stand—almost as tall as the Washington monument. From these wires radiate the electric waves that leap to Germany. Great blocks of cement, big as cornerbs, are set in the ground, and to them are anchored the guy wires.

The message is flashed across the Atlantic at the rate of twenty-five words a minute, but in case of necessity it can go up to forty. The messages go across in a series of waves, with which the station on the other side is in tune.

The messages go to a small town near Berlin called Nauen, where they are placed in a land wire and forwarded to the capital. The charge for sending a message to Germany is 53 cents a word from anywhere near New York. The 3 cents is the price of the land wire to get it to Sayville.

As soon as the key is touched in America the message is in Germany, the time occupied in crossing being only the fraction of a second. In fact, the message could go around the world seven times in a second.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

COMPETITION IN SAVING.

A Challenge a Wife Accepted and a Contest In Economy.

The following is an account of what competition did toward encouraging a bank account:

"I am on a newspaper. I have always made a salary in excess of simple living requirements, but I was a free spender and did not save.

"A baby came, and I felt an added responsibility. I was afraid—actually frightened for the first time in my life. Then I gave the matter of saving some thought, but I could not decide upon any course of action.

"At the office one day a business discussion made me see that what I needed in my home was competition.

"That night on my arrival home I said to my wife that I would, beginning the next Saturday, give her half of my salary and I would keep the other half, and we each take an equal share of the household expenses.

"At the end of the first month I left my bank book on the library table. I wanted to surprise her. That evening she handed it to me and said she thought I was doing fine. Looking at her closely, I saw that she realized she was challenged. She did not speak, however, of any intention she might have had in mind.

"A month later I found her bank book on the library table identically as I had left mine. She had beaten me, for her savings showed $10.50 more than my own for the corresponding month and $15 in excess of my deposits for the first month.

"We are now in a race. We both have the saving habit. We have enough to buy a home if we should join funds."—American Magazine.

The Great Big Moon.

The full moon is very deceptive to those who attempt to estimate its apparent size in the sky. Most people would assert that the "great big moon" could entirely blot out the lovely cluster of the Pleiades, which glitters in the constellation of Taurus, but actually the full moon could, and occasionally does, pass through the Pleiades and only succeeds in hiding a few of the stars comprising it. So small indeed is the moon when in its full phase it dominates the night sky that a threepenny piece held at arm's length will completely eclipse it.—Pall Mall Gazette.

An Apology.

"Your customs are reprehensible beyond possibility of expression. The idea of killing your fellow man for dinner!"

Nobody Knows.

"What darn fool fashion will the women take up next?" asked the man who doesn't like the things they are wearing now.

"If I were a good enough guesser to predict that," replied his friend, "I'd be a multimillionaire inside of six months."—Chicago Herald.

The Chief Bother.

"How far ahead can you go with your family, Jones?" his inquisitive friend asked.

"Oh, I never worry about my family. What bothers me is how far back I can manage to go with my tailor."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

If values and prices ruled about alike in all stores at all times, there would not be any such thing as store competition. And, as finding desirable values would require no especial knowledge or insight, store advertising would be superfluous.

The Story of One Day
In a Great Store

THE STORE is the largest in New York City; largest in area, largest in service, largest in business.

The day was Saturday.

I entered the Store before it was open to the public—at eight in the morning. Already eager alertness and activity were in the air. The day before had been large in sales. Stocks had been depleted. Merchandise had been tossed topsy-turvy. The great buying had left huge vacuums on the shelves. I had seen those vacuums when I departed the night before.

Yet here—ready with this new day—was a brand-new store.

Reserve stock rooms had yielded up their treasures. Forward stocks were reinforced. Shelves were laden again with fresh, new goods. Counters and tables were clean—ready for business.

Everything was orderly, systematized, organized.

The clerks came in and took their places smiling and happy.

The delivery forces in the subway were waiting for the onslaught of packages.

The vans stood on the street, ready to carry the parcels into the homes.

An army of nearly seven thousand trained, skilled, efficient workers stood at attention when the bugle sounded the opening of the Store—at 8:30.

It was a huge smoothly-running machine.

That the Store is much more than a machine I soon discovered. It is a machine with a head and a heart.

The heart revealed itself everywhere one turned. In the glorious Rotunda, in its Christmas hangings like a miniature interior of some great cathedral, where gathered the store people to sing Christmas carols in unison. What a wonderful way to start the day—with music!

The heart revealed itself again in the Auditorium, where as early as nine o'clock there gathered hosts of children to receive their prizes and medals won in the Christmas Drawing Competition. Many races were represented. Many creeds; many nationalities—all singing "America." Kiddies three years old, with their mothers; fine looking boys and girls of 10, 12, 15 years—many with the stamp of genius in their faces.

Yes, the greatest thing in all the world—the outpouring of the human heart—was everywhere that day in that store; in the people, in the service, even in the dumb merchandise that is to speak some one's love on Christmas Day.

About noon—and many times later in the day—I walked over the store from subway to roof.

It was filled with choice products from all over the world. It was filled with crowds of happy shoppers. Laughing, smiling crowds on every floor, in every section.

Good natured crowds that walked up as well as down the stairways. Crowds so great that they almost blocked the subway, which has a private entrance to the Store.

There must have been fifty thousand people shopping at one time in that Store.

Yet everything was orderly and clean and fresh. Everybody was cheerful and courteous, almost radiant.

The "grouch" was there, as he is everywhere. Oh, yes! and the grumpy man and woman. But they were not behind the counter.

Scores of times I heard the soft answer that turns away wrath. It was "Pardon me, I will wait on you in a minute"; "I'm sorry; I did not mean to push you"; and "Kindly come to this end of the counter and I will show you the goods."

No cross words. No "back talk." No supercilious airs. No gossip. Nothing but service, service, service.

I went into the huge restaurant. A sea of happy faces, family parties, at luncheon.

I went through the Toy World—through the densest crowds in the Store. Still happy, efficient service.

Down into the Delivery. Packages were sliding down the spiral chutes in droves.

Out on the street I went, to see the busy loading of the delivery automobile vans.

Order, system, organization, service—everywhere.

More than a hundred thousand transactions were made that day.

More than a hundred thousand separate packages were wrapped, inspected and started on their journey into homes.

And this was one day in one store—one Wanamaker Store.

Over in Philadelphia there is another Wanamaker store—even larger: the mother store. Some day the son will be bigger than the mother—this is the way of Nature.

Two stores—one ownership, one system, one kind of service.

More than 14,500 business people are on the active rolls of these stores to-day.

More than fourteen million dollars worth of merchandise was in these stores when the Christmas month began; four and a half millions more will come in before the month ends.

More than seventy-eight acres of room are in these two stores for the handling, display and sale of merchandise and hospitalities to the public.

No wonder these stores are never overcrowded.

No wonder the stocks never run out.

No wonder the business is so large.

No wonder the service is so satisfactory.

* * *

Yet these stores started from nothing—nothing except an idea.

That idea was: The customer first.

90 years ago A. T. Stewart opened his little shop, 12x40 feet, in New York.

54 years ago John Wanamaker opened his little shop, 30x80 feet, in Philadelphia.

Nineteen years ago there opened in New York the John Wanamaker Store, formerly A. T. Stewart, which soon trebled the building and equipment.

This is the store we have been trying to describe.

This is the store the people of New York call an institution.

This is the store they show with so much pleasure to their friends from all over the world.

This is the store New York and the wide circle of shoppers around New York have taken to their hearts.

Mere bigness is nothing to the public.

Coupled with service, however, service that comes through natural and normal growth, bigness becomes a tremendous power for good.

Four things make a store's service:

MERCHANDISE
EQUIPMENT SYSTEM

These four things at their maximum efficiency, so far, have made the Wanamaker Stores what they are—the largest purely retail organization of its kind in all the world.

WANAMAKER'S

THE ROPES OF MAUI.

An Ancient Legend of the Sun From the South Seas.

One of the most picturesque legends connected with the solar beams is that told in the islands of the south Pacific, where sunbeams are known as "the ropes of Maui." It is related that in former times the sun god Ra was not so regular in his habits as he is today. In fact, he caused the south sea islanders much annoyance by setting in the morning or at noon or at other inopportune times, just when his light was needed for the daily tasks of mankind.

The great hero Maui undertook to cure him of these erratic habits, and the first step was to make the sun god prisoner. This was accomplished by laying a series of six snares made of strong cocoanut fiber along the sun's path in the sky. When the deity next rost from Avaiki, or the land of ghosts, the first noose encircled him, but slipped down and only caught his feet; the second slipped, too, but caught the sun god's knees; the third caught around his hips.

Still Ra pressed on, scarcely hampered by these contrivances. The fourth noose tightened around his waist, the fifth under his arms, and finally the sixth and last caught him around the neck and almost strangled him. Then the sun god confessed himself vanquished and in fear of his life promised Maui that he would in future adjust his daily journeys more in accordance with the comfort and convenience of mortal men.

Ra was then allowed to proceed on his way, but Maui prudently declined to take off the ropes, which may still be seen hanging from the sun at dawn and when he descends into the ocean at night. Hence the islanders say, when they behold the beams radiating from the sun, "Tena te Tauna a Maui"—"See the ropes of Maui."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

ECCENTRIC NORTH RIVER.

Curious Pranks of a Tortuous New England Stream.

Westerners tell of the queer behavior and changes of course indulged in by the Missouri river, and Texans aver that for pure cussedness and general fickleness no stream of water can approach the Rio Grande. There is, however, a stream in New England where of the rest of the country hears little and which should in justice be accorded a place in the list of queer behaving bodies of water.

This is the North river in Massachusetts. It has its source in a pond near Hanson, whence it proceeds in a tortuous course to the sea at Scituate. Now the distance by air line from Hanson to Scituate is only ten miles, but by the North river it is forty.

New Englanders aver that when the tide is coming in the North river runs upstream, and not only that, but the upper part of it, which is fresh water, also runs up. Thus this queer stream presents the strange spectacle of a fresh water river proceeding uphill.

The North river's claim to eccentricity is not, however, limited to this fact. It is so crooked that it doubles on itself. At one spot near Hanover this river, by accomplishing three loops, moves toward the sea for a distance of only fifty feet and wanders about for a distance of about fifteen miles in doing it.

In November, 1898, the North river got very cantankerous. It moved its mouth three miles to the northward, thus making a present to the town of Marshfield of a deep harbor. In so doing it killed three men and converted many thousand acres of good meadow land into a salt marsh.

Historically the North river is of note as being the scene of the last Indian raid on the coast settlements.—Philadelphia Record.

The Stationer.

"Stationery" has etymologically as much to do with standing as has "stationary." The original stationers, or stationarii, were so called because they sold their books upon stalls or "stations"—in London round about old St. Paul's cathedral, in some cases against the walls of the cathedral itself. This is one of the many trades the names of which have no direct allusion to the commodities sold. "Grocers," for instance, were so called either because they sold "en gros," wholesale, or because they were "engrossers," monopolizers.—London Chronicle.

Always.

Time haunted her. She laughed at him, she resorted to a thousand devices whereby to discomfort him, but he was not to be shaken off. At length she lost her temper.

"Can't you see," she flared out reluctantly, "that there's no room for you where beauty dwells?"

"There is always," Time rejoined, touching his scythe significantly, "room for one mower."—Boston Herald.

A Hard Job.

One of the hardest jobs I know of is to take a ride, when you're feeling nice and sociable, in a left hand drive machine with a fellow who is deaf in the right ear and has to stop the car and turn his head toward you every time you make a remark to him.—Farm Life.

Youthful Observer.

The New Parson—Well, I'm glad to hear you come to church twice every Sunday. Tommy—Yes. I'm not old enough to stay away yet.—London Opinion.

Right at Home.

Sometimes it is hard to find the city of happiness, but it will narrow the search if you remember that it is in the state of mind.—Youth's Companion.

The foundations of justice are that no one shall suffer wrong; then that the public good shall be promoted.—Cicero.

SLIGHTED A HERO.

Later on the Coaching Party Got a Startling Surprise.

A HOST WHO PROVED A SNOB.

He Thought His Guest Was Not Classy Enough to Travel With Him and His Friends, but Waked Up After Awhile to Find Him the Lion of the Day.

Here is one of Captain James A. Scrymser's best anecdotes, which he did not put in his volume of personal reminiscences of peace and war:

After the close of the war between the states in 1865 Secretary of War Stanton, at the suggestion of President Johnson, selected Major General Francis C. Barlow as the bearer of certain dispatches to the American minister, Mr. Adams, in London. It later developed that the main purpose of this mission was to allow the English army officials to know Major General Barlow, he being deemed by the president and secretary of war an excellent specimen of a youthful volunteer general, who had served gallantly throughout the war.

General Barlow sailed for England with his official dispatches, and shortly after his arrival he was presented to the Duke of Cambridge, then commander in chief of her majesty's forces, by Mr. Adams, our minister, and likewise to other high military officials.

Of course General Barlow received many invitations and was able to accept but few. One invitation which he did accept was for a week end party at the house of a well known major general of the British army, residing a few miles from Aldershot. On his arrival Barlow found a very gay house party, made up of distinguished social "lions and lionesses." I have not the slightest doubt that Barlow held his own in this distinguished company, although these high army officials of her majesty's service evidently drew a sharp line between volunteer and regular officers. This fact Barlow fully realized the Saturday morning after his arrival, when, much to his surprise, his host and ultra exclusive house guests departed for "a drive" in a four-in-hand coach, leaving General Barlow behind. No invitation had been extended to Barlow, and he was left alone on the piazza, being told by his hospitable host that there were a box of cigars and the London Times in the smoking room, which would keep him fairly well occupied until their return.

The coaching party had been absent about an hour when a troop of cavalry, commanded by a British officer, halted in front of the house. The officer asked for General Barlow and, upon meeting him, said that he was commanded by his royal highness the Duke of Cambridge to invite General Barlow to accept a review of her majesty's command of some 10,000 men at Aldershot at 2 o'clock that afternoon.

General Barlow gracefully accepted the invitation and, donning his "war paint," mounted an extra horse, which the Duke of Cambridge had thoughtfully provided for him, and started for Aldershot with his escort.

As Barlow and his escort approached the reviewing stand the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," all flags were dipped, and the Duke of Cambridge rode to the front and received General Barlow in a most courteous manner.

Naturally, General Barlow was the center of all eyes. Barlow was surprised to see the coaching party of his host directly in front of the reviewing stand. Its presence accounted for the early departure that morning. If General Barlow was surprised one can imagine the surprise and dismay shown by the gay host and his party when they discovered who was the hero of the day. General Barlow's host had during the morning drive supposedly learned of the intended review which was to be held, but had not the slightest idea it was to be in honor of his guest, the volunteer general from the States.

All sorts of apologies were offered, but General Barlow, in his dignified manner, politely let his host understand that he understood the situation perfectly and that he had evidently not been invited on the coaching party because he did not come up to the English standard of a major general in their eyes, despite the fact that he had probably seen more fighting than all the British officers on that field.

Barlow was urged to return, now that he was a "lion" in their eyes, but after such a slight he preferred to return to London, which he did, after leaving a polite but dry note of thanks and arranging for his valet to pack up his things and join him in London.—New York Post.

Thrifty.

"I fear my cousin is going to marry a very stingy man."

"Why so?"

"She suggested a morning wedding, but he said to make it after lunch on the ground that she would get one more meal at home."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Father's Baby, Willie's Lady.

"But my daughter's too young to marry, young man. She's just barely a miss."

"She may seem that way to you, sir, but she is a hit with me."—Judge.

Fortune is like a mirror—it does not alter men. It only shows men just as they are.—Billings.

THE HELPING HAND or Christmas Eve in a Lodging House

By Edward Riddle Padgett.

WELL, what d'you know, Pop?" Old man Ransom—better known as "Pop," Superintendent of the Municipal Lodging House, didn't even look up from his work but returned the salutation—for such it was, coming from a newspaper man—with the equally stereotyped reply, "Oh, nothing much." And then he added, after a moment, "Except that this is Christmas Eve and"—he smiled sadly—"we haven't quite as much Christmas around here as I hoped to. Sit down, Proctor; I'll be with you in a minute."

Proctor, the visitor, sauntered across the room and took the chair indicated, sliding down onto the small of his back, leisurely crossing his legs and reaching for the inevitable cigarette.

Ransom—kindly, gentle, benevolent old Ransom—had been with the Municipal Lodging House for over fifteen years. And he still believed in the flotsam and jetsam that came and went each night. To him they were his "boys," down on their luck, a little worthless, even a little wicked, but still human beings with a spark of the Divine in their hearts that needed only to be fanned at the right moment and in the right way to put them on their feet facing the world with confidence and wringing from it by fair means the living it owed them.

In one point, at least, the old man was adamant. No subterfuge, nor pleading nor profane refusal could budge him. The would-be "guest" had either to yield or get out. And that point was his firm insistence that all who tarried under his roof live up to his motto of "Soup, Soap and Salvation." Many were strong for the soup, but indifferent to the soap and salvation; yet they must take all three—or nothing.

Presently he turned from his small, cheap desk, shoved off in one corner of the main room beneath a swinging electric light under which his hair shone white as snow, and faced Proctor.

"Well, my boy, what can I do for you?" he said in kindly tone. "I haven't seen you for quite a while."

"Nope," the Star man replied, sprawling at greater ease in his chair and exhaling a cloud of smoke ceilingward. "Things have been breaking over at Headquarters and I've been on the jump. I've come tonight to get some Christmas dope from you. I'm to come across with an 'under-world' one as the city editor calls it, and I'm up against it. Can you help me out?

"I'll try," said Ransom. "Come back in about an hour and perhaps I'll have something for you. But I must finish this statement first."

Proctor untangled his knees and got to his feet. At the door he paused, turned and called back, "Merry Christmas, Pop!" Then, as though half-ashamed of the little bit of emotion he had displayed, he banged the door after him and set out for Police Headquarters.

There, he first learned from the Sergeant on the desk that nothing had "broke" during his absence worth more than routine mention. He sauntered into the "back room" where checkers and pinochle were in progress, watched Patrolman Hegarty, one of his best "pipe lines," triumphantly take another cop's last king.

Then he wandered back to the office arriving at the desk almost simultaneously with a man who had entered unattended by a bluecoat.

The stranger looked like a man down on his luck, and yet he didn't. His clothes were plain, even shabby, but they were not frayed nor were they dirty. His linen was clean. His hands were rough and large, a sure sign of work. And his face was strong, clear cut and deeply lined, with eyes that looked out unafraid.

"Can you tell me," he asked the Sergeant, in a tone in which there was no apprehension, "what's become of the Municipal Lodging House. It used to be on Oliver street, I remember, some eight years ago. And I want to know if old Pop Ransom is still in charge."

The Sergeant looked at him keenly before replying. He was about to ask "You used to flop there then, huh?" but something in the man's direct, unwavering gaze deterred him. "They've moved around on Stoughton street," he said instead. "And Pop's still on the lid." Then, in a disarmingly friendly tone, "A friend of yours?"

"Yes," replied the stranger promptly, and without the quiver of an eyelash. "Yes—the best friend I ever had. Whereabouts on Stoughton street?"

"I'm going around there now," Proctor spoke up. "And I'll be glad to show you. Pop's a friend of mine, too."

Somehow, he sensed a story.

"Thank you," said the man. "I'll appreciate it very much, if you're sure it won't inconvenience you. My name is Bertram Kent."

As they left the building and turned in the direction of the Lodging House Proctor ventured a question. "Pop's a great old fellow, isn't he? Known him long?"

"A little over eight years—though I haven't seen him for eight," was the somewhat cryptic reply.

They walked along in silence for a while.

"He's still doing business at the same old stand—in the same old way," suggested Proctor presently. "The bums still call him Pop and eat his soup while they pretend to use his soap and swallow his salvation." And Proctor laughed invitingly.

For a moment Kent made no comment. Then he said tensely, "He's the salt of the earth!" And after a slight pause he added, "Maybe some of them swallow a little of the salvation with their soup."

Proctor hastened to take up his cudgel. "So he thinks, too. But I can't see it. Once a bum, always a bum, is my theory. And a man'll sit through a prayer meeting or an experience service on any cold night to get a bed and something to eat afterwards. It's just a matter of psychology, you know. Once a man loses his grip and finds out that he's not going to be allowed to starve he—well, why work at a job that, anyway, just about pays his living expenses when he can get them without working and can pick up enough for booze and tobacco by pan-handling? I've seen a lot of good men—newspaper chaps—go that route, and they never come back!"

Old Pop Ransom was leaning forward tensely, the very soul of him in his eyes.

Kent started to speak, but evidently changed his mind, for just then they had arrived at the destination. Through the glass in the door they could see old Pop Ransom bent over his desk, his hair silver white in the glow from the swinging light above him.

They entered.

Pop glanced up as they approached and nodded to Proctor, then looked inquiringly at Kent. "Good evening," he said pleasantly, but in a tone that plainly indicated he did not recognize him.

"Don't—don't you remember me, Pop?" asked Kent, his voice trembling.

Ransom looked at him long and searchingly. "Your—your face is kind of familiar," answered the honest old man, "but I can't place it—and I haven't the slightest idea of your name."

"Kent," said that individual.

Pop seemed to grope back—back—back in the archives of his memory, reaching out for light.

"A little over eight years ago," Kent prompted, a whimsical smile on his face. "One Christmas Eve—soused to the gills—and bent on suicide—"

Suddenly the old man's face became alive with joy. "Kent—B. Kent—as I live—B. Kent!" he cried.

"Yes!" And there was a strange mixture of enthusiasm and pride and gratitude in his tone. "Only now it's Bertram Kent, right out and without any hesitation. Pop, I've been planning this meeting for five solid years!"

By this time their hands were clasped and old Pop had one arm over Kent's shoulder in affectionate embrace.

"One of my boys, one of my boys!" he exclaimed joyfully, despite the tear in his fine old eyes, and looking at Proctor. "He's come back to see me after all these years. My, my"—and he sniffled hastily and without shame—"here I am forgetting all my manners. Sit down old man and let's talk it over. You're a sight for sore eyes! And how is everything with you, my boy?" He reached out a trembling hand toward Kent's knee and patted it. "You're looking fine!" Then he glanced at Proctor, with pride and triumph.

"I guess you two old—friends—would rather talk it over without me," said that worthy quickly. "So I'll—"

"No!" said Kent in decisive tones. "That is, if you aren't busy. I—I was much interested in what you said as we walked here, and I want to say a few things to you. Sit down, please."

Proctor sat, for there was something compelling about Kent. But he was far from subdued. "I—I guess you mean you got some of the salvation along with your soup, eh?" he remarked in a tone that just bordered on the sarcastic. "And maybe you're a millionaire by now, eh?"

For a second anger blazed up in Kent's eyes, but then it changed to a tolerant, confident smile. "Yes, I swallowed some of the salvation," he said, "enough, anyway, to cut out the booze and get me a job on a coastwise freighter. I landed in Central America. Why I went I don't know, except that I wanted to get where nobody knew me, and begin all over again."

"I batted around for a while and finally ran into an Englishman who owned a big banana plantation, and he gave me a job. Also, he helped me fight the booze by not giving it to me. It was hell sometimes! Well, I got on my feet. Then he made me boss of one of his gangs. I was making pretty fair wages, too, and I saved them, for the simple reason that there was nothing to spend them on.

"After three years his manager left for a better job in the Argentine, and the Englishman gave me his place. One year ago, when the war came on, he returned to England to join his regiment—leaving me to run the whole plantation. But he also let me buy a small interest in the place with the money I'd saved. He said it would make me a better manager to feel that part of it belonged to me. I guess he's right, too."

Proctor shifted his weight and lighted another cigarette. Old Pop Ransom was leaning forward tensely, the very soul of him in his eyes.

"Two months ago," Kent continued, "I found out that I'd have to come back to the States on business. And from that moment on—" turning to the old man—"I've been looking forward to this meeting with you, Pop. No, I'm not rich; I'm not even well-to-do. I've simply got a good salary and fine prospects, for the business is growing and there's money in it. I've fifty dollars for you to buy a Christmas for the boys here now, and I had to save it up. But I've longed always to come back and clasp the hand that lifted me out of the gutter. And now I'm here, Pop!"

"You see! You see!" the old man exclaimed to Proctor, his voice vibrant with pride.

"Yes, I was coming to that," said Kent. "As your friend and I walked here from Police Headquarters, we had a little talk about this business of giving a helping hand to the down-and-outer. He doesn't seem to think there's anything in it. So, Pop, I thought it might be well to let him hear my—I mean our story. I wonder what he thinks now?"

Proctor had the grace to look impressed. But instantly his combative spirit asserted itself. "I—I think it's fine!" he said. "And I want to tell you, Mr. Kent, that you haven't yet got all you deserve. But I can't change my opinion. One come-back does not prove that even one out of a thousand bums can turn the trick. You're the exception, man, you're the one man in a thousand!"

Pop shook his head and started to speak, but Kent laid a detaining hand on his shoulder.

"You're mistaken, young fellow, you're mistaken," he said. "This very thing is happening all around us every day in the year, only we hear of only a few cases, of course. But more than that, once one of us does come back he works to pass on the good word to others. He's watching always for a chance to give a hand to somebody who needs it. It's sort of an endless chain. Now, I can give you a case in point."

Kent resumed his seat and accepted the cigar which Pop proffered.

"During the first year I was managing the plantation," he went on, "I went into the town—two hundred miles away—to straighten out some shipping mix-up. And down at the waterfront I ran into a young man from the States. I knew he was an American the minute I saw him. He was in a bad way, what with booze and the harsh treatment he had received as a stowaway from New York on one of the fruit steamers. And he was crazy to jump in the bay.

"Well, I got him into a coffee-house, and presently he began to listen to me. He had a whole lot better education that I ever dreamed of having—and I wasn't kicked out of college until my second year, at that. But he was weak. The long and short of it was that I took him home with me. And just as my employer had helped me fight, so I helped him. He won, too.

"Now, he's my assistant and while I'm up here he's running the whole works. You couldn't make him take a drink at the point of a gun. He's got a pretty healthy sum saved up, and next year he's coming back to the States for good and let his parents know that he's still alive. But more than that, he's a genius. Why he writes stories for the magazines—and you'll find his first story in the January issue of Nobody's Magazine. His name's Vernon Proctor, so look for—"

Proctor sprang to his feet, sending his chair crashing against the wall. "Vernon Proctor!" he cried. "Did you say Vernon Proctor!"

Kent stared at him in amazement. Then, recovering, he nodded affirmatively. "You don't mean that you know him, do you?" he asked eagerly. "He's tall and thin and has the lightest hair I ever saw on any man in my life. He's told me, by the way, that this is his home town—"

Proctor reached out his hand. "Why," he gasped, "why, old man, he's my brother!"

Proctor had his Christmas story!

CHRISTMAS With the Soldiers of War-Torn Europe

How the Feast of the Nativity Is Celebrated In the Military Hospitals, Prison Camps and By the Soldiers At the Front.

Copyright, 1915, by International Syndicate.

WHEN the dawn breaks on Christmas morning it will find millions of men at war, yet amid the clash of arms, the roar of musketry and the tremendous destruction of life will be heard that still, small voice of Christian teaching, commanding all the Christian nations engaged in the conflict which is now devastating Europe to devote some portion of the day in offering up their devotions to the one religion which condemns the very thing they are doing.

With the exception of the Turks all the nations at war are Christians, and except in the Turkish camps the soldiers will celebrate Christmas in the same manner as last year.

Along the British Lines.

All along the British lines the men will enjoy their Christmas boxes sent from home and special rations given out on Christmas. Plum puddings are sent to the front and all that is necessary for the feast is to heat them. The children in England have saved their pennies to send the soldiers chocolate, and practically every man will have plenty of this nourishing article on Christmas. Tobacco, pipes, cigars and cigarettes are already in France waiting to be sent to the front. Back of the trenches the men have their Christmas games, football and even polo. Last year the officers who were awaiting their turn in the trenches went for a rabbit hunt and enough rabbits were bagged to serve a fine Christmas supper. All the shacks were decorated with evergreens and a number of Christmas trees were set up.

Those who were in the hospitals in Great Britain were treated to a genuine old-fashioned English Christmas. Early in the morning a religious service was held in which the wounded men joined in singing the beautiful English Christmas carols. The nurses had hung pine branches about the rooms and lighted little candles here and there. The tables in the center were piled high with gifts. Those of the wounded who were able were propped up in bed or put into chairs. After the service was over the remainder of the day was spent by the men in listening to music, receiving visitors and feasting on the good things which had been sent to the hospital. Several noted actresses volunteered to sing, recite and give little sketches. Men dressed to represent Santa Claus went from hospital to hospital giving out cigarettes and chocolate. Sometimes they stopped for a game of cards with the men and later to cheer them by telling jokes. The greatest effort was made to cheer the blind soldiers—no easy task. This year there are hundreds of these unfortunates, and a special fund is being raised in England for the purpose of giving these poor fellows a big feast on Christmas.

French Soldiers Entertained.

The French soldier begins his Christmas with a midnight mass, and last year at one point this was held in the open. During the service a German Taube was seen hovering over the camp, but the men continued their devotions and the aviator, who probably understood what was going on, quietly disappeared without dropping any bombs. Out beyond the trenches the men play games and enjoy the good things sent from home. The English plum pudding and meat pies with raisins have become a favorite Christmas dish with the French, and last year thousands of puddings were sent to the front for the French. All sorts of amusements were provided for the men—vaudeville shows were given by actors who were fighting in the ranks and by players who came to the front for the sole purpose of entertaining the soldiers.

Once in camp they were greeted by the soldiers singing the Marseillaise and other patriotic songs. Then came the circus and vaudeville show so dear to the heart of the Frenchman. After it was all over toasts were drunk to President Poincare and General Joffre. Several French actresses volunteered to entertain the men in the French military hospitals. At Bordeaux the scenery was set up and a war play presented in which several of the wounded soldiers took part.

Germans Great Feast.

Christmas is the German's greatest holiday, and no matter how adverse his condition may be he will manage to decorate a bush in honor of the Christ Child. Even the sentry boxes in far-away Poland are already covered with pine branches in anticipation of the coming festival. Last year every shack along the entire German battle line had its Christmas tree decorated with bits of paper and tin foil. These trees were the pride of the soldiers and they spent hours in decorating the little pines and setting them up in some sheltered place where they were protected from the wind and snow. Last winter was a snowy one in the war zone and a number of men were frozen to death at their posts, so one can imagine that trimming a Christmas tree with the thermometer below zero is uncomfortable to say the least, yet with the Germans it was such a labor of love that they willingly endured the cold. Everywhere the Germans had their trees and their lights. The Crown Prince sent his men pipes and tobacco and there were special rations. Behind the trenches the men danced and sang. Extra platforms were built for the musicians and wherever a band could be found there was an afternoon concert. Boxing matches were arranged, each company being represented in the bouts, and the matches were refereed by the officers. The men had their favorites, and there was much good-natured guying when a company's man was knocked out. While all this was going on the band played lively airs and the men forgot, at least for the time, that a state of war existed.

In Belgium, where the German Landstrum are on duty, their headquarters were dressed with Christmas greens, both inside and out, even the iron railing outside the building being wreathed in ropes of laurel and ivy. At the barracks the men set up trees and invited the Belgian children to come to the celebration. There was a special Christmas dinner for the soldiers and besides this hundreds of Christmas boxes filled with cakes and warm clothing were sent from the Fatherland. "Of course, we missed our families," said one of the men, "but it was a great Christmas. We know they are well and praying for the success of the Fatherland." In the German military hospitals at Berlin, Munich, Cologne and other places the men were fairly loaded down with presents and nearly every man had his individual Christmas tree. Relatives and friends visited the hospitals. There was music by bands and orchestras—in fact, it seemed that all Germany tried to make the wounded men happy on Christmas.

Christmas at Prison Camp.

Out at the big prison camps the men were allowed to celebrate, and an extra ration of food was given. At several of these camps the German guards assisted the men in decorating their quarters. "Let's hear you sing Tipperary!" called out an officer of the guard. Several members of an Irish regiment heard the request and they gave a wild whoop and then sang the song as only an Irishman can. The Indian prisoners later joined in the singing. The French sat about playing cards, and the Singalese looked on in wonder and then began to dance. Although Christmas of the Greek Church is several days later owing to the difference in the two calendars, the Russians took part in the celebrations, singing their folk songs and giving some of their quaint dances and also joined in pulling the "crackers" given to prisoners. Their German captors entered into the spirit of the day, so even in the prison camps Christmas was duly celebrated.

Servia, Bulgaria and Italy.

The Servian soldier has been at war so many years that Christmas on the battlefield was not a new experience to him. Roast pig is his national Christmas dish, but few were able to obtain it last year, and this year it will be well nigh impossible on account of the devastation of their land. But the brave Servian will manage to hang up a bunch of evergreen and wish his comrades a Merry Christmas.

This year will find the Bulgarians and Italians at war during the holiday season. The latter keep Christmas with a religious fervor and many remarkable scenes are likely to be witnessed on that day. Thousands of Italian soldiers will spend the Feast of the Nativity in the ice-covered Alps, where they will set up their Christmas trees amid the eternal snows. The Bulgarians, like the Servians, have spent the day in battle before, but as they are still fresh in the present war they will manage to enjoy the feast of extra rations.

So, if these men now at war can show such kindly feeling toward each other and mutually rejoice in each other's pleasure, it is not hard to predict that when it is all over there will arise in glorious unison the refrain:

"When peace shall over all the earth
Its ancient splendors fling,
And the whole world send back the cry
Which now the angels sing."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Odysseus' Tremendous Plan to Get Out of a Cave.

Promised to Eat Odysseus Last of All.

"DADDY, we have waited almost a week to have you tell us how Odysseus got out of the giant's cave." Evelyn complained as soon as her father sat down in the armchair.

"That shows me you are truly interested," said daddy. "Well, after watching the old giant Polyphemus eat four of his friends for breakfast Odysseus, the wanderer who had left with his companions when the Greeks captured Troy, decided to punish the giant and escape with the few men he had left. So he hunted through the cave till he found a huge wooden bar that Polyphemus used for a cane. The Greeks sharpened one end like a pencil, seasoned it by holding it in the fire and then hid it under the straw on the floor of the cave. Then four of the bravest Greeks and Odysseus himself waited for the old Cyclops to come home, drive in his flocks and roll the bowlder against the door.

"You remember that when the Greeks left their ships in the harbor they took along a jug of wine as a present for the natives. After the old giant had eaten his supper of goat's milk and cheese the brave Odysseus walked up to him and said: 'Polyphemus, this is good wine. Taste it after your supper. It will make you sleep well.' So Polyphemus greedily drank it, smacked his big lips and called for more. Odysseus gave him another drink, which so pleased the old fellow that he promised to eat Odysseus last of all as a special favor. Then he asked Odysseus his name. 'My name is Noman,' replied the clever Greek.

"After his wine the old giant lay down and was soon snoring in heavy sleep. Then Odysseus and his four picked men crept up out of the straw they hid in, stuck the sharp end of the big stick in the fire till it was a burning coal and then, holding it exactly over the old giant's one eye, thrust it in. The old monster howled till the cave echoed with his roaring, but the nimble Greeks managed to keep out of his way. Polyphemus' bellowing brought all his Cyclops neighbors to the door of the cave, growling that his noise had disturbed their sleep. 'What ails you, bellowing so?' they yelled at him. 'Oh, friends, I die, and Noman gives me my death blow!' he howled.

"But his neighbors were as heartless as he was himself. 'If no man hurts you, then it must be the stroke of Jove, and you must bear it,' they told him."

"The Cyclops seem to me very horrible folks!" Evelyn said.

"They were all cruel," daddy added. "So, without entering the cave to help their friend, the Cyclops all went back to bed and left Polyphemus to pass the night groaning, while the crafty Greeks finished their plan to escape."

Married Life on $80 a Month

BY MRS. IVA LEONARD

Getting Things On Instalment Plan No Longer Appeals to John Sutner.

"What is this?" asked John Sutner, pausing in front of a sewing machine on his way to the kitchen.

"That is my new sewing machine," confessed Molly in a tone meant to be conciliating. "I bought it on the instalment plan."

"You bought it!" exploded John, then checked himself, and added more quietly, "I don't understand how you could do that."

"I am going to learn to sew, and I must have something to sew with. I cannot get a machine any other way, for I have not the money. We can surely spare fifty cents a week toward paying for it. That's all I agreed to pay." Two bright spots were burning in Molly's cheeks when she had finished her explanation.

"How much did you pay down?" was her husband's next question.

"Nothing yet. I am to pay five dollars as soon as I can it saved from my household allowance."

"And you are to pay how much?" continued John, relentlessly.

"Sixty dollars." Molly's tone was feeble.

"How much was the cash price?"

"I think he said forty-five dollars, but I did not listen very carefully, for I knew that was out of the question."

John went on to the closet and hung up his coat. He was very silent at dinner. Finally Molly said:

"You do not like it because I bought the machine, do you?"

"It is only continuing what we have always done, that's all. We bought all our furniture on the instalment plan, and so paid a full fourth more for it than we should. That was one of the ways that we mismanaged. Twenty-five per cent is a great deal to give for the privilege of having a thing before we can afford it." John helped himself to another baked potato.

"What we should have done about the furniture, of course, was to wait until we had saved enough to begin housekeeping free from debt before we married," began Molly.

"Certainly; if we had been willing to begin very simply we need not have waited long. We should have started square with the world and probably could have kept square, ignorant and incompetent as we were." John relapsed into silence, absorbed in thinking of past mistakes.

"Well, I can't see as that is any help in solving this problem," began Molly. "I must learn to sew, if I am to have anything to wear; and it will take a year to save thirty-one dollars—five dollars down and fifty cents a week. I can't get along for a year and a half without a machine. Olive Ellson is very kind and tells me to come over any time and use hers, but I simply can't make myself such a nuisance. What would you have me do?" Molly had relapsed into her old complaining tone.

"It isn't as if I was getting an unnecessary article of furniture that I could get along without while I saved the money to get it."

"Why not get a cheap second-hand machine that would last till we got out of the woods and could get a good one? I heard some man talking about a sewing machine that he got in Kansas City at the second-hand shop for ten dollars." John threw this suggestion into the conversation as a last resort to save them from going deeper into debt and he had little hope that Molly would receive it kindly. To his joy she said:

"I would be perfectly willing to get a ten-dollar machine if it would sew. I suppose it could be used on trial."

"Perhaps your agent would get one for you if he became convinced that you would not buy a new one," suggested John.

"I'll find out." Molly's tone was again cheerful and hopeful.

THE TABLE.

Holiday Cake—Two and one-half pounds flour in which mix three teaspoons baking powder, two pounds butter, three pounds sugar, eighteen eggs, one-half pound beaten almonds, one grated cocoanut, one teacup preserved lemon peel, two tablespoons extract lemon. Bake in moderate oven two hours. When cool, ornament handsomely with icing and fancy bonbons.

Pumpkin Pie—Four eggs, three cups sugar, three pints milk, one quart pumpkin strained, one teaspoon ginger, four teaspoons cinnamon. This is enough for two pies.

Mock Cherry Pie—One cup cranberries, one cup sugar, half cup boiling water, pinch salt, half cup seeded raisins, one tablespoon flour, one teaspoon vanilla, lump of butter. Cut cranberries in two, add raisins. Mix sugar, salt and flour and pour boiling water over it; add berries, flavor, dot with butter. Bake with two crusts.

Hassenpfeffer—Rabbit, one onion, two cloves, one-fourth to one-half cup of vinegar, one tablespoon of lard, one-fourth cup of flour. Skin and draw one rabbit, cut into parts as you would chicken, wash in salt water. Now put it into a kettle with water for boiling, add the onion, cloves, salt, pepper and vinegar (if not sour enough to suit add more vinegar). Boil till nearly done, set aside. Take a frying pan, put on the fire, melt the lard and put into it the flour, stir the flour continually, letting it fry till dark brown, pour this over the rabbit, stir well into the mixture and let it boil ten or fifteen minutes, ready to serve. It may be served with toast or potatoes. Be careful in pouring the browned flour over the meat, as the rising steam from the hot flour and the water is apt to scald the hands.

Tea Puffs—Two and one-quarter cups of flour, three cups milk, three eggs, beaten separately; three teaspoons of melted butter, a little salt. Bake in muffin tins in hot oven.

Mock Oyster Soup—Boil a bunch of salsify and codfish size of an egg till salsify is well done, then drain off soup and season with butter and salt and pepper and add cream to taste; cannot be told from oyster soup.

Potato Rissoles—Boil and mash potatoes, salt and pepper to taste, if desired add a little parsley. Roll potatoes into small balls, cover them with an egg and breadcrumbs and fry in hot lard for about two minutes. Finely minced tongue or ham may be added with good effect, or even chopped onions, when liked.

Lemon-Raisin Pie—The grated rind and juice of one lemon, one cupful of chopped seeded raisins, one-half cup of good molasses, one-half cup of sugar, one-quarter teaspoon of salt, one and one-half cups of water and two tablespoons of flour. Moisten the flour with four tablespoons of water in a saucepan, then add all other ingredients; bring to boiling point and boil for five minutes. Cool and bake between two crusts.

"Mocha" Squares—Make a cake of one cup butter, two cups sugar, one cup milk, from two to four eggs (two when eggs are high). Beat whites and yolks separately. Use 2½ cups flour. After cake is baked, cut in squares of about 1½ inches. Take powdered sugar, mix with a very little tart fruit juice, coat squares and dip in chopped peanuts. These are almost like candy.

Cornbread—One-half cup sugar, one-half cup melted lard, one egg, one pint buttermilk, one teaspoon soda, one pint corn meal, one pint flour, pinch of salt.

OLD COIN VALUES.

Only Very Rare Specimens Can Command a High Price.

"The 1804 dollar," said a coin expert, "is believed by thousands of persons to command an enormous premium. There never was an 1804 dollar made in that year," he continued. "The 1804 dollar was made some time between 1830 and 1840. The country is flooded with counterfeit coins of this date, many of which have been made from 1801 dollars. A large number of them have fine milling on the edge, which could have been made only by a machine which the government did not begin to use until 1836.

"The Queen Anne farthing is another coin which has gained a high value in the public mind, because a collector once paid a high price for several that had never been in circulation. The used coins bring as high as $10, but they are often offered to dealers at ten times that price. The Jewish shekel, worth to dealers about $1, is often held for as much as $250 by enthusiastic amateurs who are misled by dates and the strange characters stamped on the coin.

"In the public mind a coin more than fifty years old is hoary with age and so rare as to be almost priceless, but a silver dollar of 1795 is actually worth no more than $2 to dealers, and then only if it is in an excellent state of preservation, for a great many of them were coined. A half dollar of 1803 is worth as much as 15 cents more than its face value, but collectors and dealers find that there are so many of them in circulation that there is no profit in buying and selling them. In fact, a person might have a hundred United States coins of different denominations and dates, no two alike but all more than 100 years old, which would be worth to a dealer not over $10 above their face value." — New York Times.

GLACIAL EPOCHS.

This Old Earth of Ours Has Had More Than One Ice Age.

Every one with intelligent interest in history of the world on which he lives has heard of "the glacial epoch," or the ice age. The inhabitants of the northern portion of the United States have no doubt a general understanding that the gravel hills and ridges and the huge bowlders, with which they are familiar are due to an irresistible invasion from Canada by "the great ice sheet" at a date just preceding that which geologists term "recent," yet many thousands of years ago.

It is, however, not strictly correct to speak of the "ice age" or the "glacial epoch," for there have been many of them. It is now known that even the latest or pleistocene glacial epoch has several important divisions, and in the Rocky mountain region it appears that important changes in the form and height of the mountains, due to a wearing down by erosion, took place between the glacial subepochs.

More than fifty years ago it was recognized by English geologists that certain masses of gravel and breccia and certain planed and grooved rock surfaces in rocks of Permian age in India indicated a glacial epoch vastly older than that of the Canadian ice sheets. But it is only within the last thirty years that geologists have learned that glacial conditions have recurred at many different times in the earth's history. The evidence of this has been found in all continents in Europe, Africa, Asia, Australia, South and North America. The formation of great ice sheets took place at different periods in the larger divisions of geologic time back to the proterozoic—that is, to the age of the oldest known sedimentary rocks, a great many million years ago.

Glass Razor Strop.

"The best razor strop I ever had was a piece of glass," said the boss barber, "as he sharpened the razor with a pull in it. "An old barber gave it to me, and I tell you it worked fine. Unfortunately I let it fall and broke it, and I have never been able to get one like it. There's some kink in the grinding which I can't seem to figure out. In these days a good razor strop is a mighty hard thing to find, and I would give a good deal if I could only get that piece of ground glass back again. It sure did put a cutting edge on the razor."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

No, He Had No Opinion.

"Before we take you on the jury, Mr. Smith, we must ask whether you have formed any opinion of the prisoner's guilt or innocence."

"No," said Smith grimly. "No, I ain't formed no opinion."

"And, Mr. Smith, have you or have you not any conscientious objections to capital punishment?"

"No," said Smith, more grimly still, "not in this case."—London Opinion.

Very Likely.

"Our ancestors had very few boards of health, insanity commissions and so on."

"Perhaps it is just as well. Probably they would have locked up Sir Isaac Newton, Copernicus and also Christopher Columbus."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Great Difference.

"Some say that marriage is a lottery with us."

"That's a step above the south sea islanders, where they marry a girl to the man who can offer the most cocoanuts. There it's a raffle."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Disparagement.

"I hope you never talk about your husbands," said the expecting friend.

"I never do," replied the frivolous woman. "They're an awfully uninteresting lot."—Washington Star.

CREDITORS MAY BE PAID HALF

Attorneys in High School Litigation Attempt to Reach Agreement.

$30,000 OUTSTANDING

Vice Chancellor Holds That Claims Must Be Paid in Order of Filing, and Plainfield Contractors Would Lose Heavily by This.

There is still a chance that creditors of the City of Plainfield in the matter of the building of the Plainfield High School and the addition thereto, may each receive fifty cents on the dollar for their accounts against the city.

There are $30,000 worth of claims outstanding against the High School building, all of which are now in court. The city has only $14,000 of the fund of $161,000 as a result of the failure of the Paul Exner Com original contractors, and it claims that $8,000 of this amount is exempt from the builders' claims because of losses due to the sub-letting of contracts, also that the remaining fund is exempt because of penalties due the city as a result of failure to complete the contract on the specified date. At the rate of $50 a day, the penalty specified in the contract, the total penalty is approximately $19,000.

The case is now in the Chancery Court of Jersey City, and Vice-Chancellor Stevens has held that claims shall be paid in order in which they were filed. There is now a fight on between creditors to establish priority of claim, and a hearing will be given next Wednesday, but attorneys who represent the different creditors are attempting to get together on an agreement to pro rate the remaining funds. If this could be done, and the city would agree, or could be forced to turn over the entire remaining $14,000 to the creditors, each man would receive about fifty cents on the dollar. It is agreed by all that each claim is a lawful one for work honestly done, and that each man is entitled to his money, but the litigation has resulted in an effort to establish right through technical intricacies of the law.

Robert Baine, of the law firm of Collins & Corbin, is representing the Plainfield Board of Education in the litigation. Francis J. Blatz is appearing for C. C. Randolph, one of the largest local creditors. Other attorneys who are representing creditors with claims are: F. A. Pope, I. P. Runyon, H. C. Runyon, W. S. Angleman, W. A. Coddington, A. M. Griffin.

Claims of Plainfield contractors against the building are as follows: City National Bank, $1,500; Plainfield Trap Rock Company, $421.14; A. M. Griffin Company, $337.62; J. D. Loizeaux Lumber Company, $1,713.90; Albert Rojotti, $785.32; C. C. Randolph, $3,135.25; Levering & Garrigues Co., $3,728.40; E. J. Bebout, $198.63.

FUND IS ASSURED FOR PORTABLE HOUSE

COLLEGE WOMEN'S SUCCESSFUL PLAY

"The Bird's Christmas Carol" is Enjoyed by Two Large Audiences.

Playing before audiences that taxed the capacity of the Hartridge Auditorium, both yesterday afternoon and evening, the College Club, of Plainfield, scored a record-making hit with its production of "The Birds Christmas Carol," a timely presentation in three scenes. As a result a substantial sum was realized, which will be added to the club fund, by which local young women are assisted each year through a college education.

Miss Elizabeth Ralston enacted the title role of "Carol Bird" to perfection, completely blending her own personality into that of the poor little lame rich girl, whose parents thought the world and all of her. Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Pratt filled the parts of "Mr. and Mrs. Bird" admirably, and although reluctant to do so, at the request of their daughter, consented to extend the Christmas dinner invitation to the "Ruggles Family," who resided next door to the beautiful mansion. Bruce Buttfield played the role of "Uncle Jack," while Miss Helen Joy was "Elfreda Clifford," the nurse and attendant of the sick girl.

The dining scene was particularly well done, and the realization of her wish a joy to Carol Bird, while Mr. Bird's strong distaste for the Ruggles was still more increased when he viewed their uncouthness. His decision to purchase the property the family occupied was influenced still further but when at the conclusion of the dinner an angel came and called Carol Bird away from her lameness and sickness, the determination was suddenly stopped.

The cast of the Ruggles family was as follows: "Mrs. Ruggles," Mrs. Edgar Williams; "Sarah Maud," Miss Margaret Townsend; "Peter," Miss Edith Foster; "Peoria," Miss Madeline Worth; "Kitty," Miss Margaret Buttfield; "Cornelius," Mrs. Ralph Patch; "Clement," Miss Helen Besler; "Larry," Master William Besler.

PARENT-TEACHER DANCE AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Despite the stormy night a company of nearly fifty people attended the subscription dance given at the Irving School, last night, under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Irving and Jefferson Schools. Music for the affair was furnished by Squier. Mrs A. E. Force was chairman of the general committee, and she was assisted by Mrs. John E. Dunn, Mrs. J. A. Babcock and Mrs. J. S. Covas. Another dance will be given in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Partee, of 639 West Fourth street, announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Blandena Louise Davidson, to Philip Piedro, of New Haven, Conn. The ceremony took place last night, at the home of the bride's parents and was performed by Rev. Edward W. Roberts, of the Shiloh Baptist church. The couple will reside in New Haven, where the groom holds a position as electrical inspector with the Winchester Manufacturing Company.

FAVORS ADEQUATE MERCHANT SHIPS

E. R. Ackerman Will Urge Legislation in Congress to Help Manufacturers.

PLANS ARE OUTLINED

In An Interview Former State Senator Says We Are Approaching Era of Great Prosperity and Need Enlarged Facilities to Meet Trade.

When Ernest R. Ackerman, president of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company, delegate from the Association of American Portland Cement Manufacturers to the recent International Trade Conference and a close student of industrial economics goes to Washington in February to attend the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce, he hopes to take with him the expressed sentiment of American manufacturers from all along the Atlantic seaboard in favor of an adequate American merchant marine. It is the purpose of those supporting this sentiment to carry the issue right into the halls of Congress and there urge the enactment of legislation that Mr. Ackerman believes is the permanent barrier to uninterrupted prosperity in this country.

At his offices at No. 1 Broadway, New York, late yesterday afternoon, Mr. Ackerman spoke of his plans. The embargo made this week by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company on all foreign-line freights destined for New York making Elizabeth the nearest unloading port for all freight not originating on its line and in its cars, until further notice, prompted him to speak of his plans at this time. The embargo is directly traceable to lack at present of an adequate American merchant marine.

"We are approaching an era of unprecedented prosperity," he said, "but the manufacturers are allowing a condition to exist that will soon limit it. We are inclined to expect a long continuance of the good business conditions we all see ahead, but we think of the present and forget that the war must end and that normal times will return under present conditions.

"Those circumstances govern the movement of freight. Without adequate freight handling equipment our industries are useless. The prosperity we now have is in the beginning. For the first time in our history we have a chance to make it permanent. But we cannot do it. It is because we have no ships to carry our trade abroad. We are prosperous today by the suffrance of foreign nations. It is their business that has filled our Christmas stockings. It is a creation of only half a year, but are we going to lyet it stop only after we have had a foretaste of the blessings of a healthful foreign trade?

"With billions represented in American industrial investment, mil-

The Sunday-school will not meet at noon, but instead there will be a union service of all the schools, including Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels, with the home school at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The union service will be in charge of Samuel T. Carter, Jr., and there will be an attractive program of Christmas music and other features.

CLEAR BABY MYSTERY.

The authorities of Westfield have cleared up the mystery concerning the baby girl left on the porch of Theodore D. Bunce, at Lawrence and Walnut avenues, on the night of December 1. As a result, Miss Josephine Jones, aged 18 years, of Garwood, the mother of the child, and Mrs. Mary Shesky, the mother of the Jones girl, are in the county jail. The infant was born in Garwood, November 29, and the investigation disclosed the fact that Mrs. Shesky left the baby on the Bunce porch. Several families want to adopt the child.

NON-UNION CONTRACTOR.

At its meeting last night, members of the Building Trades Council, held an informal discussion on the report that a non-union contractor from Philadelphia would install the plumbing and heating in the new Federal building on Watchung avenue. It was decided to place the matter in the hands of business agent Wm. Lunger, and he will take it up with the proper authorities.

It is believed that one is a man named Bracco, who works at the International Motor Company. The other man is also believed to have been an employe there.

Honeymoon Not to Be Spoiled by Austrian Crisis — Relatives in Washington for Wedding Attend Baby McAdoo's Christening.

Washington, Dec. 18—President Wilson will marry Mrs. Norman Galt early this evening. The details of the plans were guarded as closely this morning as they were weeks ago, but there seemed to be little doubt among the President's closest friends that the ceremony will be performed in the home of Mrs. Galt some time after 6 o'clock.

The president and his bride will leave soon after the ceremony on their honeymoon trip. Where that will be is a secret that also has been closely guarded, but there are indications that the happy period will be passed in the south and that the couple will leave Washington on a train tonight instead of on the government yacht Mayflower. It is reported that arrangements have been made for a special train.

It looks now as if the honeymoon may be marred by developments in the international situation. The threatening state of affairs with Austria led many to express the fear that the president might be obliged to change his plans and remain in Washington.

Confers With Secretary Lansing.

It was said, however, that this would not be necessary; that the president had outlined his views on the Austrian situation to Secretary Lansing in a final conference this morning and that if unexpected developments occurred Mr. Lansing would be able to reach the president and confer with him during the honeymoon.

This led many to believe that the president and his bride do not expect to travel a long distance from Washington. In fact, the impression is growing that they may spend the next two weeks on some estate in Virginia instead of going farther south.

The president has been extremely busy winding up his official duties and getting ready for the important event of tonight. He began the day with an hour or more of dictation to his personal stenographer and before 11 o'clock met his advisers for an informal discussion of the Austrian situation. Later he busied himself in his study with official papers and used the telephone frequently in clearing departmental problems.

Pardons For Christmas Gifts.

He has considered more than a dozen pardon cases which were prepared for his action at the department of justice under a rush of orders. No arrangement was made as to the decisions reached by the president, but many of the applicants for executive clemency are entertaining high hopes of a warm hearted response from Mr. Wilson. The pardons may be Christmas gifts from the bridegroom.

TROOP D NOW LOCATED IN FINE NEW QUARTERS

Troop D, the local cavalry organization, moved into new quarters at 1120 Putnam avenue December 1st. The house, formerly used as a dwelling, is being fitted up for its new use; shower baths, locker rooms and assembly rooms, as well as a dining room where the troopers may enjoy supper after drills, being provided. As far as practicable all purchases of furnishings are being made in Plainfield. Many contributions of furniture, carpets and pictures have been made by the individual troopers, and it is hoped to have the quarters ready throughout early in January.

The more essential things necessary to the administration of a cavalry troop are provided in the house—storage room to properly house the equipment issued by the State and Federal government; an office with filing cabinets to properly care for the voluminous correspondence and detail of troop administration, and a work shop and tool room for maintaining leather and equipment at the highest degree of efficiency.

CHOIR PRESENTS CANTATA.

About seventy-five people attended the cantata, "The Manger Throne," given by the choir of Grace M. E. church last night. There were more than twenty in the cast, the soloists being Peter Mager, Joel O'Leary and Miss De Mott. A silver collection was taken. The proceeds will be used to buy new music.

IMPORTANT REHEARSAL.

An important rehearsal of the school children's Christmas pageant to be given in the Plainfield High School next Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday evening was held in the P. H. S. Auditorium this morning at 9 o'clock.

POSTPONE CAUCUS OF 1916 COUNCIL

Election of President Deferred Till Tuesday Owing to Absence of Members.

Owing to the absence of Councilmen A. D. Edgar and T. F. Hylan and Councilman-elect Levis M. Booth the caucus of the 1916 Common Council called for last night to effect an organization, was postponed to Tuesday night. The other eight members were present, but they thought that the courtesy of a postponement was due the three absent members and consequently nothing was done.

As stated in the Daily Press of yesterday, Mr. Blatz in his candidacy for the presidency of the new Council appears to have the greatest strength. Mr. Babcock, who is also a candidate, has said that he has not asked a single member to vote for him, but if any of his colleagues desire to do so they will have that privilege.

HARMONY GALORE IN BOROUGH LAST NIGHT

Five Pianists, Six Drummers, and Numerous Other Musicians Played Together.

Without any advance notice on the part of verbose press representatives or glaring bill board displays, the greatest symphony orchestra ever gathered under one roof in this vicinity assembled unexpectedly in Debele's Auditorium, on Chatham street, last night. The primary incentive for the harmonious assemblage was to provide accompaniments for a dance given as a testimonial for a member of the Musicians' Union, who has been disabled for many weeks. When the lights were first turned on at 8:30 a sturdy little band of six players was on hand, but before the night had far advanced performers on strings, wood winds and brasses pushed and shoved each other all over the platform in order to get room enough to see the lead sheets. By midnight the orchestra numbered a total of thirty-two pieces and represented an outlay of $163 if union rate were paid, while the value of instruments totaled close to $10,000.

Kenneth Stuart acted as leader at the beginning of the dance, using his violin as a pacemaker, and when the harmony was at its height, here is what he had to look after: Five pianists, four cornets, one flute, two piccolos, two slide trombones, six drums, five bells, one bass viol, five violins and one 'cello. The artists came from Plainfield, Bound Brook, Westfield, Elizabeth, and even as far as Massachusets, one gentleman strolling in at midnight and giving the Bay State as his permanent address. Nobody knew anything about him, except for his union card, nor inquired about his religion, and he offered no special explanation as to what drew him thither. He simply went to work and beat away like a regular fellow. It was undoubtedly one of the greatest demonstrations of how "one touch of nature makes a whole world kin," recorded locally and gave the lie to carping critics who say that musicians have a soul but no heart.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon was the original piano player, coming out early to tickle the ivories, and at various times he was forced to give up his stool to George Warren Scott, Wendell Glover, Charles M. Suhr and other local box beaters. Dr. J Hervey Buchanan brought along what is professionally known as a bass viol, but which he calls his "dog house." "Ken" Stuart, "Tony" Paroubek, "Bert" Naylor and William Doctor romped over fiddle strings; Frank Manchester pulled his trap drumming act as he never did before, and "Herb" Smith, rushing in from Bound Brook at 1 a. m., chased the bow over his trusty 'cello. Just think of all that priceless talent, beside all the rest that were there, and then you will appreciate why the dancers refused to go home at 2 a. m. The kaleidoscopic orchestra was as eager as everybody else, and it was nearly daylight this morning before "Home Sweet Home," was played with a matchless blare that Debele's Hall never experienced before nor probably will again.

"Home Sweet Home," explained one flush and enthusiastic dancer "was never like this, and if the music will only stay I'll anchor right here till Hades freezes over." The crowd attending the dance was a very large one, and the disabled musician will receive a substantial sum of money, in addition to finding out that when a fellow goes up again a tough proposition the boys are always ready to lend a willing hand.

SEND ANSWER TO AUSTRIA TONIGHT

U. S. Will Demand That Its Wishes Be Met by Foreign Country.

SITUATION IS GRAVE

Administration Believes That Break is in Sight and Cannot See Cause for Optimism That Prevails in Germany—Wilson Consulted.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Characterizing the Austrian crisis as very grave, administration officials today declared they are prepared for any eventuality. Secretary Lansing sent to the President before 11 o'clock a memorandum of what he believes our answer to Austrian should be. The President will examine it and afterward hold a conference with the secretary. The answer probably will be started to Vienna before midnight. Officials who know all of the circumstances declare they saw nothing in the information in the possession of the government to warrant the optimism prevailing in Teutonic circles. It is made plain that unless Austria meets the wishes of the U. S. a break must come.

Marshal Smalley placed the rig in the Park Hotel stables and then allowed Navo to go. The new form of observing Christmas at the Baptist church this year has created much interest. It is sponsored by the pastor, the Rev. J. Madison Hare, and is a departure from former years in that, instead of having a Christmas tree and exchanging presents, it will be a "White Christmas." Mr. Hare has had circulars printed stating the plans. Gifts of either coal, toys, or clothing can be given to be distributed to the needy, or money can be given. On the evening of Sunday, December 26 a splendid Christmas pageant and tableaux will be presented, and the "White Gifts for the King laid on the Manger."

INSECT METAL BORERS.

Wasps With the Ability to Eat Their Way Through Steel Plates.

The voracious and destructive habits of the white ants of the tropics are widely known. Metal is almost the only substance that they are unable to destroy. There is an insect, however—and it is not necessary to go to the tropics to find it—that can bore through metal as easily as the white ant can bore through wood.

Any one can hear this insect buzzing in the pine woods in midsummer or perhaps see the flash of its yellow wings. Sirex gigas is its formidable scientific name, but we know it simply as the horn tailed wasp. This wasp bores into the tree in various places with its long tail and in each hole leaves an egg.

The ensuing larvae, a white, six legged grub, fitted with powerful jaws, takes up the work of boring into the wood and as it advances closes the passage behind it with sawdust. If uninterrupted the larvae continues boring deeper and deeper into the tree, and since it is, of course, growing all the time, it makes a larger and larger passage.

After about two years it makes its cocoon of silk in the burrow. Then, after the pupal skin is cast off, the winged insect breaks through its cocoon. Immediately, with feverish haste, it begins boring toward liberty. Finally it reaches the bark of the tree and then the open air.

It is often the case that during the larval period the tree in which the horn tailed wasp is burrowing may be felled, sawed into planks and used in building operations. Sometimes for some particular purpose the timber may be incased in a metal sheathing. That does not disturb the wasp at all. When its time comes it applies itself with energy to its task and soon bores a hole through which it can escape.

Holes made by these insects have been found in tin roofs, and in the mint at Vienna was a safe the half inch steel plates of which the wasps had perforated. Some extraordinary cases of their activity were brought to the notice of the Academy of Sciences in Paris.

A barrel of cartridges that had been stored away for some time showed the ravages of the wasps in their search for light and freedom. The insects had not only eaten their way through the wooden barrel, but through the cartridges and leaden bullets as well.

Other boxes of cartridges, dating from the Crimean war, were shown completely riddled by wasp borings, an excellent illustration of the tremendous strength and the determination to accomplish their purpose that these fragile insects possess.—Washington Star.

Swords and Walking Sticks.

The walking stick, as we know it at present, gained its popularity in France during the eighteenth century, when it came to be carried by rich people who had no right to wear swords. The dandies twirled thin bamboo canes in their fingers, but the great financiers, who had considerable influence at that time, made the sticks fashionable additions to their wardrobes and sometimes paid as much as 10,000 crowns for one. This carrying of a walking stick was regarded as a democratic triumph over the nobility, who refused the commoners the right to wear swords.—London Standard.

Horse Sense.

During a heavy downpour of rain an Irish farmer sent his boy to a distant field to bring home a horse. Some time elapsed, and the messenger returned without the horse.

Father—Didn't Oi send ye for the horse, ye gamoch? Is your head in your brogues?

Little Boy (drenched to the skin)—Sure, he was standin' in shelter as dry as ye loike. Bedad, he knows more than the two of us.

A Woman's Curiosity.

The worst of women is that they are always wanting to see what will happen if they do certain things. They make a man angry just to see what he looks like when he is angry, and they make a man miserable just to see what he looks like when he is miserable, and they never realize how much gratuitous suffering all this entails upon the man.—From "Concerning Isabel Carnaby," by Mrs. Fowler.

That's So.

"What were the Janizaries?"

"Soldiers maintained by the ancient Turks. They trained them to be soldiers from boyhood."

"I'll bet they had no trouble in recruiting, either. Everybody wants to be a soldier at ten."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

3 SEIZED IN PLOT AGAINST CANADA

Blow Up Welland Canal With Dynamite, Is Charge.

FOILED BY U. S. AGENTS

German Spies and Plotters Changed Their Secret Code Weekly, but Federal Detectives Tapped Telephone Wires and Got on to Various Angles of Alleged Conspiracy.

New York, Dec. 18.—In connection with an alleged conspiracy to blow up the Welland canal three arrests have been made by the federal authorities here.

The third person arrested was Fred Metzler, alias F. R. Reimer, who was seized in Jersey City.

The prisoners are Paul Koenig, head of the bureau of investigation of the Hamburg-American steamship line and supposed head of the German secret service in this city, and Richard E. Leyendecker, a curio dealer, of 351 Fifth avenue. Both had gone to Canada.

The Welland canal runs from Port Colborne, on Lake Erie, to Port Dalhousie, and is entirely in Canadian territory.

The plan to dynamite the canal so that supplies could not be shipped from the United States to Canada was nipped by the department of justice of this city before explosives had been shipped to the points where the dynamiting was to have been done.

The penalty for the crime alleged is three years in jail or a $3,000 fine, or both.

Code Changed Every Week.

For a considerable length of time it was suspected that the German agents throughout this country were enabled to conduct their affairs and communications quietly by the use of a set of codes. Only recently light on this filtered through.

Then it was found that the agents changed the code every week, so careful were they and so in fear of having their secret means of communication discovered.

For instance, after telephone wires had been tapped and apparently obvious directions exchanged over the wire as to meeting places, the sleuths were unable to find their quarry at the rendezvous mentioned in the telephone conversation.

One of the code phrases, "Battery park," means "Pabst's Harlem restaurant." And though this device was simple, it was only by actually trailing the men that the operations could be noted.

A full set of these codes has been discovered, it is said, along with other material that will be used in the trials of these cases.

NEW ANCONA DEMAND TO BE SENT VIENNA

President Is Determined to Get Satisfactory Reply.

Washington, Dec. 18.—After the cabinet had carefully analyzed Austria's Ancona reply President Wilson and Secretary Lansing prepared a second note, vigorous in wording every demand, none of which, Secretary Lansing announced, had been complied with by the Vienna foreign office.

The text of the Austrian reply, while widely different in language, is substantially the same in contents as the unofficial text. It flatly declines to meet the president's demands, but invites the United States to present evidence supporting its statement of facts.

There was, however, excellent evidence to support the statement that there will be no immediate severance of relations between Washington and Vienna.

Persons close to the Austrian embassy made no attempt to conceal the belief that Austria is extremely anxious to maintain friendly relations with the United States and that if Vienna is given as much time as Berlin received in a discussion of submarine warfare the situation may be solved amicably.

Another high Teutonic official said that if the second note left an avenue for it the foreign office probably would see fit to agree to all the demands made by the United States.

The second note will be cabled to Ambassador Penfield for presentation at the earliest possible moment. It is considered probable that it will be started by Monday afternoon.

My kidneys were weak and irregular in action, and I was in a miserable condition for months. Nothing I tried seemed to give me any relief until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's drug store. They seemed to take hold at once, removing the rheumatic pains and regulating the action of my kidneys. They improved my condition so much that I soon felt like a different person."

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

OUR GIANT TREES

Over a Million Monster Sequoias In One National Park.

THE OLDEST LIVING THINGS.

No Other Form of Life In This World Can Compare In Age With These Mighty Monarchs of the Forest, Some Having Seen Thirty Centuries.

The Sequoia National park is twenty-four years old, yet east of the Rockies it is scarcely known. Yellowstone and Yosemite are the only two names which the enormous majority of easterners think of when national parks are mentioned. Nevertheless Sequoia is perhaps, in point of average beauty, the superior of all. It was dear to the heart of John Muir, father of national parks, and Chief Geographer R. B. Marshall, who knows them all as no other man knows them, having surveyed or traversed them in person, has declared in print that it possesses beauty as great as all others combined.

Perhaps the most potent reason for its lack of celebrity is that this is the big tree park, and the general public associates the big trees of California with Yosemite. The Mariposa grove, within easy reach of the Yosemite valley, contains several enormous sequoia trees. In fact, the Yosemite National park contains three groves of these giants, the two others being the Merced and Tuolumne groves, which lie within easy reach to the northwest.

The Sequoia National park, however, which lies many miles south of Yosemite, was created to preserve, for the use and pleasure of the people of the United States, by far the greatest groves of the oldest, the biggest and the most remarkable trees living in this world. They number 1,166,000. Of these 12,000 exceed ten feet in diameter. The General Sherman tree, most celebrated of all, is 279.9 feet high, with a diameter of 36.5 feet. The Abraham Lincoln tree is 270 feet high, with a diameter of 31 feet. The William McKinley tree is 291 feet high, with a diameter of 28 feet.

The General Grant National park is usually mentioned with Sequoia because, though separated by six miles of mountain and forest, the two are practically the same national park. It contains only 2,536 acres and was created only for the protection of the General Grant tree, a monster sequoia 264 feet high and thirty-five feet in diameter. But General Grant shares his domain with distinguished neighbors, notably the George Washington tree, which is only nine feet less in height and six feet less in diameter.

The sequoias are the oldest living things in this world. "They are the connecting link," writes Ellsworth Huntington, "between the ancient east and the modern west.

"Three thousand fenceposts, sufficient to support a wire fence around 8,000 or 9,000 acres, have been made from one of these giants, and that was only the first step toward using its huge carcass. Six hundred and fifty thousand shingles, enough to cover the roofs of seventy or eighty houses, formed the second item of its product. Finally, there still remained hundreds of cords of firewood, which no one could use because of the prohibitive expense of hauling the wood out of the mountains. The upper third of the trunk and all the branches lie on the ground where they fell, not visibly rotting, for the wood is wonderfully enduring, but simply waiting till some foolish camper shall light a devastating fire.

"Huge as the sequoias are, their size is scarcely so wonderful as their age. A tree that has lived 500 years is still in its early youth, one that has rounded out 1,000 summers and winters is only in full maturity, and old age, the threescore years and ten of the sequoias, does not come for seventeen or eighteen centuries.

"How old the oldest trees may be is not yet certain, but I have counted the rings of seventy-nine that were over 2,000 years of age, of three that were over 3,000 and of one that was 3,150."

The sequoias are found scattered all over the park, which has an area of 161,597 acres, but the greater trees are gathered in thirteen groups of many trees each, where they grow close together.

The general country is one of the most beautiful in America, abounding in splendid streams, noble valleys, striking ridges and towering mountains. Some of the best trout fishing in the world is found here. The park is the home of the celebrated golden trout, which is found nowhere else in such perfection of color.

In laying out the boundaries of Sequoia National park some of the most superb of American scenic country was unaccountably omitted. Just to the north lies the wonderful valley of the Kings river, with its spectacular canyon and picturesque mountains, while directly on the east, over the great western divide, is a region noted for its beauty. Mount Whitney, on its east bank, is the loftiest mountain in the United States. These two districts are easily reached from the national park, of which they are in effect, though not in administration and protection, a natural part.—Geographical Survey Bulletin.

SOCIAL FAVORITE IS GUILTY OF ARSON

Mrs. Merrill Collapses When Jury Convicts Her.

Hackensack, N. J., Dec. 18.—Mrs. Marion C. Merrill of Hasbrouck Heights, who was formerly well known socially in Montclair, was found guilty by a jury of arson. As the verdict was announced Mrs. Merrill collapsed.

Messrs. Mackay and De Turck, counsel for Mrs. Merrill, could not say whether or not the case would be appealed. In his summing up to the jury Mr. Mackay moved two jurors to tears. He referred to the attractive little daughters of the accused woman and hoped the jury would not separate them during the holiday season.

Mrs. Merrill's home was found in flames on Sept. 11 a few minutes after she had left for Montclair in an automobile with School Superintendent and Mrs. Thompson of Montclair. Fire Chief Demarest and Councilman Gette said eight different fires were started in the house. On the witness stand Mrs. Merrill said she believed an enemy had tried to burn her home. When asked who her enemy was she replied, "My husband."

Jack Merrill, her husband, was formerly a promoter of mining and oil interests. He failed, and the Merrills' new home in Montclair was lost to them. He did not come to Hasbrouck Heights with his wife and children in April last, and his whereabouts is unknown.

The Procrastinator

You surely must all know the girl who procrastinates. There are so many of her that she is to be met in every walk of life. You can meet her in the subway and in the elevated, in the office and in the home, in the shops and on the streets. She is as common as umbrellas in the rain. There are various types of her, to be sure, and some you may not recognize at once as coming under that head, but eventually she is sure to betray herself, and you place her defiantly as one of those girls who procrastinate.

Girls are not the only procrastinators. They are quite as numerous among children and among men and women. In fact, the origin of the procrastination habit is formed in childhood. The mother who asks her child to do something and allows herself to be answered by "In just a minute, mother," is laying the foundations of the procrastination habit in that youngster. If mothers never accepted "in just a minute" as an answer to a request, there would be 50 per cent. fewer procrastinators.

We may all scoff openly at that old adage, "Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today," but, nevertheless, its value as a motto is 50 above par, especially to those of us who are inclined to be shirkers, for procrastinating and shirking are first cousins. The girl who puts things off till tomorrow secretly hopes in her heart that some one else will do them before tomorrow.

Procrastinators and Shirks.

The line between the procrastinator and the shirk is so small as to be invisible. There is nothing quite so wearisome around the home as the girl who keeps constantly putting off her household duties. It is a source of constant annoyance to any real worker to have a procrastinator about. The average busy housewife would rather do all the work herself than listen to the shirker talk about doing it.

One such instance took place recently in a home of moderate circumstances. The head of the house, a woman of unusual activity for her age, had always run her home with the aid of a daughter. When the daughter married, however, one of her married sons offered to move into the large apartment and to share expenses with his mother. The old lady agreed, delighted to have one of her children still about her, especially as she had always liked her daughter-in-law, a girl with an apparently gentle, pitable nature.

The housewife had fancied that her daughter-in-law would share the duties of the home as her daughter had done. But, on the contrary, she soon discovered that not only did the girl do practically nothing but she prevented her from doing her own tasks. And shortly she found her home, which had always been immaculate, becoming dusty and generally upset looking.

Putting Off the Work.

When it occurred to this vigorous housewife one day that her home was no longer to be classified as neat it was with quite a shock that she realized that her gentle daughter-in-law was the cause. When the old lady wanted to sweep and dust the younger one would say, "Oh, let's leave that for just now. I'll do it later." And the work never was finished. So the housewife seized her old firm hold on the reins of government, and when the son's wife tried to put her off she would answer, "You can procrastinate if you want to, Elsa, but I have too much to do."

The procrastinator has this unfortunate effect of making others put off their work, too, and it is really hard to resist this demoralizing influence. Sometimes the girl who procrastinates does not realize her own shirking habits, and in certain cases, if these are brought home to her sharply, she may make a severe attempt to conquer the bad habit.

No one who puts off her work ever amounted to anything. Those who have made their mark in the world are the ones who have never put off till tomorrow what they could do today. Unfortunately the procrastinators seem to have adopted, "Never do today what you can put off for tomorrow" for their motto.

Food for School Children

The food of the child at school is second in importance only to that of the infant, and the parent who neglects this part of his child's bringing up is culpable and his sin will surely be visited on the third and fourth generations.

At this period of change and unrest, flavor begins to count for more, and greater pains should be taken to use such natural foods as contain possibilities of flavor.

The child at school needs to have temptation to indiscriminate eating removed, because modern school life is exciting at best, and the food should be such as to quiet rather than excite. The lack of fresh air should be considered in planning the food of the child in the schoolroom, for such confinement is at best unnatural. What modification of diet may be made to meet such conditions is not yet known. It may be found that it is in response to this artificial life that sugar is demanded by the modern child. Certain it is that sugar may be allowed if it is taken so as not to interfere with the appetite for more substantial food. There is a real reason why sugar and starch-bearing foods should not form a large proportion of the diet.

All food, to be of use, must be in a condition to pass through the membranes of the digestive tract. Soluble substances are liable to pass through too rapidly and in too great quantity for the immediate need of the tissues, and thus to clog the capillaries or irritate the nerves, or give a sense of sufficiency before enough is really eaten.

It is better where a considerable time elapses between meals to have a portion of the meal less quickly diffusible. Therefore, supply starch rather than sugar, bread rather than all meat, but not too difficultly digested food, as hard eggs and rich gravies, which require not only time but energy to make available.

CARE OF ONE'S CLOTHES.

Be careful of your clothes; it pays every time. Shake and brush your suit after each wearing. It is well when brushing the coat to do it on a hanger; it will keep its shape better by so doing. It always pays to keep your clothes in good press. It is not an extravagance to take your suit to the tailor's occasionally. It keeps it looking fresh and new.

Never put a veil away without smoothing it out and rolling it up. You will prolong the life of your veil for a very long time by giving it this little attention. When you remove your gloves take the trouble to stretch them out, blow in them and put them away if you would like them looking well when you wish to wear them again.

Shoes that are put on trees as soon as they are taken off and dusted look well so much longer than shoes which are neglected. To the sure those trees cost a certain amount which, perhaps, seems unnecessary, but it really is an economy in the end. The difference of a treed and untreed shoe is remarkable. Gowns that are perishable should be fastened, coat hangers put in them and the sleeves stuffed out with tissue paper before putting away.

The majority of women know that white gowns should be encased in a blue muslin bag or an old sheet that has been deeply blued or dyed. This is an almost infallible preventive of white clothing turning yellow.

The woman who gives little thought to the condition of her clothes may think that all this thought and care is well at the end of that time.

Stewed Prunes Are An Excellent Food

There is no fruit that is so easy to procure as prunes. Every grocery store in this country has large supplies of them on hand. There is no fruit that is cheaper to buy. There is no fruit that is easier to cook, for all one needs to do is to throw a handful of them in a pot of water, let them boil, and the trick is done; the stewed prunes are ready to serve. Every girl in the country knows how to buy, cook and eat prunes.

A prune is such a simple food that people are inclined to think them of little value. They have not the attractive coloring of the peach or the strawberry; nor the sweet smell of the pear. They are not much to look at, either. A stewed prune is not an object of art. Nature has provided us in such a way that the foods that are simplest, easiest grown, easiest cooked, are the most wholesome and the best for our constitutions.

However, we are so enslaved by our palates that we do not see anything good in what does not give us pleasurable tasting sensations. Maroons glace are more popular than just plain chestnut, and in the same manner fruit salad is are more eaten than stewed prunes, but the latter food is far better for us than the rich, jumbled-up salad.

HOW TO REFRESH AND KEEP FRESH CUT POSIES.

The only drawback to cut flowers is that they wither so quickly, and in keeping them fresh some seem to have more luck than others.

For instance, in the matter of violets it is possible to wear them several times without noticing the over-powering stale odor which proclaims them beyond redemption.

Keep Wrapped.

Of course many people find that they cannot wear cut flowers even for one afternoon, because in some cases the body heat seems to wilt them, but if this can be avoided it is quite possible to find a bunch almost as fresh the second day as on the first, if they were properly guarded overnight.

Keep the box that they came in and when you take them off hold the stems under running water for a few minutes, taking care not to wet the violets themselves.

Then wrap them up in the oiled paper and put them back in the covered box outside the window if it is cool, if not in the refrigerator, but in either case keep them wrapped.

Preservatives.

This treatment seems to restore the flowers and hold in the delicious odor which so soon becomes rank if they are kept unwrapped in a close room.

Some people think a pinch of salt in the water will keep cut flowers fresh longer, and so it does in some cases. In others it seems to change the colors a little. With roses it is successful, but not so much so with violets. A piece of gum camphor is said to be an excellent preservative in the water, and others advocate a small lump of charcoal, but in any case the water should be changed daily and the flowers put in a cool place over night.

WHEN EGGS ARE SCARCE.

In making boiled salad dressing, if you do not have as many eggs on hand as the recipe calls for, substitute a heaping teaspoonful of cornstarch for each egg yolk omitted and find the result equally good.

This same economy is practicable in making pumpkin pies.

SEE MYSTERY IN TRENTON CONFAB

Democrats to Confer on Slate In Capital Wednesday.

WITTPENN IS SUSPICIOUS

Governor Fielder, With Alleged United States Senatorial Aspirations, Is Said to Have Got State Chairman Grosscup to Call the State Leaders to the Meeting.

Trenton, Dec. 18.—Speculation has been started in political circles by the announcement that a number of Democratic leaders will hold a conference here next Wednesday. It is said that the conference was called by State Chairman Edward E. Grosscup at the instigation of Governor James F. Fielder and that the various factions will be represented.

The names of possible candidates for the nominations for senator and governor will likely be discussed, although there is not a unanimity of opinion at this time upon the timeliness of such action. A number of friends of H. Otto Wittpenn of Jersey City fear they scent another scheme inimical to his gubernatorial ambitions. National Committeeman Robert S. Hudspeth, who is frankly for Mr. Wittpenn's nomination, is said to be one of those adverse to the proposed conference.

Those taking a leading part in the calling of the proposed conference deny that it is aimed against any particular candidate. The Wittpennites, however have had their suspicions added to by statements in the North Hudson newspaper owned by Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin, a militant anti-Wittpennite.

In part a news article in Martin's paper read:

"The announcement that the state chairman has acted contrary to the national committeeman's advice and has accepted the suggestions of Governor Fielder has thrown politicians into a state of excited interest. Mr. Hudspeth favors Wittpenn for the governorship, while Secretary of State Thomas Martin is for State Comptroller Edward I. Edwards for the state executive office and for Governor Fielder for United States senator."

Despite the failure of the governor and Mr. Grosscup to enlist aid from Washington, it would appear that many leaders have not yet despaired of entering a candidate against United States Senator James E. Martine.

TRAIN CRUSHES SNOW MEN.

Two Killed When It Runs Down Crew of Thirty Laborers.

Dover, Dec. 18.—Two men were killed and a score injured when train No. 26 of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, eastward bound from Chicago, ran into a section crew that was cleaning the snow from between the rails at Chester Junction ower, near here.

The crew consisted of thirty men, usually employed as laborers on the railroad's stone crusher at Hog Mountain. When word was received here that another severe snowstorm was on its way east it was ordered to work along the rails near here throughout the day. The men stepped aside to make way for a train going westward and were unaware of the nearness of the other train until it was upon them. The dead and injured were brought here.

JAIL FOR EX-POSTMASTER.

James Ackerman of Ridgefield Gets Thirty Days For Theft.

Newark, Dec. 18.—For embezzling $329 of the government's funds, James Ackerman, fifty-six years old, former postmaster at Ridgefield, Bergen county, was sentenced to thirty days in the Essex county penitentiary by Judge Haight in the United States court.

Ackerman was arrested by Postoffice Inspector Butler on Sept. 8. He pleaded guilty to the charge. Patrick H. Maley, his counsel, however, stated that $200 of the amount missing from the postal accounts had been lost by Ackerman while he was riding on a trolley car. The postmaster was intoxicated, counsel said, and fell asleep. When he awoke the money was gone.

Common Sense Suspender Company Is Said to Have Had Shortages.

Morristown, Dec. 18.—The Common Sense Suspender company here let it be known through its president, John L. Tillmadge, that it had recently suffered a shortage of several thousand dollars in its books and that it was looking for Mrs. Charles Buck, a young bookkeeper, who had been employed by the firm for five years.

Mrs. Buck had already, according to the president, turned over to the company a $1,200 automobile and some household furniture she had recently bought and also her bank account, amounting to $800.

Limit on Diet Wins Divorce.

Trenton, Dec. 18.—Charging cruelty in that her husband gave her nothing to eat but buns and coffee, thereby reducing her weight from 175 pounds to eighty-seven pounds, Mrs. Helena Brose of Hightstown obtained a temporary decree of divorce from Henry C. Brose of Plainfield.

—It's a safe guess that the first real estate transaction made in town today was influenced and brought about through "the classified."

HEAD OF NATION WEDS TODAY

One of the most interesting features of the festivities in the president's wedding day is the christening of Ellen Wilson McAdoo, the little daughter of the secretary of the treasury and Mrs McAdoo. The christening took place at noon in the blue room, where nineteen months ago the baby's parents were married before a small company of friends.

President Wilson was godfather for the child, and her aunt, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, and her mother's cousin, Miss Helen Bones, were godmothers. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Holland Cotton Smith, rector of St. John's church. Little Miss McAdoo was christened for her grandmother, the late Mrs. Wilson.

Mrs. McAdoo is a Presbyterian and was married by a Presbyterian minister, but out of deference to her husband, who is an Episcopalian, she yielded to his wishes in the matter of christening.

Mrs. Galt at Christening.

Except for Mrs. Galt, the president's fiancee, only the members of the families were present. The christening was followed by a luncheon served in the state dining room.

The christening was set for today because so many relatives are to be in Washington to attend the president's marriage.

The guests who will attend the wedding have arrived in Washington. It is understood that only twenty-seven have been invited to witness the ceremony, which will be performed by Rev Herbert Scott Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Episcopal church.

Among those who are here to witness the event are Mrs. Galt's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Rolfe E. Bolling, who live in Panama. They are the guests of Mrs. W. H. Bolling mother of Mrs. Galt, at the Cordova apartment house. Mrs. Maurey, Mrs Galt's elder sister, from Anniston, Ala. also is here and is stopping with her mother.

It became known today that after the departure of the president and his bride Mrs. Bolling, Mrs. Galt's mother will take Mrs. Galt's house in Twentieth street, giving up her apartment and will occupy the house at least until the Wilson administration ends.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Galt, brother and sister-in-law of the late Norman Galt, also are here from Emmetsburg, Md., to attend the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wilson, the president's brother and sister-in-law, of Baltimore, arrived this morning, accompanied by their daughter, Miss Alice Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, the president's son-in-law and daughter, are at the White House. Mrs. Anna Wilson Howe, sister of the president, and her daughter, Mrs. Josephine Howe Cothran, also are guests at the White House.

As evidence of the strictly private character of the wedding it was learned today that the president has not even invited his dear friend, Colonel House of New York. None of the president's cousins, of whom he is very fond, will be present.

Mrs. Galt's Home a Floral Bower.

Florists have been busy in the Galt home for the last two days, and this morning it showed evidence of elaborate decoration. Mrs. Galt is very fond of flowers, especially orchids, and the president has taken much pleasure in sending her a fresh bouquet each day since the engagement was announced.

Wedding gifts continued to arrive both at the White House and at the Galt home today. Most of the presents were from relatives, with a few from strangers. Only a few officials and members of the diplomatic corps have sent presents.

It is likely that some information in regard to the presents will be made public after the wedding, but Mrs. Galt will not give out the names of those who have sent gifts.

The wedding cake shipped from St. Paul, Minn., is here. It is heart shaped, iced with orchids, orange blossoms and lilies of the valley. There are also little Cupids ringing wedding bells with miniature red streamers.

The cake is six inches thick and twenty inches in diameter. It was baked by Mrs. Marion Cole Fisher, assisted by her husband and Miss Pansy Bowen of St. Paul. Congressman Van Dyke was assured of its acceptance by the president.

C. M. Reed, superintendent of railway mails at St. Paul, sent word ahead to all mail clerks to "handle it with care" and to see that its passage was expedited.

Dressmakers' Tasks End.

The dressmakers and milliners have finished with Mrs. Galt, and the promise was made today that complete details of the wedding trousseau will be made public immediately after the ceremony. Two attendants from the New York establishment where the gowns were purchased are to assist Miss Bertha Bolling in attiring Mrs. Galt for the ceremony.

Just as in an ordinary wedding, the gifts as fast as they are received are placed on tables and stands in a side room where the guests can view them. It was said that many presents from persons unknown to the president and Mrs. Galt have been returned to the sender. So far as possible it has been the custom of the president and his bride to be to discourage gifts.

Arrangements have been completed by Major Pullman, superintendent of the Washington police force, for the policing about the Galt home. The entire block on which it is situated is to be closed to traffic, and no person except guests will be allowed to approach the house. The president has directed that no photographers be permitted to make flashes of the arriving guests or of his departure, and two secret service men have been drafted to see that this provision is made effective.

Christmas Gifts of "Things Men Wear"

When we read of a firm making absurdly untrue statements, it reminds us of the words of "Golden Rule" Jones, who said: "Beware of the store that sends up wordy skyrockets; you won't get anything but the stick."

When you consider purchasing, consider also the probity of the store that sells the merchandise.

Consider the ballast given to a gift that bears "The Rothberg Label." Can you say more plainly to the recipient that the best is none too good?

Just now this store is laden with Christmas Giveables that are a "little bit different," but not a "little bit more."

Numerous "Gift Things" for men and boys in Clothing and Fixings.

NEWCORN PREACHES AT TEMPLE SHOLEM

Understanding Heart is Subject of Address Last Night.

At the services in Temple Sholem last evening, William Newcorn took for the text of his discourse of the evening the following verse of the third chapter of the First Book of Kings, in which Solomon asks God to "Give, therefore, thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between the good and the bad."

"An understanding heart is more precious than silver and gold, and the modesty of Solomon in asking for this quality in lieu of riches, was duly rewarded. With this power conferred upon the ruler of the Israelites at the height of their glory as a kingdom, Solomon governed his people with such wisdom and discernment that his rulings to day are the marvel of the world.

"The application of an understanding heart in the business relations between man and man, in the administration of the functions of civil government, in the practice of piety and religion makes the holder thereof deserved the respect and admiration of his fellowmen, and brings its own reward.

"An understanding heart will impress upon the individual holder thereof that he is but a unit in the progress of the world, dependent upon the other portions of the units of the universe to accomplish the destiny of mankind."

BANK CLERK HELD FOR AIDING GERMAN SPIES

New York, Dec. 18.—Frederick Schleindl, a clerk employed by the National City Bank, was arrested this morning in connection with the Federal investigation of activity of alleged German spies in the United States. Schleindl, who lives at 1165 Bryant avenue, the Bronx, was taken to police headquarters, and later arraigned before United States Commissioner Houghton. He was charged with the larceny of certain documents, which, it is charged, he turned over to German agents. The papers are reported to have contained information as to shipping and ammunition.

You Touch a Magic Button When You Become a "Want Advertiser."

Our day is the day of "touching buttons."

A President presses a button in Washington, and a titanic explosion, thousands of miles away, weds the two great seas.

We are fond, nowadays, of accomplishing big effects with simple processes.

And so the "button-pressing" magic applies to the "little things" of life, as well as to the big episodes.

When you become a "want advertiser" you press a MAGIC BUTTON—and the influence is felt in the homes and business places of the city.

Your quest becomes of interest to the people who are able to help you accomplish it.

If you seek work, and "press the button" of Plainfield Daily Press want advertising publicity, your quest becomes one of personal interest to the people who need you. The same law operates in the working out of every "want ad task."

For classified advertising makes the whole city your market; makes the right people your audience; delivers your message to all people to whom it could have any interest or importance.

PEACE DOVE LEAVES HENRY FORD'S ARK

He Now Hopes to Stop Fighting There by Christmas Day.

On Board SS. Oscar II., Dec. 18.—(By wireless to Christiania and cable from London). As the peace expedition organized by Henry Ford nears Christiania the hope of getting the soldiers out of the trenches by Christmas is abandoned. The question of peace in Europe has been temporarily forgotten for the more important local question of restoring peace among the pacificists on the Oscar II. The wounds caused by the efforts to line all the American delegates up in opposition to the Washington administration's policy of preparedness have not yet been healed. The opponents of the anti-preparedness resolution will decide as soon as they reach Christiania whether they will leave the expedition.

AMUSING POLITENESS.

When a Couple of Natives Pass the Time of Day In Japan.

I had always heard that there was lots of politeness in Japan, but I had hardly expected to find that it often blocked traffic. When two Japanese meet on the narrow streets you've got to wait until the ceremony is over or go around. On meeting they do not shake hands and have it over with, as we do back home, but begin bowing and each asking the other the latest news from his worshipful ancestors. It would be an open insult—smack in the face—for one Japanese to meet another without asking him how his ancestors fared. Their ancestors are always an open subject for discussion. A Jap is never too busy to engage in conversation about his dear, departed forbears. The weather can look out for itself. The gripping topic is how some of the ancestors are getting along who passed to their reward a couple of hundred years ago.

When two Japanese meet they stop squarely in the middle of the street and begin bowing. Their bow is not just a twitch of the head. Instead of that it begins at the waist, sweeping over the entire upper part of the body, even to the outlying hands, bending the figure over until it looks like a great inverted V teetering for a moment on one prong. There are traces of the colonial in their bow, with a pronounced military strain running through it.

When they are doubled over one of them says to the other, "Oh, honored sir! to what do I owe my great good fortune that I have the pleasure of meeting such an esteemed man this day?"

The other man, with his head down comes quickly back with: "You do me a great honor with such words, and I only wish that I were worthy of them. May I crave your indulgence while I ask how your stomach finds itself this morning?"

The first concern of one Japanese on meeting another is to know how the other's stomach fares, and after this momentous question is settled they pass on to their ancestors, who while the conversation is on the stomach have to take a back seat.—Homer Croy in Leslie's.

TURNING THE HAIR WHITE.

How a Shock May Effect the Change In a Single Night.

That hair ever turns white in a single night has been emphatically denied by the doctors, in spite of historic instances—such as that of Marie Antoinette—to the contrary. But Dr. Lubarsch called the attention of the Societe Medicale des Hopitaux of Paris to an actual case. It was that of a young French soldier who was blown into the air by a mine and buried in the earth, from which he extricated himself with difficulty.

The man was deafened by the detonation, his face was burned, and there were several bruises on his head. He was taken to a neighboring hospital, where the following day he noticed four islets of white hair on the left fronto-parieto-occipital region of his head. The loss of color was complete from the roots to the ends of the hairs, and the white hairs were as firmly in his scalp as their brown neighbors.

According to the London Lancet, quoting Metchnikoff, when a hair begins to whiten there appear in the cortex cells with prolongations which gradually come into relation with the cells containing the pigment granules and absorb them. These "pigmentophages," as Metchnikoff calls them, descend toward the root of the hair to scatter in the skin, of which they are the pigmentary cells. They disappear as soon as the decoloration is achieved.

A nervous shock may hasten the mobilization of these cells, as the whitening takes place at points on the scalp which have been the seat of injury.

SOMERVILLE.

Miss Madeline Bolmer was given a surprise party last evening at her home on South street. About twenty-five young people spent a pleasant time.

Harvey Yates, a brakeman on the C. R. R., sustained a crushed foot yesterday, when he slipped on ice while working near some cars. He was taken to the Somerset Hospital. Yates is married and resides in Phillipsburg.

DIED.

McGAULEY—In this city, Dec. 16, 1915, Bernard McGauley, in his 54th year.

Funeral from his late residence, 223 Pond place, Monday, December 20, at 8:30 a. m., and from St. Mary's church at 9 a. m., where a high mass of requiem will be offered for the repose of his soul. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

There is no Room in the World for the Man who only Guesses -- YOU MUST KNOW.

MEN who work with their hands and muscles are struggling at a big disadvantage. The world doesn't care so much how much you can lift while "on the job"—it is how much do you know?

Suppose a man should pop around the corner and say to you, "who is the representative from your district"? Could you answer him?

You may be as poor as a church-mouse in money but rich in knowledge. You may be able to answer a fund of inquiries—you may be looked upon as a wise man of your neighborhood, and if that is so then you are also rich in a number of real friends.

The man who knows is welcomed everywhere—he attracts people to him—folks like to have dealings with the intelligent man—

Are You that Man?

For instance: what do you know about the Republic of Mexico—its agriculture—area—and population—capital—commerce—debt—education—finance—government—judicature—history—language—its mines and minerals—its monetary system—its production and industry—its towns—states—capitals—weights—measures—currency?

Can you give facts about this one question (alone) of the day? Can you converse intelligently about Mexico's present and past difficulties?

Can you give the important facts about your own state or any other state in the Union? Have you reliable books that will give such information?

Can you refer to any books in your library and know the world's production in hops—fire insurance statistics—fire losses—in these United States?

Do they give you facts in general about the earth?

To put it in another way—what do you know about

Electrical Measures:	Number of Jacobites;
Number of Evangelists;	Number of people in any given religious sect?
Expenditure of U. S.	Horse power developed in U. S.
Farm statistics.	Horse racing records:
Farmers table;	Mercantile Marine
Ice yachting records;	Eight hour laws?

Where is Devil's Tower—Red River—Muscat—Montezuma Castle—Muir Woods?

What mountains are the highest—or rivers the longest—or lakes the widest—or national monuments the tallest?

Who are the representatives—what are the retail prices of foods—the U. S. Postal Laws?

What are the President's powers—what is his constitutional position—how is he elected—his residence and rules and salary?

These are but a few of the subjects covered in

STELLAR TUSSLE IN SAENGERBUND

Newly-organized Canadians Defeat Recreation Men by 48 to 46 Tally.

LOSERS ALMOST WIN

Three Goals Behind With But Thirty Seconds to Play, Team Makes Two Baskets—Game One of the Best Seen Here This Winter.

By a two-point margin, the Riverside team was defeated by the Canadian Five last evening in Saengerbund Hall, the score ending 48 to 46. With a half minute to play, the Riversides made a desperate rally and secured two field goals when time deprived them of any more opportunities to pull the game out of the fire.

Although the scoring on both sides was high, the contest was one of the fastest staged on a local court this season, both contingents indulging in fast teamwork and remarkable shooting, spectacular shots being common.

The Riverside team was composed of players from the Recreation Five. Pack Ricketts and Buck Alleger led the attack of the combination with eight pretty field goals apiece, while the former also had four fouls to his score. Roy Love and Bill Taylor were the main scoring cogs for the borough team, with ten and eight baskets, respectively.

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS AND JUNIORS IN A CANE RUSH

The Seniors and Juniors are making great preparations for "Junior Night," which will probably be next Thursday. At that time the Seniors and Juniors will hook up in a basketball game and later there will be a cane rush. The Seniors will defend the cane and the Juniors will try to get to it.

MORE POWER TO THE "OLD HUNDRED."

For real enthusiastic support, the local High School students might well profit by the example of the city grammar grades. One hundred rooters—count 'em—sleighed it to Roselle Park Thursday to encourage the Grammar School basketball team. It's been a long, long time since that many supporters accompanied a P. H. S. or N. P. H. S. team so long a distance. Such interest as the students of the grades are evincing in their athletic representatives speaks volumes for the new order of things in the grammar department, and promises much for the calibre of the Plainfield High School's supporters two or three years hence.

"C. D. W." STANDS FOR "COMPLISHING DOWNRIGHT WONDERS."

It has been the custom these last twelve months or so to call anyone who accomplishes much with unpromising material, a "Miracle Man." The M. M. of Plainfield sportdom is Charles D. Wardlaw, who, for the last half decade, has taken Leal's rough material and turned out as near a finished product as patience and perseverance—and a touch of a genius—could accomplish. Such a man the Netherwood Residents' Association has chosen for its president, and even if the material along Belvidere alley is as scarce as cottages in cottage pudding, you can look for results from that body, once the new pilot takes hold the guide wheel.

When this Y. M. H. A. campaign for new members achieves its object, Plainfield will have a right to expect bigger things from the association in the way of sports. While the organization has dabbled in baseball, and basketball, held billiard tournaments and the like—it has not commanded anywhere near the position in the local sporting spotlight that the abilities of its members deserved. With the increase in numbers should come an even more substantial increase in sustained athletic activities.

Anchors of bowling teams are chosen for their value in the pinches. Such a pinner is George Taylor, who rolls No. 5 on the Watchung Council K. of C team. Buck has doubled in the tenth inning of just half of his league engagements this season, which is a record worthy of the best of them.

EXPLAINS HOPPE'S SECOND BALL PLAY

Stevenson, English Billiard Expert, Tells of His Own "Top of Table" Work.

Comments about Hoppe's superb second ball play have aroused general interest in that feature of balkline billiards. As a result, there have been almost endless chains of questions concerning it. The best explanation of it ever voiced or written was contributed to "The London Sportsman" in 1901 by Henry W. Stevenson, a one-time champion of English billiards, who is considered the best "top of the table" exponent of the game England has ever produced. "Top of the table" play corresponds to end manipulation in the United States. "Cannons" in England are "caroms" here. When Ives went to England in 1893 to play Roberts he demonstrated the strength of rail nursing and caroming to the British. Since then English billiardists generally have become so adept at rail nursing that restrictions have been placed upon it, while Reece and Stevenson have mastered end play. Although fourteen years old, Stevenson's explanation of "top of the table" work, which applies with equal force to second ball play in America, is instructive to all classes of devotees of billiards.

It is as follows:

"I often hear spectators of my matches saying, 'He never leaves a difficult shot on.' That may be so to their eyes. I often think differently. It is all very well to get the balls near each other and have what are simple-looking cannons and hazards on.'

"Anybody who can hold a cue would bring off most of them, I mean just the bare stroke. But the score in the top-of-the-table game is only half the thing. The other and more important half is to keep the balls in good position. To do this the player has as often as not to make the most simple-looking stroke quite a difficult one.

"The stroke that tries one most is the delicate cannon made on a foot or eighth of the second object ball. To get on the proper side or other point of the latter is everything in top-of-the-table cannon. Another thing from much the face of it to cannon on, I can tell you. So when you sometimes see myself or some other professional player miss what to you seems to be little less than a certainty, please try to realize that, perhaps, the second object ball is not the great big one to the player that it is to the spectator.

"Maybe the stroke has asked that it should be grazed at about a thirty-second of an inch. This is not a big target. The cannons are the most tricky things in the play. If you do not happen to get hold of the second object ball as you want to you always stand a chance of getting the balls in a line or covering in same way the very thing you are fighting against when at the top of the table. What these cannons really mean is that in making them you steer all three balls to or as near as you can get them to the most favorable position for each.

"As may be imagined, for those who know how hard it is to send only one ball somewhere to a given point this accurate guidance of the balls is the pitch of the whole thing. How long it took me to get as proficient as I am in this detail would worry you considerably. It used to worry me, and even now, like every other billiard player, past or present, I have something to learn."

SPORT NOTES

Johnny O'Leary, the Canadian champion lightweight, is meeting some of the best aspirants in Northwest Canada, and after the first of the year will go against the best in the States.

The retirement of Walter Camp, the real father of college football, is grieved at Yale, where he produced marvellous athletes for thirty years. Camp will continue his interest in the game, but quits the bossing end.

Fast trotters are not money-makers, say the horsemen. It is agreed among the veterans of the racing game that the faster a horse becomes the more its earning power decreases. It becomes limited in speed and there is nothing left for it but an occasional match.

Former President Taft will urge honesty in athletes, at the National Collegiate Convention to be held in New York on December 28. The appearance of the ex-President at an athletic meeting will be a new experience for him.

Followers of the wrestling game have been kept busy watching the New York tournament. The matstars will be seen in weekly meets at Boston this winter.

President Lannin is sure that he will retain all of his Red Sox string for the coming season.

It is doubtful whether Jess Willard will be the favorite in the coming championship match at New Orleans. Fulton has his admirers, and is being filled up with plenty of advice. The followers of boxing for boxing's sake, and not for coin's sake, are rooting for the Minnesotan.

Mayor Calkins Suggests New Rules for Tourney

Mayor Leighton Calkins, who is recognized as an authority among the thinking golfers of the metropolitan district, suggested a different method of conducting the national amateur championship tournament, at the testimonial dinner tendered Maxwell R. Marston and Edwin M. Wild, stars of the Cranford Golf Club, in New York, last night.

Changes in the condition of the national amateur, a topic that is rife throughout the country at the present time, came in for considerable attention from the speakers at last night's affair. Among the others who gave addresses were Governor James F. Fielder, State Senators James Frelinghuysen and Austen Colgate, William C. Freeman, a prominent advertising man and golfer; Grantland Rice, a newspaper sport writer, and Jerome D. Travers, Gotham's national open title holder.

Travers again went on record as favoring medal play to make a place for the amateur fortune, a change that is being advocated freely.

COBB CELEBRATING HIS TWENTY-NINTH BIRTHDAY

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the wizard of baseball, is today spending his twenty-ninth birthday on his native heath in Georgia. His dozen years in baseball comprise a romance of mastery. For slugging, speed and headwork he has the boys "going," and he looks good for another half dozen years of supremacy.

Ty started life down at Royston, Ga. He played baseball and scrapped his way along just as he is doing now. The scrap in Cobb developed young. He counted that day lost which did not contain a scrap. His battling average was far below his batting average, for he often bit off more than he could chew, and was sent home battered up. The only thing that equaled his love of a scrap was his love of baseball. He finally got a chance on the Anniston team, in the Alabama League, in 1904, and he came through with a .370 average. He was grabbed by Augusta, in the South Atlantic League, where he continued to plug the pill, and Detroit secured him in 1906. His record with the Tigers is known to every American schoolboy, and he is still piling up his hitting, base-running and base-stealing victories.

Mack Adds Iron Man to Staff.

Connie Mack has added as a late addition to his baseball school one Frank Hark, known as the "Iron Man of Carlisle." He is a pitcher who hails from Carlisle, Pa., and has made a record pitching Sunday in that section. Mack will keep on adding them during the winter, and it is reported that his rookies will be kept working out at Shibe park until the snow flies.

Brothers Numerous on W. and J. Team.

It is a remarkable fact about Washington and Jefferson football team that in the last twenty-five years fourteen families have contributed two or more brothers to the teams.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, DECEMBER 18, 1915.

On Saturdays the editorial columns of the Daily Press are conducted by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is Mrs. Stephen H. Voorhees, Chairman of the Publicity Committee of the State Mothers' Congress.

"HYGIENE AND THE CHILD."

The extension of the school lunch movement is to be regarded as an educational movement primarily, with secondary benefits to the physical side of the children enjoying these dietetic advantages. As far as the problem of malnutrition itself is concerned, it is merely a palliative measure It is not prophylactic in nature nor is it essentially a therapeutic agent. It is designed to promote education. To this extent a temporary solution of the problem of malnutrition has been offered.

If Wood's estimate that 25 per cent. of the school children in this country are suffering from malnutrition be regarded as even approximately correct, the immensity of the problem presents itself. Along with the various other channels of activity into which human energy flows, one must point out the constant stream of underfed, under developed and undermined vitalities that daily plod cheerfully or cheerlessly to the school houses of the nation seeking to secure that education which Washington declared to be the foundation stone of a republic.

School lunches are being served today in two schools in Plainfield, the High School and the Bryant School at East Fifth and Richmond streets. In the spring of 1913, school lunch rooms in Philadelphia, New York and East Orange were visited and investigated; statistics were obtained from our own school officials of the conditions existing in each school—namely, the number of mothers employed by the day, thus making a noon lunch at home impossible, the number of children remaining at school during the lunch hour without food, the number of undernourished children, and finally an expression of opinion was obtained from those in a position to know, as to the need of serving a hot lunch.

The Board of Education gave and installed the necessary stationary equipment and the Mothers' Association raised money, bought the dishes, trays, spoons, cooking utensils, etc., and in the fall of 1913, after a summer of thoughtful, intelligent and actual hard work on the part of a small committee from the Mothers' Association, a so-called "penny lunch" was started in the Bryant School. Twenty-five children were brought each day from the Lincoln School on Berckman street, and over a hundred children were fed each day with a bowl of hot, nourishing soup, and cocoa or sandwiches and a simple dessert.

The need of the High School and Grammar schools, both housed in the same building, next presented itself, the short half hour for recess making it impossible for pupils to go home for luncheon. A request from the Mother's Association that it be allowed to serve a hot, nourishing lunch, such as an intelligent mother would give to her child, was presented to the Board of Education and granted and all the necessary equipment was furnished by the Board.

In September, 1914, the High School lunch counter opened under the direction of a committee from the Mothers' Association, with a paid supervisor and three assistants who do all the work of cooking and serving the food.

In the spring of 1915, it was voted by the Mothers' Association to turn over the lunch work in each school to the Parent-Teacher Association, thus placing the responsibility for the lunch service where it properly belongs, on the parents of those children who are directly benefitted by the lunch. The Mothers' Association will continue to take charge of the extension lunch work, as it has been supplied with a generous sum of money by one of its members and it raised over $150 through the luncheon and card party given in the spring. Some of this money has been used each year to feed the children of the unemployed, and those others who have not even the necessary few cents to buy lunch. The Extension Committee is now ready to install lunch counters in the Franklin School and the Mothers' Association hopes to see the work extended to every school in Plainfield.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Water

A COLORLESS or faintly turbid fluid with a rather acrid, copper-sulphate taste and an odor suggesting old fossil fish, is what sanitarians call "potable water"—that is, a pure drinking-water. Chemically pure water consists of two atoms of a light, frothy gas called hydrogen, firmly clutching a lone, but undaunted atom of oxygen—together with traces of chlorine from sewage contamination, lime from earthy contact, and sometimes a dash of ozone or other preservative to give it body.

H_2O, or "aqua pura," as doctors call it in prescription writing, is often dispensed in bottles with a picture of a dainty lady about to sip the nectar of a fairy pool on the label, at about ten centimes the bumper. The cost is due to the sparkle, which is imparted by injecting the water with carbonic acid gas, or as it is chemically symbolized, CO_2 — carbon-dioxide, or, more liberally translated: Come On, It always Takes Two to make a Crowd.

Water Is Medicine

Proper lubrication of the human machinery requires at least four pints of potable water daily. Chronic water stinting generally means excessive wear and tear on the machinery. You must keep the engine well oiled if you would get 100 per cent. efficiency out of her. When you stint on water-drinking dry rot—autointoxication—is apt to overtake you.

More polite synonyms for dry rot are "biliousness," "dyspepsia," "sick headache," "rheumatism," "that tired feeling," "torpid liver" and general peevishness.

Water with meals now has the sanction of dietetic authorities as cabinet secretaries. It aids digestion when you are thirsty; but don't wash down your food with any liquid. Eat first, slowly, methodically, solemnly if need be; masticate each morsel for all there is in it; then do a leisurely act of deglutition and, then drink your drink, iceless.

We are chemical compounds. It behooves us to keep saturated with the vehicle of chemical reaction.

Some people lavishly lave themselves early every morning with cold water. The practise is based on the principle that whatever is unpleasant must be healthful—an old idea. For our part, we agree with the illustrious jurist who couldn't see any sense in chilling his nice warm skin with cold water as long as he could afford a hot bath.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Certified Milk

You referred to certified milk in one of your talks about tuberculosis in children. Certified milk costs 12 cents a quart in our town. Is there anything cheaper to use as a substitute?

Answer—Milk from tuberculin-tested cows, or pasteurized milk, or inspected milk would be cheaper.

Hernia

Can hernia be cured by a truss? And is there an injection treatment that one can take without being laid up in bed?

Answer—Umbilical hernia (navel rupture) in infants sometimes disappears under a carefully adjusted support. It is doubtful if there is an injection treatment which will give any benefit.

The Farmer

FELLOW citizens, when we have unhooked ourselves from the street car strap to-night, and have seated ourselves comfortably in the library of our cozy flat, with one elbow in the bath-room and a foot sticking out into the parlor, let us devote a few moments to pity for the poor farmer far, far from city joys.

The farmer tills the soil and raises crops and whiskers and future captains of industry. He is a hard-working man and has few joys. Very early in the morning he must get up to see that the hired men do not oversleep. He cannot sit down on a high stool and order coffee and doughnuts with a careless air. He must wait until his wife has gotten up, and has lighted the gasolene stove, and has cooked bacon and ham and eggs and corn bread and hash and potatoes and gravy, and has warmed up some beans and chicken and roast beef, and stewed corn and has mixed up four gallons of cake batter. Many farmers almost starve to death waiting for breakfast.

The farmer cannot sit down in a comfortable chair after breakfast, and talk to a pretty stenographer all morning either. He must harness his team and ride 111 times around a 160-acre field on a hard iron seat. The farmer has a whole barn full of red, white, blue and green and yellow implements, all with iron seats, and his is indeed a hard life. Many a farmer has to half-sole his overalls with leather three times during the long summer.

When the farmer has finished his field, he cannot rush off to the moving-picture show and stay until one o'clock. He has got to go in and read is paper. Farmers do not get their morning papers until ten o'clock. And yet we murmur sometimes at our lot in the city.

The farmer cannot go to a baseball game in the afternoon either. As soon as he has finished digesting his dinner on the lounge, he must mend a leak in his acetylene lighting plant, and put a new pipe in the pianola and repair a tire on his touring car,

It has to go in and read his paper

so that he can drive into town and get potatoes and ice-cream for supper. And after supper, he cannot spend a peaceful evening on the front porch watching the cars go by. He must drive his family into town to the church social, and he must get a bushel of graphophone records, and must hunt up the stock buyer and trade him a fat pig for a new sideboard, and a patent washing machine. And likewise he will have to get out of his automobile and go home on the interurban, because his daughter's best young man is home from college and wants to come out and spend the evening teaching her how to play billiards.

If it were not for the farmer we would all starve. So let us drop a tear for him and pity him as he toils far out in the country, where the fire engines never pass by.

Round The World With The Movie Man

IN China a fat person is always good for a laugh. He doesn't have to do anything—just walk into the picture with a large, protruding stomach. To fall into water is another scream with them. For some unaccountable reason getting wet is, to a Chinese, the climax of humor. It may be funny, possibly, because as a general rule the Chinese don't indulge in water to any noticeable extent. As to that I don't care to say, but I do know that if a man falls into a creek the audience shrieks. If two men fall in the ushers have to silence them, and if a manager can get hold of a film where half a dozen fall into the water he doubles the price of admission.

Since the beginning of time, the Chinese have never had women actors, the feminine parts being taken by boy actors. It was a profession among them, but in the last two years girls have begun to appear in the moving pictures. They are very popular, and for the first time in its history China is having leading ladies.

When a Chinaman goes to a moving-picture theater he makes a night of it; he goes at seven and stays till midnight. The manager has to give him his money's worth in footage. His demands in the way of quality are slight, but he does want quantity. While he sits on the hard, wooden bench he drinks tea, eats watermelon seeds, and wipes his face with hot towels.

In front of the theaters in Bangkok, Siam, they put up huge signs, written in Siamese, announcing the arrival of a cowboy film. So impatient are the audiences for the film to be put on that they begin calling out, "Co'boy! co'boy!" which is as near as they can come to cowboy.

In india our films are so popular that a common name for a picture-house is "American Cosmograph." White people and natives alike hurry to the theaters; even to the whites it is such a big event that they go in evening clothes. In the smaller towns they have no moving-picture theaters, so that the arrival of a traveling picture-wagon with a projecting-machine and a curtain is as big an event as the arrival of Barnum was in my boyhood county in Missouri.

In Cairo, the programs are printed in four languages: English, French, Arabic, and Greek. The sub-titles are usually thrown on the screen in French and English; the other two are thrown on the wall a few feet away by means of a magic-lantern so that no one in the variegated audience need miss anything.

Once a week the program is set aside for women, when no man may attend. This on account of the harem women. In the better theaters there is a row of harem boxes, behind which no vulgar man can penetrate.—Literary Digest.

People, Just The Same

BY CARL CROW

Dog Worshippers Of Fukien

VISITORS to Foochow, the capital of the southern Chinese province of Fukien, occasionally see there on market days members of the strange dog-worshipping tribe, which live in the remote hills of the province. The members of this tribe are survivors of what was once an independent kingdom, ruled over by their own emperor. This kingdom flourished for centuries until the Chinese people, spreading farther south from their ancient seat on the Yellow River, came into contact with these aborigines and overthrew their government. The survivors retained hostile to the Chinese for many years and finally withdrew to remote parts of the hilly province, where they now live in peace and retain their old religious beliefs and ancient customs.

One of the most curious of these is the worship of the dog, which, to them, is a sacred animal. This belief is founded on what might be called the national legend of the tribe. According to this story their kingdom was once menaced by a powerful bandit, who repelled the king's forces, plundered the country at his pleasure and slew all who were sent against him. The king in despair finally offered to give his daughter in marriage to any one who would drive out the robber. One by one the gallants of the kingdom volunteered for this chivalrous duty, and one by one they were slain. At length a very ferocious dog, hearing of this offer by the king, attacked the robber band, slew the chief and a large number of his followers, and drove the remainder of the band from the country. The dog then presented himself at the palace to claim his reward.

Alarmed at the idea of marrying his daughter to a dog, but compelled to keep the promise he had made, the king called the court magician and ordered him to change the dog into a man. The magician started to do this by anointing the dog with a magic salve, but when the dog's body was covered, the salve was exhausted and no more could be found. The result was that the dog had a man's body and a dog's head. According to the legend, he and the princess were married, and as the old king died a short time thereafter, the dog succeeded to the throne, and made a very wise and kind ruler.

The members of this tribe worship at altars on which a dog's head is depicted, and both men and women, by their head dress and by painting their faces, make a rude attempt to counterfeit the appearance of a dog. The tribe numbers several thousand and has kept its blood entirely pure, there being no intermarriage with the Chinese.

A Fancy Name For Hake

"Boston fish dealers are hunting for a fancy name for hake, for they feel that the fish, under a less common name, would sell better."
—News Item.

"What's in a name?" asked Shakespeare, but had he lived today
His question would have been unasked, I'm very free to say;
For nowadays, when one man kills another in a rage,
His name (if he's acquitted) gets him jobs upon the stage;
And if a man, by selling tacks, acquires Name and Wealth,
The press is glad to print his views on War and Peace and Health.
The people simply dote on names: on that there's no mistake;
That's why the men are wise who want a fancy name for hake.

Some people, when they're sick, refuse to pay the doctor's bills
Unless a fancy name is hitched to all their simple ills.
Some people will not buy the things which do not cost a lot—
Which are not rare and "different" and all that sort of rot;
And things as good, by other names, which sell at half the price,
Are scorned as being "common," and condemned as "not so nice."
Think not, good folks, but what the man is very wide awake
Who urges that a fancy name be fastened to the hake.

Some folks are almost overcome with bitter, burning shame
When they're connected with a thing which bears an awkward name.
The thought of living in a hut would fill them full of woe;
But they'd be happy if the hut were called a bungalow.
Such folk "accept positions," but they never "hunt a job";
They term themselves "exclusive," but they hate the name of "snob";
They rave about "sincerity," and scorn the so-called "fake";
But they're the ones who make worth while a fancy name for hake!—Boston Post.

BRICK HELD FOR ADVANCED PRICES

With Navigation Closed Only a Limited Supply is Now on Hand.

CEMENT MEN CONFER

Manufacturers Are Planning to Reach Out for Export Business—Export Prices Still Remain Too High for Much Expansion.

New York, Dec. 18.—As the week closed some of the brick barges being held in the wholesale market for metropolitan district distribution at $8 a thousand were withdrawn in anticipation of getting higher prices. Navigation is closed in the river with only a moderate quantity of brick available for purchase. This holding price is higher than has been quoted in this market for seven years. It is $1.25 a thousand higher than was quoted at this time last week, and is $2.75 higher than was quoted for the same grade of brick in December 1914. Distributors say they will not predict the future of the price situation.

The first formal conference of Portland cement manufacturers to be held since the recent great upward movement in prices occurred this week at the Biltmore, at which time plans were set on foot for reaching out for export business. Some of this business has begun to develop, as shown by the fact that marine insurance has been written on this class of business. Exports casts for Portland cement still runs too high to permit of any great development on this line, the price being about $25 a ton or about $5 a barrel, for European business, but the fact that some cement has been sent abroad on French and British inquiry under these conditions lead many to think that the present scarcity of that commodity abroad, may result in the actual materialization of recent inquiries received from these two countries. If export business does develop to any extent sharp rises in domestic prices will promptly follow.

A firmness developed in the crushed stone and general concrete ingredient market this week. Sand is firmer at 45 cents a cubic yard, dock, New York. It is being sold at over 50 cents. The crushed stone plants have practically all closed down, leaving the market actually stiff with higher prices frequently asked that are current upon the market lists. Bar reinforcement and wire mesh is being conservatively quoted.

An important barometer as showing the probable state of the building material market during the next twelve months or more was shown this week, when an investigation was made of some of the renting conditions existing in the commercial centers of the metropolitan district. In the lower end of Manhattan office buildings are rapidly filling up. In all of a giant structure west of Broadway, there were only two small offices for rent prior to May 1. In another towering structure the agent reported space 85 per cent. actually filled, and the remainder being held on January 1 option, save about 3,000 square feet. Still another big building reported its space taken up to 75 per cent. of its capacity with many of its concessions removed.

In the business section of Jersey City the greatest sluggishness was shown, but in Newark agents there reported a steady growth of demand for office space. Many tenants who contracted their space a year ago are now expanding into even larger quarters than formerly. The lower end of the wholesale district in Manhattan is being rapidly changed into improvised warehouses in anticipation of shipments "after the war closes." Dry houses that want to clear out their mill stocks to make way for war munition supplies. According to one renting agent it is cheaper for these houses to rent old vacated buildings in lower New York and have their goods here when the spring railroad rush begins, and probably not be able to make boat sailings because of railroad delay then. This sort of demand is increasing, and it is calling for a tremendous amount of alteration work and sprinkler equipment. It accounts for some of the heavy spot call for building materials of late. Many interests believe this activity will eventuate in a general establishment of domestic and export warehouses in this section within the next year. Building men look for great activity in that direction. The same is true of Hoboken and Jersey City, according to building investors.

MATERIALS FOR BUILDING GO UP

Contractors Are Afraid to Bid Because of the Erratic Market.

BOOM IS RESPONSIBLE

War Orders Have Boosted Prices Some Because of Inability to Guarantee Deliveries on Time—Railroads Are Overcrowded.

Building materials have advanced a such a rapid rate within the past few months that Plainfield contractors are afraid to bid on local work because they do not know what they will be forced to pay for the articles they must use in filling contracts.

Steel mills all over the United States are way behind in their orders, because of the large amount of steel that is going into war material, also the big orders of railroad materials going to Russia, but this has not been felt locally because there is little steel work in sight here. All other markets are affected though, except those in which brick masons, plasterers, and others of their kind deal. There has been no advance in brick, cement, plaster or such materials.

The plumbing trade has been vitally affected. Sheet iron, lead, piping and all other materials used by plumbers have made big jumps in prices recently and are still erratic. A bid based on the price of today may mean ruin when it comes time to carry out the contract, according to local contractors, and while there is live competition for the work going on here, each man who puts in a price is gambling on the prices he will have to pay for the goods used.

There is no logical reason for advances excepting a boom in building in all parts of the country. It is true that many of the larger factories are busy turning out war munitions instead of the articles of normal trade, but there are still enough at work to satisfy the ordinary demands in domestic markets.

Many of the industries which are allied with the building trade are feeling the effect of the congested state of the steel market. The contracting plumbers, for instance, are doing a rushing business on paper, but they are constantly being delayed by the slowness of construction by the steel firms, and also by the great difficulties in getting through their own supplies.

Everywhere the contractors are running into the war munition industry. The mills are tied up with war orders in many parts of the country, and the railroads are almost chocked with shipments.

The New York Central and the New York, New Haven and Hartford lines are struggling with the glut of freight of all kinds, and are making adjustments of the passenger train service to permit the handling of freight. It is no unusual sight to see a powerful engine attached to a few cars of freight hurrying over the roads almost with the speed of express trains, and often ahead of the caravans of commuters. The extra expense is justified in order to meet the demands of the shippers of munitions on one hand and the demand of the building contractors on the other.

DUNELLEN GROCER NOW IN FINE NEW LOCATION

The D. T. Heaume & Son, grocery has now been set to rights in the splendid new store fitted up for their occupancy in the Michael A. Gallagher building, corner of North and Washington avenues, Dunellen. All evidences of moving have been set to rights and the big store is ready for the last rush of Christmas buying. It has been greatly admired by all who have visited the Heaumes in their new business home, the lighting being particularly good as the window expanse is very great. The floor space also is large, giving ample room to display goods to advantage, and all in all the place of business is a credit to the borough.

BUYS DUNELLEN PROPERTY.

The Apgar Construction Company, of Dunellen, has purchased the new house under course of construction in that borough on Penfield place for John Pierson. Mr. Pierson and family had planned to make their home in the new house as soon as it was finished, but unhappily, their little daughter was taken with illness which will probably necessitate their removal to Colorado. They therefore sold the house to the Apgar Company and will leave Dunellen at an early date.

COMPLETING PLANS ON MIDWAY SCHOOL

Bids Will Be Asked for About Feb. 1—Rushing Work on Evergreen Av. Structure.

Announcement was made by the Plainfield Board of Education during the past week that owing to certain changes made necessary by the local building ordinance, a temporary halt had been called in the progress toward a new school for the East End. The plans and specifications as drawn by Architects Wilder and White conformed with the State Board of Education's demands, but in doing so confliction came with the city. These details are now being cared for, and it is hoped to have everything in readiness to solicit bids by February 1. The location of the building is to be on the plot bounded by Emerson, Summer and Midway avenue, the front facing Midway. A complete description of the structure which is to be of only four rooms capacity at first will be given in the Daily Press as soon as the architects submit it for aporoval. The plan is to add other ones as they are needed, the first one being ready for school sessions next September.

Work on the Evergreen Avenue school, which has had numerous vexvexing delays, is now progressing rapidly. It was thought at first that the building could be made ready for occupancy by January 2 next, but it will be at least three months later before the contractors turn the building over to the city. Fully a month was lost when ground was first broken through the discovery of sand and water in one corner of the cellar. This was finally taken care of satisfactorily, and last summer the delay in securing structural steel and other supplies due to the European war rush began to be felt. Frequent layoffs were necessary, each succeeding one postponing the date for the children to move in. One instance of this came when the radiators to be used in the heating system were held up at Philadelphia for more than three weeks, because of the freight conjestion that exists on the Eastern railroads. Superintendent H. M. Maxson has now so arranged his classes that all pupils can be cared for properly until after the Easter holidays in 1916. In the Netherwood district the children who will go to the new Midway Avenue school are being housed in the Netherwood Reformed church.

Johns-Manville Company to the Bush Terminal Company a large water-front tract, formerly occupied by the sellers, consisting of about eighty-five lots with 400 feet of water-front, at the foot of Thirty-ninth street, Brooklyn. This property adjoins the Thirty-ninth street ferry.

The Batson Farm Agency sold the J. F. Hann farm of 138 acres, near Somerville, to Robert F. Ludlam, of OysterBay, L. I., who gave in part payment his residence, on a plot 100x184, in Lexington avenue, Oyster Bay. The transaction involved about $25,000.

Although the building boom of the H. C. Lockwood Company seems to have stopped, Fanwood township and Fanwood borough are still in the throes of a building boom. Anthony Albert has just completed the erection of a two and a half story modern structure on Russell road for James Mineszek, who recently acquired a large tract from the Lockwood company. He will not do any more building until spring, but by another year expects to have the entire section of the borough he owns around Russell road completed. Anthony Albert is now building a semi-bungalow on Russell road, near North avenue, for George Palcanis, and has but recently finished a house for Charles Sheelen on North avenue. A number of contracts are out for dwellings to be erected in the Plains, but work will not be started until spring. The building of School No. 3 in the Graceland section of the township has been the signal for a raise in the value of land in that section and several plots have been sold on which dwellings will be built during the coming spring.

OLD STRUCTURE MAY BE MOVED

Vanderbeek Building Will Not Be Torn Oown if Plans Are Carried Out.

TWO BIDDERS WANT IT

Contractor Mobus Examining Walls to Give Expert Opinion on Advisability of Transferring it to a New Location.

The possibility of the Vanderbeek building at North and Park avenues being removed from its present location to a new site instead of being torn down, is not at all remote if plans underway at the present time can be carried out. The State Trust Company, which purchased it recently in order to secure the land for a new home, has had two offers for the old structure, the idea being to keep it intact and make use of it somewhere else.

Contractor Augustus Mobus, who has moved many buildings in various parts of the city, was called into service the past week with the idea of giving an opinion as to whether or not the Vanderbeek structure could be transported safely. With another expert he looked it over from cellar to roof and ventures the opinion that it could be moved with safety and profit. One of the men bidding for the building has an option on a North avenue site to which the Vanderbeek building could be easily carried. The other bidder has not made known where he would have the new site located.

The Vanderbeek place has excited the attention of numerous investors since it was first made known that the Trust Company had purchased it and intended to tear the building down. If this plan was carried out it would mean the demolision of what is practically a modern structure and would be the first of the kind torn down in Plainfield. It was erected in 1880 and as far as the outer walls are concerned is as strong today as it ever was. It cost about $18,000 to build and would require a much larger outlay if duplicated at the present time. The two bidders, who want the structure, entertain the belief that it could be removed from the old place to a new one without blocking the streets for more than forty-eight hours, and when re-located could undergo certain changes to make it strictly modern.

A plan similar to this was carried out less than ten years ago, when the building on West Second street, next to the Plainfield Theatre, now owned by Fred Ivamy, was moved from Park avenue, where the Sterling building stands at present. It was a three-story brick affair, occupied for a long time by Charles Schantz, John Goff and James Connelly as a saloon on the ground floor with apartments above. It was lifted out into Park avenue when Charles McCutchen bought the property for the Sterling building and was carried into West Second street in a remarkably short time. After being remodeled it stands today as one of the most ornate business structures in the center of the city. There are many people who believe it would be an advantage to the city to have the Vanderbbeek building kept intact and located on an unimproved site, consequently the proposition will undoubtedly receive encouragement from the Common Council if a permit is asked for the removal.

BUILDING APPLICATIONS SCARCE THE PAST WEEK

Applications for building permits at the office of Inspector Doane continue to be conspicuous by their absence. Business in this respect was like last week and this week has been but very little better. The applications in the last seven days figure up only $793.50, a decided falling off for the weeks during the past few months.

The Standard Oil Company has filed plans for the installation of a tank on its property on West Front street, a short distance from Rock avenue. The tank will have a capacity of 11,280 gallons, and will be used for the storage of Polarine lubricating oil. The cost of installation is placed at $550.

Herbert Buxton has also filed plans for the installation of a 110 gallon tank for the storage of volatile liquids at 963 Park avenue, at a cost of $43.50.

A 12x18 foot frame garage is to be erected by George Passmore in the rear of 339 East Second street at a cost of $200.

The first floor of the frame building at 110 West Front street, belonging to the Dreier estate, is undergoing extensive interior alterations The store was until recently occupied by a fruit and vegetable concern, but it is now being prepared to be used as a restaurant.

FAVORS ADEQUATE SHIPS

lions in war contracts still awaiting execution, railroads cluttered up with freight, some of it lying alongside the tracks, simply because there is no other way to store it in the onrushing volume of freight to this harbor, with brick barges bringing $12 and $15 a day to store freight on as floating storehouses to make way for still more freight coming in and yet not anywhere near enough boats to carry the rich harvest away, it is the biggest object lesson to American manufacturers we have ever had to prove than an important element in our rapidly spreading sentiment for 'Preparedness' is to be also prepared to tranship our manufactured products once we get them to seaports, not under foreign flags, but under our own.

"After the war is over we may look for a still further shortage of expansion of American trade. Now is the time for the manufacturers and farmers of the Western and Central States to stand together for a merchant marine, and urge their Congress representatives to act favorably on this matter. Those who find through present embargoes that they cannot move their products abroad because there are not ships enough to take them realize that they have an active interest in a merchant marine. Now is the time for them to get busy and stir up their representatives to action.

"In fact the whole American industrial and business body should stand squarely for such legislation as will take care of what products we manufacture for foreign consumption It is not a question of finding a market for American products, but one of getting it there. Today Portland cement freight rates costs from $12 to $25 a ton to ship it abroad and yet, with that high rate, it is going. More probably will follow. What then would [illegible] American can flotilla to carry our products across the seas?

"In my travels twice around the globe and through 112 countries I have studied particularly the need of a better market for American goods. From those observations I am convinced that there is a big market for our products if we have the ships to carry it there and get it to purchasers in good condition. I have Secretary Redfield's word for it that this country's maximum consumption will take care of only seven months of full working capacity of American mills, and I believe that one of the first duties of our Congress is to see to it, by the establishment of a suitable merchant marine that we can find a market abroad for the other five months' capacity of American mills. When we find a market for our surplus products then we will have permanent prosperity and the way to keep that market is to have an American merchant marine."

Santy's Pack Held All Kinds of Toys.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Jack Tells The Bedtime Story Himself.

DADDY sat down in his armchair, but the children went out in the hall to talk. When they came in Jack said, "Daddy, it seems best for me to tell the bedtime story tonight."

"All right," said daddy, settling down comfortably with Evelyn. "We both like that." So Jack began: "Once upon a time there was a little boy and his sister, who went downtown to see Santa Claus and his reindeers. There was a great big Santy all covered with snow and with a great big pack on his back and two reindeers riding right through the store. And out of Santy's pack stuck all sorts of toys and games—a truly railroad, and a real telephone, and lots of dolls for the little boy's sister, and some soldiers all dressed in red suits with truly guns over their shoulders, and some more dolls, and lots of sleds, and two hockey sticks, and a mud turtle that crawled"—

"His little sister wanted the doll which cried!" Evelyn hinted.

—"and then came lots and lots of shelves all bulged with more toys," Jack went on, "with heaps and heaps of jolly picture books all about Indians and things. Some had pictures of funny animals, and some looked like poetry, and all had wonderful pictures."

"How could they be picture books 'less they had pictures?" cried Evelyn.

"Then came boy scout suits and Indian suits with real feathers and a tommyhawk and more railroads and lots of dolls. Finally came a Christmas tree all dressy with shiny balls and twinkly snow, with another truly Santa Claus piling, oh, heaps of things and things by the bottom of the tree. So that by and by the little boy and his sister, their heads just felt swimmy with so many Christmas presents, and they almost wanted to come home without picking out their own things!" Jack stopped, breathless.

Then he put his arms around his daddy's neck. "Say, daddy, honest and true, will that Santa Claus come to our house, do you think?"

"I'm sure he will!" cried daddy. "In fact, I'll speak to him about it."

But Jack looked doubtful and went on, "Next came a great big post box with a notice on it which spelled that every little boy and girl which was there must put his name on a ticket and where he lives and what he wants, so Santa Claus will know 'xactly what he wants for Christmas without any horrid mistakes about it."

"And did the little boy and the little girl put their names in the great big post box?" daddy wanted to know.

"Yes!" Jack confessed. "But, say, daddy, I should feel safer 'bout it if I told you I want a pair of skates!"

Household Hints..

THE TABLE

Spareribs Stuffed With Apples—Get two strips of spareribs the same size. Salt and pepper to taste. Cut enough sour apples in quarters (wash but do not peel) to fill spareribs. Sew up both sides so apples can't fall out. Put in roasting pan and add two sliced onions, two bay leaves and eight whole allspice. Add water, same as for other roasts, and bake until done. Thicken gravy with a little flour. Gravy and meat are fine, the apples flavoring both.

Stuffed Potatoes—Wash and scrub medium-sized potatoes and bake in very slow oven until done. Remove from oven and cut in half lengthwise; scoop out inside and put into a warm bowl with one tablespoon chopped celery hearts, one tablespoon sweet cream, one tablespoon sweet butter, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, salt and pepper to taste. Mash till perfectly light, then put into potato ricer and press back into halves of shells. Place on platter with a fancy doily and stick a sprig of holly in the center. These are new and delicious.

Waldorf Salad—Two cups diced apples, one cup hickorynut meats, one cup celery, two tablespoons sugar, two tablespoons vinegar, one-half cup sweet cream. Celery can be omitted if not handy. Mayonnaise dressing can be used instead of the sweet cream.

Marshmallow Cream—Whip one pint double cream, sweeten a little, flavor with vanilla. To the whipped cream add one-half pound marshmallows cut in small pieces. Mix and let stand three hours in cool place. Serve in sherbets with a cherry on top.

Southern Rice Bread—Two cups white corn meal, three eggs, 1¼ pints milk, one cup cold boiled rice, two tablespoons butter, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt. Beat eggs. Add milk, meal, salt and butter. Beat. Add baking powder. Beat again. Bake in three greased pie dishes thirty minutes.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To keep cider from getting sour, add one box of seeded raisins for each gallon cider.

To render lard, the main thing is, it must be fresh. To seven pounds lard add half pound beef suet (fresh). Put in large granite or iron kettle, cover with cold water, let boil down clear, then strain through very thin cloth. You will be surprised what nice clear lard you have, and no smoke or dirty stove.

To open a can of fruit, stand it top down in a cup of boiling water deep enough to cover rubber. Never fails.

THE HOME WINTER GARDEN

Table Fernery—Plant carrot seeds in rather deep pots. The feathery tops of the carrots are as pretty as ferns. Carrots are healthy, but the old ones are strong and unpalatable. By planting a few crocks or a window box you have the pretty leaves and the young carrots to use.

Japanese Garden—Take a large round dish (a meat platter will do), put in it about half an inch of water and place the tops of vegetables in it. Cut them about an inch thick. Carrots, white turnips, horseradish and sweet potatoes are nice. After they have sprouted you can buy small Japanese figures, houses, boats, fish, etc., and place them around the vegetables in the dish. To have a more artistic effect you can get some of the castoff iron to represent hilly effects of Japan. It is pleasing not only to grownups, but also to the children, to watch the growth of the Japanese tea garden.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Mollie Sutner Finds Doing One's Own Sewing Isn't So Easy, After All.

Olive Ellson tapped on Molly's door, opened it and walked in. The room was in wild disorder. Jack's playthings were scattered over the floor and a litter of sewing was around the machine. Molly sat with her head bowed on her arm and there were unmistakable signs of tears on her face as she rose to greet her friend.

"Why, what is all this?" asked Olive in surprise, taking her friend by the shoulders.

"Oh, I am such a hopeless case. I can never learn anything." Molly held up a waist she was making, a look of despair on her face. "I had this machine left here; had determined to buy it on the instalment plan." Olive was gravely shaking her head.

"I know. John has told me all about how wasteful and hopeless such a proceeding is and I have given up the idea, but I thought while it was here I'd better make the most of it and try and get somehing done. I had the goods in the house for a waist, so I ripped up an old one that fitted pretty well and cut a pattern. I thought I could get it together. I wish you could see the result." She made a wry face.

"Let me see it, by all means. Perhaps I can help you straighten the thing out," said Olive brightly.

"Indeed, I will not. I will not put you to work every time you come over here," said Molly, wadding the cloth up and throwing it in a basket. "I am all unstrung working over the old thing. I will go without rather than make my clothes." Molly pushed her hair from her hot face and looked rebelliously at the sewing machine. "I am tired of being good and patient. I'm so tired of pinching." There was almost a sob in her voice.

"You are all nervously worn out with your hard work, work that you do not know how to do. Get on your things and come for a little walk. It will do you good."

Molly was busy picking up the scraps of cloth, and for an answer pointed to the disordered room.

"I must get this room in some kind of shape before John comes home. Come, Jack, dear, help mamma get ready for daddy."

"It will not take us long to straighten things here, all three working," said Olive, laying aside her hat and coat to help. "And there will be time to have a walk before supper time."

"I am ashamed of myself," remarked Molly after they had closed the house door and were walking briskly down the road.

"There, did I not tell you that a walk would do you good?" laughed Olive.

"You never get down in the dumps, do you?" Molly looked admiringly at her friend.

"Oh, yes I do, but I don't stay down long, and I try not to see people when I am not myself," replied Olive.

"I am a very disappointed person," said Molly in a low voice. "I claimed that I wanted to help John, and was glad that I could share privation with him and here I am all blue and discouraged because my sewing did not go to suit me this afternoon."

"Never mind, he does not know it and you will be all over the blues by the time you get back home. Then you must remember this, 'The high resolves we make on the mountain top experiences of life are not easy to live up to in the dust and heat of the valley.' It is one thing to see a vision of our duty and quite another to follow it in the grind of our every day lives. We can't expect to reform ourselves out of hand. You will have some backsets, but must keep right on traveling, never minding the falls." Olive smiled at the downcast face.

"Oh, thank you. You are so comforting," said Molly gratefully.

TROOP D TO HAVE XMAS CELEBRATION

Members of Local Cavalrymen Plan to Fittingly Observe Yule-tide Season.

A Christmas celebration will be held by Troop D at the troop headquarters, Putnam and Kempington avenues, next Thursday night. The features of the entertainment are in the hands of a small committee, which is keeping them hidden, and about all that is known to the troopers is that Walter L. Righter and the troop quartet—Donald A. McGee, Sherman Joost, A. W. Andrews, and Lewis Williams—are to figure prominently.

At the election held by the troop Thursday night Donald A. McGee and Sherman Joost, theretofore corporals, were chosen sergeants, and James Brewster and Walter L. Righter, corporals. Mr. Righter had some weeks before been appointed lance-corporal. His election as corporal was unanimous.

As lance-corporal he had charge of the recruit squad, which has grown largely in the last several weeks, and by extra drills on Tuesday nights has rapidly approached the level of the body of the troop.

In view of the election and the condition of the ground no mounted drill was held on Thursday night. Instead a talk on shooting was given by Captain Borden, with an eye to the practice indoors which the troop will receive during the winter at the Roseville Armory in Newark, and another by Quartermaster-Sergeant Charles on the "Care of Saddles and Bridles." After that one squad was drilled in the manual of arms indoors, while the other went through some close formation drilling out of doors. The other non-commissioned officers of the troop are J. M. Charles, quartermaster-sergeant; Brown Rolston first sergeant; A. M. Andrews, A. W. Ransom and J. L. Vandeventer, sergeants.

Enlistments in the troop have been numerous in the last several weeks. Among the recent recruits are George McGrew, Charles D. Wardlaw, William M. Houghton, E. F. Feickert, Alfred C. Buttfield, Hugh M. Cook, Donald B. Fullerton and Harris D. Rush.

FEES IN RUNKLE CASE ARE FIXED

Allowances of $21,750 for Attorneys Are Approved by Chancellor Walker.

H. G. RUNKLE AN HEIR

He Will Receive $400,000 of $2,000,000 Estate and Also One-third Interest in Trust Fund of $750,000.

Chancellor Walker has filed at Trenton a memorandum, as ordinary of the Prerogative Court, fixing fees of $21,750 for the counsel who participated in the appeal from the Essex Orphans' Court, involving the settlement of the estate of William Runkle, which was valued at more than $2,000,000.

The largest fee, $15,000, was allowed to John W. Griggs, who appeared as counsel for Harry G. Runkle, of this city, the residuary legatee, whose share in the estate is estimated to be more than $400,000, in addition to a one-third life interest in a trust fund of $750,000.

Other fees allowed by the court were as follows: Munn & Church, $2,000; Lum, Tamblyn & Colyer, $1,000; Charles B. Storrs, $1,000; Shipman, Taylor & Jackson, $1,500; McCarter & English, $500; Condict & Boardman, $500, and William Huck, Jr., $250.

In the proceeding in the Orphans' Court, McCarter & English represented William E. R. Smith, of East Orange, who was named in the will as executor, having been substituted by the testator for Randolph Rodman. Mr. Rodman's name had been crossed out, but the Orphans' Court ordered its restoration on the ground that, in its opinion, the erasure and substitution had been effected by the testator after the execution of the will and accompanying codicil.

In the contest in which Harry G. Runkle sought to have the will set aside, McCarter & English bore the laboring oar and the court fixed its allowance at $8,000. In the Prerogative Court the firm represented the Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church and Elizabeth Haines, two of nearly two-score to whom special bequests were made. The church board was bequeathed $25,000 and Elizabeth Haines a trust fund of $30,000.

In his memorandum fixing the allowances, Chancellor Walker says:

"It may with propriety be observed that the greatest burden falling upon counsel is that in the court of first instance, where the facts have to be developed and the law of the case argued after research by counsel, and it results, ordinarily that the allowances are greater in the trial court than in the appellate court.

"The fees now to be allowed will in some instances be the same and in some less than in the court below, but more in the case of Mr. Griggs, whose client assents to the fee asked by him, and whose estate will have to bear the burden of all of the allowances.

"The special legacies amount to $1,631,000, leaving something approaching $400,000 as the estate which will pass to Mr. Griggs' client, Harry G. Runkle, as residuary legatee, upon the determination of this litigation, besides his one-third interest for life in the trust fund of $750,000, unless, in the event of an appeal to the Court of Errors and Appeals, the will should be overthrown, in which event Mr. Runkle would inherit the entire estate as heir-at-law and next of kin."

Mr. Griggs, the Chancellor goes on to state, received an allowance of $8,000, plus disbursements, from the court below, "and now asks for $15,000 with the consent and approbation of his client, whose estate, as already remarked, will have to pay all allowances. The sum asked for by Mr. Griggs, under these circumstances, will be allowed. It amounts to Mr. Runkle himself paying his counsel, the estate affording a convenient means of making the payment at once."

In conclusion the Chancellor says that while the estate is "one of some $2,000,000 in value," nevertheless the contentions of counsel for their clients went only to the amount of the legacies bequeathed to them respectively, and not to the whole estate. The awards, to some extent at least, therefore taking into account the amount and value of the property involved in each case.

DIVORCE FOR MRS. CAHOONE.

Chancellor Walker has signed a decree giving a divorce with alimony to Mrs. Jessie Cahoone from Walter E. Cahoone, on the grounds of desertion. Mrs. Cahoone is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Stevens, of this place. Mr. Cahoone is the son of the late Stephen Cahoone, of Watchung avenue. Mrs. Cahoone was represented by Reed & Hetfield.

XMAS FUND IS $1,100 AND STILL GOING UP

Last Year's Mark Will Probably Be Beaten by Community Subscriptions.

With five more days in which money can be received in order to help the Community Christmas Fund, the prospects are excellent of exceeding last year's receipts of about $1,450. This morning Treasurer DeWitt Hubbell, at the Plainfield Trust Company, to whom all funds can be sent, had on hand a total of $1,102.90 to be used for this splendid purpose, and he had only heard from a few of the envelopes which were placed in the church pews yesterday morning. The purchasing committee has completed its work, so far as the children are concerned, and from now on will devote the money allotted to it to the relief of needy families, by buying coal, flour and other useful articles.

Included in the receipts since Saturday was a sum of money received in bulk from the envelopes placed in the Crescent Avenue church, for which it will be impossible to make individual acknowledgements. The other contributors since the last list was published on Friday are: Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. Charles E. Ryder, Rev. Edward G. Read, P. B. Hodge, A. V. D. Honeyman, Frank L. Holt, H. P. Benton, Hugh C. Pierce, Elizabeth Martin, M. S. R., "In Memory of Miss E. T. Reynolds," Harry L. McGee, Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, W. R. Cock, Gerald F. Earle, M. L. Bauersachs, John V. Beekman, Stephen H. Voorhees, George Megrew, P. C. Updike, "Cash" and a "Friend."

CHRISTMAS GIFTS FOR NEEDY FAMILIES

First Baptist Bible School Contributes Generously to the Poor.

The Christmas season was ushered in at the First Baptist church Bible school yesterday. The rooms were tastefully decorated with evergreens and an appropriate service was arranged, including the singing of Christmas carols, "The Christmas Story" by William MacNabb, recitations by Ruth Niles, Carrie Moore and Walter Bach, and a solo, "The Birthday of the King," by Mrs. William A. Coddington.

Even as the Wise Men of Old brought their gifts to the "Christ Child," so the members of the school brought their gifts yesterday to be distributed to needy families and institutions of Plainfield. The primary department in a processional brought about seventy-five packages of toys, cereals, canned goods, jellies and other good things.

The junior and intermediate departments brought seventeen baskets of vegetables, fruits and other provisions, and twenty-four small stockings filled with candy. The senior and adult departments contributed eight and one-half tons of coal to be distributed as needed, two large Christmas dinners, a basket of Christmas stockings, the kind that St. Nick leaves, and other provisions.

Superintendent A. M. Harris addressed the school, using as his topic some very appropriate Christmas thoughts. The Christmas cantata, "In David's Royal City," will be given Tuesday evening, December 28, by the young people of the Bible school.

The primary Christmas party will be held Wednesday, December 29, at 3 p. m. in the Bible school room, and on January 7 at 3 p. m., the junior department will celebrate.

$430,000 PAID AS CITY TAXES

Property Owners Pour Money Into Office of Collector Townsend.

HE CANNOT COUNT IT

$60,000 Came in Mail of Sunday Morning—Total is Far in Excess of That of Same Date Last Year, Indicating Local Prosperity.

Almost four hundred thousand dollars as city taxes has been paid in by the property owners of Plainfield at noon today and Collector William R. Townsend is still receiving money faster than he can count it.

The total at the beginning of Saturday's business was $300,000. During the day Mr. Townsend collected $70,000 over the counter at his office. It was one of the busiest days that the collector has ever known and a steady stream of taxpayers poured into the office until after 9 o'clock at night.

Sunday morning's mail brought over $60,000 more, according to the collector, and there is still a large sack of letters containing checks that have not been opened. They have been coming in so fast that the collector has not had time to count and receip the tax bills. It is said that more than $50,000 has come in the mails alone in the past two days.

This is the last day on which property owners within the municipality can pay their taxes without being assessed the penalty provided by law for delinquency, and it promises to be the biggest day in the history of the city. Mr. Townsend and his assistants have been rushed all day and there is no indication of a calm. The office will be opened until 9 o'clock tonight in order to accommodate the taxpayers who will not be able to get away from work until evening.

The total at the close of Saturday's business was more than $40,000 more than that of last year. This is one of the strongest indications of Plainfield prosperity.

YOUTHFUL BURGLARS CAUGHT IN THE ACT

Three Newark Lads Arrested While Trying to Enter Oak Tree Farm House.

Stephen Becker, Frank Ostroak and Joseph Smith, all in their 'teens and giving their address as Newark, were arrested last night by Detective John Everhardt while they were attempting to enter the farmhouse and barn of David Kellogg, of Oak Tree. The trio refused to give the local authorities any information about themselves other than their names and that they came from Newark. They were placed in the lockup at South Plainfield pending an investigation. The Newark police have been communciated with in the hope of learning something about the boys. They will be given a hearing this afternoon before Justice P. F. Kaine, when it will be decided what to do with the prisoners.

James Cole, who is in charge of the Kellogg farm during the absence of the owner who is in the South, has been missing things from both the farm-house and barn during the past two weeks, and he reported the matter to the police at South Plainfield. Good Resolution For Today—"I Won't Wait Until Christmas Eve to Do My Shopping!"

WM. F. STANSBURY NOW A BENEDICT

Well Known Scotch Plains Man Weds Miss May Day, of This City.

William F. Stansbury, the former Scotch Plains youth, who has recently been living on Somerset street, the borough, and who has been dubbed "Monty Brewster," because of his lavish expenditure of a $100,000 inheritance, announced his marriage today to Miss May Day, daughter of Mrs. Daniel Galbraith, of this city. The ceremony took place in the parsonage of the Baptist church at Scotch Plains last Friday night and was performed by Rev. J. Madison Hare. Only the necessary witnesses were in attendance. The couple are enjoying a brief honeymoon trip and will probably make their home in this city on returning.

Mr. Stansbury is the son of the late William R. Stansbury and grandson of the late William C. Stanbury, the lattest being one of the best known and wealthiest residents of Scotch Plains for many years. He died in 1907, leaving practically his entire estate of $100,000 to the grandson, then a minor. Since coming into the possession of his wealth, about three years ago, the grandson has been the talk of both Scotch Plains and Plainfield for the manner in which he distributed his wealth, frequently, it is said, spending thousands of dollars in a month. Last October he sold the old Stansbury homestead property at Park and Mountain avenues, to Louis Kiel, of this city, and removed to an apartment in the Thorn block on Somerset street. His bride is a Plainfield girl and is a daughter of the late James A. Day, whose father, Patrick Day, was a pioneer saloonkeeper in the West End.

RATS ATE FLESH OF LIVING WOMAN

Aged Negress is Rescued From Rodents by Patrolman Welsh.

While Mrs. Katherine Manning, an aged negress, sat unconscious in her home on West Fourth street during Friday night and Saturday as the result of a fall, rats gnawed at her hands and feet, and it was only when her door was broken in by Patrolman Welsh that she was rescued from the ravenous rodents.

The woman lived alone in a small two-room house owned by her. Some time Friday she fell while in the kitchen, striking her head on the stove. A gash was cut in the back of her head. The aged woman—she is seventy years old—managed to crawl to her bedroom and wrap some bed clothing around her, after which she sat down in a chair. Hungry rats in the house were attracted by the smell of fresh blood, and they attacked her. The woman lost consciousness, and she does not know how long she sat there.

Neighbors notified the police station that she had not been seen and they believed her dead. Patrolman Martin Walsh broke down the door and sent her to the hospital. She regained consciousness Sunday afternoon, but her condition is serious because of her advanced age and the shock to her nervous system.

The funeral of Bernard McGauley, whose death occurred at his home on Pond place, was held from St. Mary's church, this morning, where a high mass of requiem was said at 9 o'clock by the Rev. Among the latter was a huge set piece from the Pond shop, where Mr. McGauley was employed. The burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Michael Hagen, James Lyons, Daniel Fitzpatrick, Thomas MacDonald, Patrick Nugent and Dominic Fitzpatrick.

BOYS' BODIES ARE HORRIBLY MANGLED

Killed by Train Saturday While on Way Home From Work.

The lives of Ruby Steinman, aged 17 years, and Nickolas Zoppi, aged 18 years, were both sacrificed Saturday at noon to their desire to save a few minutes on the way home from work, that they might have more time in which to seek amusement during the afternoon.

While crossing the tracks of the New Jersey Central Railway near the Clinton avenue bridge they were struck by the 12:46 express that slipped up on them in the fog and drizzling rain, and both were instantly killed. The bodies of the young men were thrown against the bridge and were horribly mangled. The head of young Steinman was severed from his body.

Steinman and Zoppi worked at the Saurer plant of the International Motor Company. They left the factory at noon and attempted to cut across the tracks of the railroad to save time. Steinman lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Steinman, at 314 Plainfield avenue, and Zoppi boarded on West Sixth street. Zoppi came to this country from Italy about three years ago. He had no relatives here.

When those who witnessed the double-killing rushed to the bridge both boys were dead. Zoppi was identified at once by a man who worked in the shop with him, but the body of young Steinman was so badly mangled that it was not recognized by any of his friends.

His body was identified by his father. The boy wore a new suit of clothing Saturday morning, when he went to work and it was by this that his identity was established. His father and mother became worried when he did not come home to lunch at the usual hour, and their anxiety increased during the early afternoon. Shortly after 2 o'clock the father heard that two men had been killed by a train at a point where he knew his son would be likely to cross the railroad tracks and he went to Higgin's undertaking parlors to see whether or not it was his son. The new suit was recognized by Mr. Steinman.

Funeral services over the body of Steinman were held from the residence of his parents Saturday afternoon. The body of Zoppi will be interred tomorrow morning.

PLAINFIELD TRUST CO.'S CALENDAR WORK OF ART

"Finding Daddy's Ship" is the title of The Plainfield Trust Company's 1916 art calendar which the company is presenting as a memento of the season to its depositors. It is copied from the painting of Bernard Pothast, a Dutch artist, who was born at Hal, Holland, in 1882, and who studied under his father, H. A. Pothast, a famous portrait painter. The work of the younger Pothast has been exhibited in many of the great art galleries and his conceptions of the peasant life, of which he has made a special study, are very popular among lovers of the Dutch school of art. As in former years, this calendar has been mounted for framing and adult patrons of the institution are invited to call at The Plainfield Trust Company and receive a copy.

NOW SQUARELY UP TO AUSTRIA

U. S. Refuses to Discuss Ancona Sinking With Vienna.

ULTIMATUM IS SENT

Must Disavow Sinking of Ship, Indemnify America for Lives Lost and Punish Submarine Commander—9 Americans Lost.

Washington, Dec. 20.—America's new note to Austria, a reiteration of the original one, and a second demand for quick disavowal of and indemnity for the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona and the punishment of the commander of the submarine responsible for it, has been sent to the Vienna government.

It is practically an ultimatum and while no definite time for compliance is given it leaves no doubt as to the intent of the American government in case its demands are not met with.

Neither does the note leave further hope for a prolonged discussion of the points which Austria claims are at issue, as reports from Vienna indicate the Imperial Government expect. It simply states that America cannot condone the sinking of the Ancona and that Austria must condemn it and indemnify this country from the American lives lost if it respects the friendship of the United States.

The State Department this morning announced the receipt of a cablegram from Ambassador Page at Rome saying that it has been definitely established that twelve Americans were aboard the Italian liner Ancona when sunk by an Austrian submarine. The cablegram stated further that only three of these had been saved.

ALBERT F. LAROCK WINS AUTO CONTEST

Firm Believer in the Old Slogan That "It Pays to Advertise."

The time-honored slogan, "It Pays to Advertise," came into its own again Saturday night, when Albert F. LaRock, of this city, captured the first prize in the Astor Theatre contest with a total vote of 1,337,675 or with a majority of 324,570 votes over his nearest competitor. Mr. LaRock was awarded the 1916 Maxwell touring car, which was offered to the winner of the contest.

The contest closed Saturday noon, after four weeks of hard work on the part of the entrants, and the announcement of the winners was made Saturday night at 9 o'clock, after the decision of the judges was handed in. The theatre was crowded to the doors, every available seat being occupied with enthusiastic helpers of the entrants, and all eagerly awaited the naming of the winners of the car and diamond rings. S. P. Whiting, manager of the Astor Theatre, announced Albert F. LaRock as the winner of the automobile; Mrs. George Endicott, second, the $100 diamond ring, and Miss Sophia Wicht, third the $50 diamond ring. Mr. LaRock was in the audience when his name was announced, and took occasion to go to the front of the playhouse and to express his gratitude to everyone who had helped him, as well as to the management of the theatre, through whose contest his ownership of the car was made possible. At the same time he congratulated E. W. Woodcock, the contest manager, on the able, straightforward method with which the contest was conducted. At no time during the contest did one contestant know what the opposition was doing. The Astor management did not conduct the contest for any financial results, the main idea being to stimulate interest among the people of Plainfield in the high-grade photoplays that have been the vogue at the West Front street house.

Mrs. George Endicott tallied 1,103,105 votes, while Miss Wicht returned 424,840 votes. Mrs. William R. Causbrook was fourth in the race with a total of 293,405 votes.

The judges of the contest were Postmaster Alvin E. Hoagland, Milton Mendell and J. Wendell Mosher, president of the Plainfield motor shop.

Mr. LaRock was the only contestant who resorted to newspaper advertising to announce to his friends the fact that he was an entrant in the contest, as well as soliciting their votes. In an interview with a reporter this morning, Mr. LaRock believes his success was due to this fact he being a firm believer in advertising.

NEW U. S. SUBMARINES FAIL TO MAKE GOOD

Washington, Dec. 20.—Secretary of the Navy Daniels today confirmed the report that a number of new submarine boats known as the L series just completed have failed to reach the requirements set by the Navy Department, and that therefore they have not been accepted. The Navy Department has not definitely rejected them, however, and will not do so until further tests shows them to be structurally unfit.

NATIONAL GUARD NOTES

First Lieutenant Anthony Lamy of the medical corps, attached to the staff of the First Battalion of the Second Infantry, is about to resign. Dr. Lamy finds that his private practice does not give him the time he ought to have for attention to his military duties.

The First Field Hospital is planning to hold its annual banquet in January. There will be a meeting of the company tonight at its quarters and to make arrangements.

Major Harold D. Corbusier, commanding the First Field Hospital, is ill at his home on Park avenue.

Although the resignation of Second Lieutenant Ralph Shaw, of Company F, Second Infantry, stationed at Elizabeth, has not yet been accepted there are several candidates in the company for his commission. His successor will probably be either First Sergeant Edgar DeRonde or Sergeant Wrightson Christopher. There may be an opportunity for both De Ronde and Christopher being advanced in grade because First Lieutenant Harvey C. Robins says that he intends to resign soon.

Sergeant Ben Cross, of Company C Second Infantry, made a hero of himself the other day at the First Battalion armory, in Elizabeth, by climbing the flagstaff on the roof and reeving a new halyard.

ANIMALS IN PAWN.

Tame or Wild, They Are Good For a Loan In This New York Shop.

Among the curious industries or sources of livelihood in New York city is an animal pawnshop. As you take a watch to an ordinary pawnshop to raise money on it, so you may take a watchdog to the animal pawnshop. Recently a man did this, getting $20 on a dog that was easily worth $50, the pawnbroker said. But he was a trick dog which had been taught to open doors. So in due time he opened a door and let himself out while letting the pawnbroker in.

A well known animal trainer owns the shop. He takes camels, lions, elephants—any animals. There are no charges for interest on the loan, the only charge being for the keep of the animals, among which at almost any time are dogs, monkeys, bears, goats, cats, coons, foxes, parrots, canaries. At one time he had forty trick donkeys in pawn. The profits arising from charges for feed and care are enough to make the institution pay.

Once he had a lion in pawn which broke his chain in the stable and went roaring around, scared almost to death, and it was only after heroic efforts that they mustered courage to capture him. As a matter of fact the animal was a decrepit beast that had served his time in sideshows and was anxious to get away.—Exchange.

A CLEW TO HER PAST.

She Knew Entirely Too Much, As a Close Observer Discovered.

She looked rich and acted rich, and every one knew that she was rich because she had married a rich man, yet the Sherlock Holmes of the tea party discovered that she had once been poor.

"Take it from me," she said, "that there was a time, and that not so very long ago, when she was as poor as the rest of us."

"Marvelous!" exclaimed the other four girls. "How did you discover that?"

"Through her knowing so absolutely where I keep all my housekeeping things. She knew that the tea caddy was in the writing desk, that the cheese, biscuits and other edibles beloved by mice were in that tin box under the sofa, that the alcohol for my stove was in the corner behind the washstand, that the butter and milk were on the window ledge and that the eggs and other raw foods were in a box on the bottom shelf of the wardrobe.

"When we were cooking she went straight to the spot and got every one of those things without once asking where they were, which is something that a person who had not had a wide experience of housekeeping in one room could never have done."—New York Times.

An Ingenious Device.

When Sir Robert Perks' school days were over he entered the office of a firm of lawyers and worked very hard. It was no uncommon thing to find him reading law at 5 in the morning, and this often after he had been working late on the previous night. As a matter of fact, he made it an inflexible rule never to be in bed of a morning after 5. To enforce this rule he invented an ingenious device. This consisted of a long glass tube filled with water nicely balanced over his head and attached by a string to an alarm. At the desired hour the bell rang and awakened the sleeper. If within a few seconds he did not leap from his bed and avert the calamity the descending weight of the clock destroyed the balance of the tube, and down poured the water on his guilty head!—From "The Life Story of Sir Robert W. Perks."

PLAINFIELD THEATRE GETS FOX FEATURES

Manager Shannon Signs Contract for Exclusive Showing Beginning Monday.

Sticking to his determination to give local theatre-goers the very best in the vaudeville and motion picture field, Manager Michael Shannon has closed a contract for the presentation at the Plainfield Theatre of the William Fox feature films. These productions are the talk of the photoplay world, and will be shown here exclusively, beginning today. People who have made a study of screen plays know that the Will Fox releases are the last word in motion pictures, and will undoubtedly add greatly to the popularity of the West Second street playhouse. There will be no reduction in the customary vaudeville program, six acts being maintained as before.

The first production to be shown today, and continuing for the following two days, will be "The Unfaithful Wife," featuring Robert Mantell. This will be followed in the succeeding semi-weekly changes by other notable plays introducing Theda Bara, Valeska Suratt, Annettee Kellerman, William Farnum, Ralph Kellard, Blanche Walsh, Dorothy Barnard and others.

The quality of the vaudeville acts will be kept up to their present high standard, and there will be no change in the prevailing admission charges.

TIMELY SUGGESTIONS TO ALL OWNERS OF HORSES

Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, special officer for the S. P. C. A., furnishes the following timely suggestions to stablemen as well as all owners of horses:

"If you don't feed your horse well—he cannot work well!

"Water the horse before feeding him! Horses require plenty of water, give them frequent chances of drinking. In winter, take the chill off the water—ice cold water brings on colic; in summer, put a little oatmeal in the water; it is refreshing and sustaining—remember it is harder to work in hot weather than in cold.

"The amount of food that a horse needs per day depends upon his weight and size. An average sized horse should have from 12 to 14 lbs. of oats—from 14 to 16 lbs. of good hay. Divide this into three meals—morning, mid-day, and evening. Put some of the hay (long) into the rack for night, cut up the rest into chaff and mix it with the oats.

"If the horse has had an extra long day's work, give him four meals, and use fully 16 lbs. of oats.

"In bleak, cold weather, add half a pint of horse beans to the morning and evening meals.

"If the horse be troubled with his wind, chop the hay and sprinkle a little water on it, insead of putting it dry in the rack.

"Keep a piece of rock salt in the manger, for the horse to lick.

"Give the horse a bran-mash once a week, (warm in winter, cold in summer) this keeps his bowels in good condition and makes his coat shine.

"Keep your horse's collar clean, or the dust and dirt will cause sores.

"Keep the stable well! A dark stable often causes diseases of the eye; a dirty stable causes lung diseases; a damp stable spoils his legs and feet! Draughts give him colds. The more a horse lies down the longer his legs will last; but he won't want to lie down if he has an uncomfortable bed, so make the bed deep and turn it over frequently—a little bedding soon gets wet and dirty, and it is not economical."

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Starting Thursday night, there will be one round of merry holiday parties at the association for members and their friends. The annual Christmas frolic will be held Thursday night beginning at 8 o'clock, at which time attendants will help hang the greens and decorate the tree.

On Christmas Day the association will be open for visiting the entire day, while in the evening a home gathering will be held, to which any young girl, away from home and who would miss the Christmas cheer, is cordially invited to join in the festivities.

On Monday night, the Christmas festival for the older members will be held.

Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock a party for the junior members of the association will be held, to which all the younger girls are invited.

The association will hold an open house on New Year's Day.

Classes conducted at the association will close tomorrow night and will resume work after the holidays on January 5. Announcement at this time is also made that new classes in basketry will begin work after the new year and members wishing to join are requested to leave their names at the office of the secretary.

CHRISTMAS MEETING.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will hold its Xmas meeting Wednesday at 3:45. A feature of the gathering, which will be called a "Christmas Story Meeting," will be the telling of stories by various members of the society. Miss Alma Allegar will be in charge of the meeting. ONCE AGAIN.

Once again we wish to drive home the obvious truth that promises don't amount to a hill of beans unless they are made by those who are both competent and disposed to fulfill them.

The real merit about a promise given by us is the fact that we are competent to keep a promise without quibble or question, and this is of the utmost importance to the insuring public.

I desire publicly to express my gratitude and sincere appreciation to my friends and supporters in the recent ASTOR THEATRE AUTOMOBILE CONTEST.

To the management of the Theatre and the Contest Management there can be nothing but the highest of praise and commendation for the thoroughly just and business-like manner in which the contest was conducted.

Through the same medium I asked for the co-operation of my friends and the public, I again thank one and all.

ARRESTED FOR CRIME OF FOUR LONG YEARS AGO

Jesse Terrill, of South Plainfield, was arrested Saturday for a crime alleged to have been committed four years ago. Terrill was charged with having stolen a bicycle from Thomas Seralfe. The machine was taken in 1911. Terrill's father made good the loss of the owner and the case was dismissed.

BOY'S MOTHER WANTS HIM SENT TO JUVENILE COURT

Joseph Moore, a youth who refused to go to school, was in police court this morning on complaint made by his mother. She said that the boy would not work nor go to school. Judge De Meza ordered him sent to Elizabeth to await action of the juvenile court.

SWEARS OFF AND LEAVES WITH PILLAR OF FIRE LEADER

After Steven O'Brien, an old offender, was dismissed by Judge De Meza in police court this morning on his promise to quit drinking, O'Brien left the station in company with Arthur Wilson, head of the Pillar of Fire. O'Brien was penitent when he came into court and was given a severe lecture by the judge. He said he thought he could stay away from drink and was freed. The Pillar of Fire man was in the court room and he and the reformed man walked away together.

CUSSED BARTENDER AND WAS KNOCKED DOWN

James H. Moore, of Paterson, was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of having used profane language in a saloon Friday night when a bartender politely asked him to pay for drinks consumed. It developed that Moore had attempted to hit the bartender, and as a result he was knocked down. He begged to be freed, saying that it was his first offense, and Judge De Meza let him off with a warning and suspended sentence.

SOMEBODY HAS A BIG CHRISTMAS TURKEY READY

Somebody has his Christmas turkey. This information is a matter of record at police headquarters, but the officers are unable as yet to give the name of the lucky man, although they hope to do so within a short time. They can tell who lost the turkey, however. It was stolen early Sunday morning from the barn of William Pitts, 51 Leland avenue, and with it six big chickens. Patrolmen tracked the thief in the snow to North Plainfield, but lost him when traveled streets were reached.

ITALIAN ESCAPES AFTER CUTTING HIS COMPANION

Dominico Venietalli, an Italian, was arraigned in police court this morning, on a charge of disorderly conduct, but because of the failure of the police to locate Pasquale Ricardo, another Italian, with whom Venietalli had a fight Saturday night, the case was passed. The two men engaged in a battle on a down town street late Saturday evening in which Venietalli was slightly cut. Ricardo left the city, it is believed, but he will be brought back and both men will be placed on trial.

HE BEGGED, BUT WAS NOT A REAL BEGGAR

There are beggars and beggars, according to the testimony of Edward Tilson, who was arraigned in police court this morning on a charge of panhandling. Tilson said he was a steeple-jack from Council Bluff, Iowa. He was out of work and broke and instead of going from house to house begging food he stopped a man on the street and asked him for the price of a meal, saying that he believed that to be the most manly way in which to "mooch" a living. On his promise to get work and stick to it he was released.

GILBERT A. YAWGER DIES AT DAUGHTER'S HOME

Gilbert A. Yawger, for many years a resident and prominent business man in Somerville, died last night at 6 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alvah A. Porter, of Codington avenue, with whom he had been residing since 1912. He had been in failing health for the past two years and his death had been expected for several weeks.

Mr. Yawger, who was 76 years old, was a native of this city but lived most of his life in Somerville. Following his retirement, Mr. Yawger came to the borough, remaining there up to the time of his death.

Beside his wife and Mrs. Porter, Mr. Yawger is survived by the following sons: Essex Yawger, of Bound Brook; Benjamin D. Yawger, of Morristown, and Gilbert P. Yawger, of Somerville; also one brother and a sister, I. C. Yawger, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Elmira Cole, of Newark. There is no Room in the World for the Man who only Guesses -- YOU MUST KNOW.

MEN who work with their hands and muscles are struggling at a big disadvantage. The world doesn't care so much how much you can lift while "on the job"—it is how much do you know?

Suppose a man should pop around the corner and say to you, "who is the representative from your district"? Could you answer him?

You may be as poor as a church-mouse in money but rich in knowledge. You may be able to answer a fund of inquiries—you may be looked upon as a wise man of your neighborhood, and if that is so then you are also rich in a number of real friends.

The man who knows is welcomed everywhere—he attracts people to him—folks like to have dealings with the intelligent man—

Are You that Man?

For instance: what do you know about the Republic of Mexico—its agriculture—area—and population—capital—commerce—debt—education—finance—government—judicature—history—language—its mines and minerals—its monetary system—its production and industry—its towns—states—capitals—weights—measures—currency?

Can you give facts about this one question (alone) of the day? Can you converse intelligently about Mexico's present and past difficulties?

Can you give the important facts about your own state or any other state in the Union? Have you reliable books that will give such information?

Can you refer to any books in your library and know the world's production in hops—fire insurance statistics—fire losses—in these United States?

Do they give you facts in general about the earth?

To put it in another way—what do you know about

Electrical Measures:	Number of Jacobites;
Number of Evangelists;	Number of people in any given religious sect?
Expenditure of U. S.	Horse power developed in U. S.
Farm statistics.	Horse racing records:
Farmers table;	Mercantile Marine
Ice yachting records;	Eight hour laws?

Where is Devil's Tower—Red River—Muscat—Montezuma Castle—Muir Woods?
What mountains are the highest—or rivers the longest—or lakes the widest—or national monuments the tallest?
Who are the representatives—what are the retail prices of foods—the U. S. Postal Laws?
What are the President's powers—what is his constitutional position—how is he elected—his residence and rules and salary?

These are but a few of the subjects covered in

ATTRACTIVE HOLIDAY PROGRAM IS PLANNED

The "Pageant of the Months" to Be Given at Plainfield High School.

What promises to be one of the most pleasing holiday entertainments for children will be given at the High School Auditorium on Wednesday evening, under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee of Plainfield. The boys and girls have been rehearsing and making the most fantastic of costumes for some time past and all is in readiness now for a successful production. The "Pageant of the Months" presents in story, interpretive dance, and coloring, the spirit of every month in the year. Flowers will appear in their season, the snowdrops, the violet, roses and sunflowers. The March winds will be seen as well as heard and July will bring with it a thunderstorm most realistic. A dance, which will surely charm the little folk, is that of the robin redbreast. Then the fire-flies, that flash their little lights in the twilight, and the brownies, who frisk about on the drear November days will delight every child in the audience.

On Tuesday afternoon there will be a matinee for children in the High School Auditorium. The curtain will be raised promptly at 3 o'clock. A nominal fee of ten cents is to be charged to cover expenses. It is the aim of the Recreation Committee to put this holiday entertainment within the reach of every child in the city. The sale of tickets for Wednesday evening gives indication of a large audience of adults. On Tuesday afternoon adm[illegible] will be paid at the door.

Pupils from nearly every school in the city will take part in the pageant. The dramatic parts have been assigned to High School students and many of them are interpreting Christine Rossetti's poems with great power and grace. The cast is as follows:

ACTIVITIES AT THE PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church exchanged pulpits yesterday morning with Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church.

Miss May Rees, of New York city, a violinist of marked ability, rendered several solos in both the Young People's meeting and the church service last evening. Miss Rees plays with a finish, and her selections were thoroughly enjoyed by all who heard her. She was formerly of Hastings, Neb., where she was leader of the Sunday-school orchestra in Dr. Hudson's church. Miss Rees has been visiting at the home of Dr. Hudson in this city, and leaves today for Florida, where she starts on a concert tour.

The final rehearsal of the Christmas carols will be held Wednesday evening at the church from 7:30 to 8:30, led by William N. Runyon. The rehearsal will be followed by a short prayer service in charge of the pastor, Rev. Dr. Hudson, who will afterward give the fourth in the series of lectures on "The King's Highway."

The Christmas program of the Bible school will be given next Sunday morning at 10:30 in the church auditorium, including special music and exercises by members of the main school and elementary department.

WILLIAM A. W. THOMPSON TO ADDRESS BOY SCOUTS

Troop 5, Boy Scouts of America, will have as their temporary scoutmaster tomorrow evening, Assistant Scoutmaster William A. W. Thompson, formerly of that troop, but now of Stevens Institute in Hoboken. Mr. Thompson is home on his Christmas vacation, and will give the scouts a practical talk on the plans for the coming summer's activities at the scout camp in Terrill road. COLUMBUS CLUB FIVE DOWNS PLAINFIELDS Rally Near End of the Second Half Puts Game on Ice, 25-18.

A spurt a couple of minutes before the game ended gave the Knights of Columbus quintet a 25-18 victory over the Plainfield A. A. on the Tabs' court, Saturday night. The Columbians were substituted in place of the Recreation Five, with which team the P. A. A. was originally slated to play.

A couple of goals by George Linke, a long shot by Jim Kyle, one by Dan McAfee, and the accurate foul shooting of Al Brynairski earned the points that put the Knights out in front. The first half ended with the Columbus Club men only one point ahead.

The floorwork of the rival players was just as close as the score. Both sides covered closely, the bunched guarding keeping down the scoring, and making open passing almost impossible.

The losers were without the services of one of their regulars, Hirsch taking his place.

P. H. S. QUINTET TO MEET GRADS NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

Carleton Dunham, manager of the P. H. S. boys' basketball team, has scheduled a game with the 1915 Alumni to be played on the Ninth street court next Monday night. The fracas should be a hummer, as four regulars besides several substitutes of the team were graduated from school last June, and while at college this fall have been playing the game, so that they will be in shape to give the Red and Blue five a fine tussle. With Rosenson and McNamee at forward, Chamberlain at centre, and Peacock one of the guards, and Ryder standing the best chance of holding down the other one, the last year's men would lineup the same as the P. H. S. team of last season with the exception of Wheelan, as one of the guards as running mate to Peacock. Wheelan is the only last year's man on the present school team, and the graduates will have to be given a slight edge on the Ninth street aggregation.

Miss Elsa Palmer, the Red and Blue girls' basketball manager, is trying to schedule a game with the 1915 class girls for a game on the same night the boys get together. Miss Sadie Rothberg was the only regular lost by graduation last June, but there were several other good players, and a team could be selected that would stand an excellent chance of coming out ahead.

GAME CLOSER NEAR END

E. O. H. S. in Van 35 to 8 in the First Half, But Outscore Home Boys Only 21 to 12 in Second—McDowell Plays Good Game.

Plainfield High School's basketball team was treated to its second drubbing in its second start of the season on the P. H. S. court Saturday afternoon, when East Orange High handed out a 56 to 20 defeat. The visitors grabbed the game in the first half, when Johnson kept shoving in the ball until he had chalked up twenty points.

Seldom did the visitors miss a shot, while time after time the locals failed to locate the basket. The Orangers did not show a very good defense, but were certainly there when it came to caging the ball. They showed ability to put them in from all angles and distances of the floor. McDowell's entrance into the game at forward in the second half was the signal for some good play by the Red and Blue basketeers, and it was the only stage of the game that the locals played on even terms with their opponents.

Johnson was a whole team himself, chalking up eleven baskets for a total of twenty-two points before he retired early in the second half. McDowell put up a great game for the Red and Blue five after taking Dunham's place at forward early in the second half, and accounted for nearly half of the local's score with four baskets and a free shot.

MANY ATTEND OPENING OF TABS' NEW ALLEYS

John Welch Rolls First Ball—Pool Table Initiated, Too—Father Bogan Speaks.

More than a hundred members of the Total Abstinence and Benevolent Society, of St. Mary's church, attended the formal opening of the new addition to the clubhouse, Saturday night. The recently installed bowling alleys and pocket billiard table were used for the first time. The honor of rolling the first ball down the alleys was given to John Welch, a charter member of the organization.

The members kept the alleys and pool table busy all night. There was prize bowling, and although the new wood made it difficult to make high scores, a number of strikes were recorded. Father Bogan indulged in the bowling, and made a short address, in which he viewed the new attractions at the club as important factors cementing the social and fraternal aims of the society.

When Albert F. La Rock, the winner of the Astor Theatre automobile, made his appearance, he was greeted with a lusty cheer, and responded by passing cigars to his brother members, who smoked to his success.

LOCAL COLLEGE ATHLETES RETURNING HOME FOR XMAS

The approach of the holidays is already bringing former students of Plainfield schools home from college for the holidays. Bill Peacock is back from Colgate, where he was a sub on the 'varsity football team, and is now a sub on the basketball five, which is pretty good for a freshman. Ralph Runyon is also home from Penn State, where in the few months since September he has been acknowledged as the best pole vaulter in the university. Runyon is counted to win points in the intercolligate meets this winter.

Ted Ryder and Chester Chamberlain, two other last year P. H. S. men, have been doing some good work at Brown. Willard MacKay is spending his vacation home from Yale, where in his junior year he is carrying off scholarship honors galore. Carter Goodrich, a sophomore at Amherst, is also carrying off high scholarship honors. Other alumni will be trailing in all this week. The annual alumni dance of P. H. S. will be held in the school auditorium on December 28.

U. G. TINGLEY CLEANS UP AT LOG CABIN CLUB TRAPS

U. G. Tingley won every event at the Log Cabin Gun Club traps Saturday afternoon. He was in excellent form, breaking 23 in each of the 25-bird shoots, and having a score of 16 out of 20 in the doubles.

Besides capturing the Take Home Cup in the duck shoot, he also won the handicap sweepstakes, and first place in the Point Cup competition. In the latter event A. D. Honeyman was second and David G. Weeks was third.

The standing to date for the season point cup follows:

HOW JOHNNY EVERS CHANGED PITCHER NEHF.

This is one of the stories they tell in connection with Arthur Nehf, the southpaw secured in mid-season by the Boston Braves and who ranks today as one of the greatest pitching finds of the past five years.

When Nehf joined the Braves he was introduced to his new teammates.

"This is Captain Evers, Mr. Nehf," said George Stallings, who was doing the introducing.

"How do do," murmured Nehf. "This is the second time we have met, Mr. Evers."

"Zatso," retorted the Trojan. "Well, meybe you're right, but I don't remember you."

"It was in 1913, the year you managed the Cubs, that we met before," said Nehf. "I reported to you one morning, and you fired me that afternoon. You said I wasn't a pitcher good enough for major league work."

Evers shot one long look at him and then said:

"I fired you, eh? Well, gee whiz, it's no wonder Charlie Murphy turned me loose!"

ELIZABETH BOSS OF ELKS' JUNIOR LOOP

Leaders Hold Team and Individual Average and High Score Honors.

Elizabeth's entry in the Elks' Junior League is out to repeat its performance of last year, when the Bessytowners captured nearly all the prizes, if the team's work thus far this season is any criterion. The boys from the county seat are leading the league with a clean record, and also have the team average and all score honors, and individual average and high score laurels. New Brunswick Bills have also won all three games they have rolled.

Elizabeth is averaging 942.1, the only big mark in the league. Harry Gathman heads the singles, with an average of 231 and a high tally of 256 as his first nights effort.

TO BE NO MORE Y. M. C. A. FIVE

Local Association's Representative Team Disbanded for Good.

LOST FINAL CONTEST

Men's League Quintet From Arlington a Fast Aggregation, and Licks Home Outfit by Score of 45 to 26.

Plainfield's Y. M. C. A. will no longer have a representative basketball team. After the game here Saturday night, in which the Men's League five, of Arlington, outplayed the local association boys by a 45-26 score, a meeting of the team was held, and it was decided to disband. Physical Director Meermans said that another effort to form a representative quintet would not be made so long as he remains in charge.

The management offers two causes for the disbandment. One is the insufficient patronage the team has received, and the other is the lack of players to take the place of the regulars who left the team a week ago to form an independent combination.

The passing of the Y. M. C. A. team means that for the first time in more than a decade no basketball aggregation bearing the association's name will be in existence. The support accorded the team this season was the poorest in its history, there being only a handful of spectators at the six home games that were played.

The playing Saturday night, as in most of the other games, was of high calibre. The Arlington combination was fast, and in the second half outscored the home side two to one. The visitors were able to claim only a five point advantage in the first period.

Harry Moulton was appointed captain of the team before the game. Three of the regulars who left the team—Bill Taylor, Ashley Burner and Roy Love—offered their services for Saturday night's game only, and played on the team, but had the Y. M. C. A. team been continued, they would not have remained in the fold.

Sargent starred at guard for the visitors, dropping in half a dozen baskets in the second half. Some of Moulton's six goals were of the sensational variety. After Manley had to quit on account of a sore hip, and his loss weakened the Plainfield team, Love being unable to hold Hayward, the opposing center.

In the future, the Saturday night court attractions at the Y. M. C. A. will be senior league contests, to which the public will be admitted free of charge. Some of the first string men will be given berths on the league teams.

SEVEN YEARS' RECORD OF RED CROSS SEAL SALE

Nearly $2,500,000 Has Been Raised to Aid Fight on Tuberculosis.

Nearly $2,500,000 has been raised by Red Cross Christmas Seals in the last seven years, and yet many people who will buy these holiday stickers at this eighth annual sale do not know how the charity stamp idea originated.

It was war that brought forth the charity stamp—our Civil War of '61 to '65. Some of your grandmothers for played "post office" with stickers similar to Red Cross seals 'way back in 1862, when they conceived the idea of selling stamps at fairs for the benefit of the relief funds for the soldiers' hospitals in Brooklyn, Boston and elsewhere. Nearly $1,000,000 was raised in this way before 1865. After the war this method of raising money was discontinued for a generation, although it found vogue in Portugal, Switzerland, Austria, France, Spain, Denmark, Norway, Russia, Sweden and other European countries. There are now several thousands of different types of charity stamps used in all parts of the world, as many as forty being used in Austria for children's hospitals alone.

Stamps or seals were first used to get money for the anti-tuberculosis crusade in Norway and Sweden in 1904. To Jacob Riis, the well-known social worker, of New York, and to Miss Emily P. Bissell, the energetic secretary of the Delaware Red Cross, jointly belong the honor of originating our American Red Cross Christmas seal. In 1907 Mr. Riis' interest was aroused by the receipt of a Christmas tuberculosis stamp on a letter from Norway. He published an article about this queer-looking stamp in the Outlook, and suggested some possible uses for it in this country. Miss Bissell at once saw an opportunity here and prepared a stamp, from the sale of which her society realized $3,000 for tuberculosis work. So impressed was she with this success that she induced the American Red Cross to take up the sale in 1908 on a national basis. With very little organization and with hardly any attempt at careful advertising the sale that year brought in over $135,000 for anti-tuberculosis work in various parts of the United States. In 1909, with more thorough organization, the sale was increased to $230,000, in 1910 to nearly $310,000, in 1911 to over $330,000 and in 1912 to over $400,000. In 1913 the sale was increased to nearly $450,000, and last year, in spite of war and hard times, 22 per cent. more, or 55,000,000 seals, were sold totaling $550,000 for the anti-tuberculosis war.

It is fitting to note that war, inhuman and cruel, was the mother of the Red Cross seal, and that now war for humanity against disease brings it back to its fullest usefulness.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Runyon's Song Birds, featuring five juvenile vocalists, said to be the best youthful performers on the vaudeville stage, will be at the Plainfield Theatre for the first three days of this week, as a star act on another bill of quality. In fact, performances of the past few weeks have brought the majority of local theatre goers to believe that Plainfield is synonymous for vaudeville quality, and the bill which opens Christmas week is one that will not lessen the holiday spirit of goodwill, but rather promote it. In addition to the usual vaudeville offering, there will be a William Fox feature film, the first of a series that are to be show at this theatre. Manager Shannon having recently signed a contract for the exclusive right to show them here. William B Mantell in "The Unfaithful Wife" will be the first of the pictures shown Tuesday night will be another of the Oriental entertainments, where valuable prizes will be awarded to lucky holders of seats in the audience, and anyone who attends has an equal chance to win one of these valuable souvenirs of the performance.

In commemoration of the world's greatest engineering achievement—the completion of the Panama Canal—Lyman H. Howe will take spectators at the Plainfield Theotre Monday and Tuesday nights and Tuesday matinee, Dec. 27 and 28, on a film journey through thelocks and lakes of the great waterway that now links the Atlantic with the Pacific, and then continue to both California Expositions via his inimitable exhibition. Every foot of the film covering this noteworthy feature was photographed by Howe's own camera men, and may be seen only at his own exhibition. Although celebrating the same event, the two expositions are entirely different, and in order to acquaint the legion of "Howe Travelers" of the wonders of each exposition arrangements were made with the exposition officials both at San Francisco and at San Diego for special facilities to insure an absolutely perfect reproduction commensurate with the scope of each celebration. In the views covering the exposition at San Francisco, spectators will ramble through a magic city, upon which over $50,000,000 was lavished. But anyone seeing them will agree that money is the poorest kind of a measure where such a wealth of architecture has been wrought and of such heroic proportions. Imagine, if you can, a dream city of domes and towers, arches and great courts, splendid colonnades and rich sculptures, all glowing in the sun, and still the imagination fails entirely in grasping the true scope and magnificence conveyed in Howe's films.

There will also be the usual diversity of other features in the new Lyman H. Howe program.

FINANCING WAR STAFF PLANS.

A war staff never concerns itself with the financial problems of warfare. The consideration of finding the wherewithal to put its policies into effect is waved aside as a sordid thing, unworthy of the military profession. The nation's civilians, therefore, are obliged to consider the trivial task of getting cash enough into the United States treasury to support the armament demanded by the General Staff in its report just published.

The staff calls for a permanent effective mobile force of 1,500,000 soldiers to repel invasion of our home soil, in addition to the forces required to protect our distant possessions. The cost for the first year—which would be the next fiscal year if the plan were adopted this winter—would be $503,000,000, and the cost thereafter would run about $320,000,000 a year.

That means an expense for the army alone, next year, of five times its present cost, and more than $300,000,000 over the estimate submitted by the Secretary of War.

Well, suppose Congress adopts the War Staff plan. It means, apparently, that every man, woman and child in America must dig down into his, her or its jeans for five dollars and some odd cents next year to support the army. It means a little more than $25 a year for the average family, without including the added burden of the navy and the usual government expenses for other purposes.

Perhaps the main question about a big army boils right down to that—do we want to pay $25 a year per family for the purpose? Do we want—or need—that much army insurance? Let the civilian taxpayer figure it out for himself, in the assurance that Congress will do just about what he wants done in the matter.

WAR LOANS AND FARMERS.

Governor Ferguson, of Texas, addressing the National Association of Life Insurance Presidents, expressed alarm over the European war loans. He reminded his hearers that American financial interests are said to have loaned the nations of Europe a billion dollars in the past year, and that another billion will probably be loaned in the next twelve months.

He sees in this a grave misfortune to the country. "Think!" he says. "This $2,000,000,000 would make a loan of $800 to every tenant farmer in the United States and would start him on the road to ownership." The money, instead of going abroad, ought to be kept at home and lent to the American farmer.

The Texas governor's intentions are good, but he is obviously mistaken about the real situation. The "billion dollars" supposed to have been loaned to Europe does not represent money taken out of the country. We have sent no money to Europe. All the loans made have been "credit loans." They fulfill a function in international trade whereby the United States extends its foreign customers longer credit than usual, and our financial institutions assume the responsibility of collecting the accounts later on.

Meanwhile these same financial institutions pay to the American producer, the hard cash represented by those loans. The American farmer, like the American manufacturer, actually gets his money. And having more cash than he's had in a long time, as a result of two great and readily marketable crops, the farmer—with the exception of the southern cotton planter—is in better financial shape than usual.

Besides, the farmers haven't much difficulty in borrowing money from the very institutions whose representatives the governor was addressing. For the life insurance companies of America, with nearly $5,000,000,000 of assets, have already lent two-thirds of a billion dollars to farmers, and hold today more farm mortgages than all the banks in the country put together.

It is highly desirable that there should be established a rural credit system whereby farmers can borrow money still more readily, and on easier terms. But as far as these war loans are concerned, it should be recognized that they have helped the farmer instead of hurting him.

Uncle Davy Baird, the ruler of the political destinies of South Jersey, has his ear to the ground, and refused to be smoked out on the subject of Root and Fairbanks as prospective candidates for the Presidency, following former Governor Murphy's declaration for one or the other. Davy's reply to interviewers was that he was "for the man who can win!" Which shows that the astute South Jersey leader realizes that Mr. Murphy did not strike a very popular chord when he hit on the two names mentioned. If the State Republican organization decides to support delegates pledged to either one of the men mentioned, they will run up against a revolt which will make the one in 1912 when T. R. got the New Jersey delegates, look like a session of an old ladies' sewing circle.

Those crap shooters, who after being unmolested for years have at last been tangled in the net of the Middlesex county authorities may find that their boasted political protection is not so much. If reports are true the places have been thriving for many years, and not a few Plainfield families have suffered because their breadwinner has lost his weeks wages at one or the other of the joints.

In the list of awards at the Elizabeth poultry show in one class a "$7 bath robe was offered for the best cockerel." Now what in the name of goodness would a chicken do with a bath robe?

The agony over the Presidency of the Council has been postponed until tomorrow night. For the sake of peace and harmony the sooner the matter is settled the better it will be.

Back in the old bicycle days he rode a racing wheel—
He'd tell how many centuries he'd done, right off the reel!
And when he wasn't riding one, he had a pedal off—
He was as loony over "bikes" as some men over golf.
But now he's in the seventh heaven; there's gear-grease on his mug,
And he can tinker all he likes—the village auto-bug!

The keenest joy his soul can know is taking one apart;
To grind the carbon from a valve plumb satisfies his heart.
To wear a set of jumpers and a greasy cap, why, say!
Upon a sea of glory he just simply floats away!
And when he has one out to test, its viscera all showing
Without the hood, he listening close to hear how it was going:
Mmmm-hmmmmm! There isn't anything could ever, ever put Another drop of bliss into the being of that nut!

Folks pay him for the work, but shucks! It's such a waste of money.
He'd do the same thing for his board, because to him it's funny.
He'd use a monkey wrench at meals if anyone would let him!
He'd tie his tie with a stilson—sure! That stunt would never fret him.
He hooks up wifey with the pliers, with skilful twist and tug.
He eats, drinks, dreams machinery—this village auto-bug.

The Word "Solemn"

That poor old word ought to have a pension when this crool war is over.

And thank heaven! it is over—over in Europe.

Whenever the President sends in an ultimatum he uses the word "solemn" for fear the foreign government he's writing to will think he is kidding.

It's just as if a neighbor ran over your only child and crushed it, and you said:

"Don't you do that again—you rude thing! And I am in earnest about it, too!"

When the Italian government took up the case of the Ancona, she used the word.

Everybody who prepares any formal protest against any sort of outrage employs that weary and threadbare adjective.

Why not give it a vacation?

Why not say:

"We hereby frivolously protest, maudlinly object, ribaldly kick, laughingly call a halt, to or on this monkey business!"

That would give us a linguistic variety and be just as effective.

Foreign Bodies In The Eye

IN factories where workmen frequently get cinders, emery or other foreign bodies in the eye, there is generally a self-made expert who may even have some "antiseptic" knowledge, and who generally does a lot of harm in his endeavors to dig out foreign bodies. Workmen thus injured should hold the employer fully responsible and submit to no amateur interference.

Foreign bodies under the lids may be removed by picking them off with a little clean cotton wound upon a toothpick, but never should an effort be made to dig out a foreign body which seems to be imbedded on the cornea—over the colored part of the eyeball.

If the eye becomes irritated from a foreign body it may be freely bathed by allowing warm normal salt solution (tablespoonful to the pint of boiled water) to run over the eyeball, pouring it on gently with a spoon or a clean medicine dropper. This will wash out loose specks.

Do not rub the eye, and do not touch it with unwashed fingers. Keep everything that is not perfectly clean away from the eye. Above all do not allow any one to moisten a cloth with saliva for removing a foreign body, or worse yet to use the tongue for that purpose, as immigrants are frequently seen to do.

The chief danger from a foreign body in the eye is injury and ulceration of the cornea. This may be produced by cinders, particles of steel or emery or stone, but should not happen if the eye is properly treated from the beginning. A corneal ulcer may be no larger than the head of a pin, a minute denuded or raw spot scarcely visible except by direct illumination of the eyeball. Yet even this minute ulcer will be long in healing, owing to the absence of circulation in the corneal coat of the eye, and it may permit infection to enter and cause very serious damage.

After a foreign body is removed there is usually a feeling that it is still there. As a rule, it is better to apply a warm, moist, normal salt solution compress over the eye and bandage it in place. This will soon give relief from the pain.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Chilblains

What will prevent chilblains, and what is their cure?

Answer—Avoid garters round the leg. Wear rubber heels and sewed soles (thick) and cork insoles. Put on a fresh pair of woolen stockings every morning. If possible, wear two pairs of shoes alternately. For mild chilblain, which itches and burns and smarts, bathe the feet with water containing a pinch of alum, dry, powder with talcum, or talcum and boric acid powder (ten to one). If blisters rise, empty them by a clean needle prick and gently pressing with a clean towel. Dry, and powder over with talcum and boric acid.

Hot Air

A sanitary engineer advises me that the following are the merits of steam heating over hot air furnaces: Steam heat (1) does not disseminate disease germs; (2) spreads no soot, gases, dirt or smoke; (3) creates no parched or dead air in the room (4) distributes heat evenly. Do you still advocate hot air furnaces?

Answer—All of the stated facts are true of hot air furnace heating, excepting for very large buildings. Warm air on the move is purer than warm air standing still.

ILLINOIS

ILLINOIS is nicknamed "The Sucker State," but did nothing to deserve the epithet, until its last senatorial election. It is a way station on the westward course of empire, the last stop before the Mississippi River, and in the last one hundred years has succeeded in permanently detaining a population of 5,700,000 people, almost all of whom can point to some other part of the nation and say, fondly, "Grandfather came from there."

Illinois is printed in various colors on the map, but as a matter of fact, is a deep black state, with a ten-foot soil, which raise twenty-foot cornstalks, and can put an industrious farmer into the automobile class in three crops. Two generations ago, the state gave Lincoln, Grant, Logan and Douglas to the nation, but the statesman vein has been pinching out ever since.

Illinois is the third state in the Union in population, wealth and manufactures; the first in railroads and agricultural products; the second in coal; the third in petroleum; the second in college attendance, and the first in production of beefsteaks and bacon. It is a long state, with a waistline like that of one of our beloved ex-presidents, and a backbone composed of the Illinois Central Railroad. It reaches from the lower edge of the frozen North to the upper edge of the sunny South, and spring begins at Cairo before ice-cutting is over at Galena. This makes Illinois people vary greatly in temperament, customs, habits, politics, and thousands of northern Illinoisans, who can find their way around Paris alone, would take a guide if they ventured below the middle of their own state.

Northern and central Illinois are full of farmer aristocrats who raise leviathan hogs, and get a new model piano player every year. The southern part of the state has a strawberry blonde soil, and does not produce such luxuriant bank accounts. However, oil and coal in vast quantities have been discovered in this region of late, and many a farmer who has spent a disappointed life trying to fatten a red pig on his frugal farm, is now ordering $25 worth of bacon and eggs each morning in some New York hotel.

Can raise twenty-foot corn-stalks

Illinois is composed of two almost equal parts—Chicago and the rest of the state. Down state Illinois is speckled with pleasant little cities and large red barns, while Chicago attends almost exclusively to the task of swelling the state's population. The finest scenery in the state is at "Starved Rock"—a great eminence on the Illinois itiver, named in honor of the last people who starved in Illinois—over two hundred years ago.

Views Of The Press

Financial Blunders Of Great Men

THE birthday of Mark Twain recently celebrated recalls the fact—lately again confirmed by the experiences of the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis—that men of light and leading in other lines are often but the merest novices in financial affairs. The man of genius is oftener than not a "come-on" and a "sucker" in business matters. The late Mr. Clemens was involved in many disastrous business schemes, and first and last he lost a large part of the fortune he had won by the pen. The failure of the publishing house of Charles L. Webster & Company, in which he had invested largely, was the greatest of these blows, but by writing assiduously and making a lecture tour of the world he was able to write "paid in full" on every one of the accounts against that firm. Later he lost considerable sums in promoting a typesetting machine, and dropped another small fortune in the promotion of a patented food, of the merits of which he had been convinced by personal use.

Lloyd George, the great commoner of present-day Britain, confessed a few years ago that he had sought to add to his fortune by investments in stocks. Ole Bull, the great Norwegian violinist and composer, purchased a large tract of land in northern Pennsylvania and attempted to found there a Scandinavian colony. The enterprise was a failure, and "the Paganini of the North" was reduced to poverty, and forced to return to the concert stage.

Cervantes, the immortal author of "Don Quixote," spent most of his life in abject poverty, from which he was relieved only a short time before his death. Daniel Defoe, the author of "Robinson Crusoe," was unsuccessful in nearly all of his many speculations. The elder Dumas was always in hot water over financial matters, and Balzac lost most of his money in an unfortunate enterprise for working the abandoned mines of Sardinia.

General U. S. Grant was another conspicuous example of this kind. The failure of Grant & Ward left him almost penniless, and his autobiography was written at the spur of necessity in order to provide for his family.

Sir Walter Scott's failure as a business man was very similar to Mark Twain's attempt to play the rôle of publisher. The failure of Ballantyne & Company, the great publishing house in which he was largely interested, saddled him with debts aggregating over $650,000, which he attempted to pay from the earnings of his pen.

Dozens of other similar examples might be cited, and against them one can place only one instance in which a literary man of great genius manifested an equal capacity as a financier. Voltaire, the immortal Frenchman, made a fortune with his pen, and conserved and increased it by wise investments. He was at once the chief and the most prosperous of European heretics and authors. His financial speculations were almost universally crowned with success and in his later years he was the patron of a flourishing colony of Swiss watchmakers.—Trenton Times.

Great Authors And The Law

It would seem that no flowery path leads to the Poets' Corner in Westminster Abbey. The first great figure of modern English literature, Geoffrey Chaucer, was hounded from pillar to post by his creditors. So persistent were they that the King of England, in response to a petition, took Chaucer under his special protection and forbade him for two whole years to be arrested or sued by anybody except on a plea connected with land.

The imperishable allegory on which Bunyan's claim to immortality chiefly rests, "The Pilgrim's Progress," was at least planned in jail, and probably the first part was written there.

His "Grace Abounding," "Holy City," "Resurrection of the Dead," together with other treatises and tracts, were also composed in the "Den," where he languished twelve years.

The eminent American poet and man of letters, William Cullen Bryant, author of "Thanatopsis," practised law for ten years. He finally quitted the profession, and went to New York, where he exclusively devoted himself to literature.

Washington Irving, who if immortal for none other of his writings would be for "Rip Van Winkle," also was a lawyer. He never practised, however. He said he had been nearly ruined by having a lawsuit decided against him, and completely ruined by having one decided in his favor.

The prince of humorists, Mark Twain, at the age of sixty sacrificed all he possessed to meet the demands of his creditors.

The great parallel case of Twain's was that of Sir Walter Scott, who lost his all through the failure of his printers, the Ballantynes. In two years, however, he earned for his creditors nearly £40,000, or $200,000.

The poet Percy Bysshe Shelley, one of England's greater glories, was pronounced "unfit" to take care of his own children. This was because he was a professed atheist and did not hold with the conventional views upon the laws of marriage.

Thackeray's connection with the law and lawyers began in 1831. After leaving Cambridge (without taking a degree) he travelled to the continent for a few months, being rather undecided as to what profession he should adopt. At Weimar, where he met Goethe, he read a little civil law, which he did not find much to his taste.

Nevertheless, in obedience to the wishes of his friends, he decided to read for the bar, and, in November, 1831, he entered the chambers of one Taprell at No. 1 Hare-Court, Temple, there to be initiated into the mysteries of special pleading.

But he soon tired of this. In a year or so he shook the dust of Taprell's chambers from his feet and went to Paris to study art. No one can regret Thackeray's rejection of the law as a profession. No doubt, with his faculty of clear vision and keen insight, he would have made an excellent judge, but we have many excellent judges and only one "Vanity Fair."—Exchange.

Play lifts the Burdens from people's shoulders—Smoothes out the Wrinkles from their Faces and starts Smiles and Joy anew.

Current Poetry

Cause Unknown

The miner, as he left his job,
Cleaned out his soothing brier;
The ashes fell among the gob
And set the stuff afire.
The owners wagged their heads—and jaws;
They spouted threat and fustian;
And then announced that ancient cause,
"Spontaneous combustion."

He left some carbide when he quit,
The rules of safety spurning;
The moisture soon got into it
And started things to burning.
They sought the cause with might and main,
By quizzing and inspection,
But all their striving was in vain;
It still escaped detection.

A timber for his mine lamp made
A rather handy holder,
Until the flame, by currents swayed,
Had set the wood a-smolder;
And though the inquiry brought out
A world of elocution,
The problem still was left in doubt;
It quite defied solution.

He threw a wornout wick aside,
All thought of risk disclaiming;
It fell on timber old and dried,
And later set it flaming.
From lip to ear wild guesses sped,
And theories flew faster,
But this is what the verdict read:
"Mysterious disaster."

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Evelyn Tells the Bedtime Story For Daddy.

She Gave Her Bread, Jam and Milk.

"DADDY, have you got a headache tonight?" asked Evelyn. "'Cause if you have I could tell the bedtime story for you."

"I haven't a headache, but I always like to have my daughter do pleasant things for me," said daddy. So they all nestled down.

"Once upon a time there was a little girl, and she was awfully poor. Her papa hadn't any work to earn money, and her mamma, she was sick in a hospital. So the little girl she had to find her own food, and sometimes when it was awful cold she had to find her own sticks of wood to burn in her kitchen."

"Poor child!" said daddy. "I shall send her some coal."

"So one day she went out to find some wood, and she didn't have any warm coat to wear—nothing but an old tippet which was her sick mamma's. But she knew some place where a man was building a new store, so she went there to pick up some kindlings. And just as she was crossing Fifth avenue a great big automobile with nothing but a man on the front seat and a little girl on the back seat almost killed her." Evelyn waited for daddy to be surprised.

"So the little girl in the automobile which had knocked the poor little girl down got out and felt of her. And—and—guess what she did!" cried the story teller.

"Huh! Evelyn's stuck and don't know what to tell next!" cried Jack.

"I do so!" shouted Evelyn, sitting right up straight. "She took the poor little girl right home with her!" she said.

"Good girl!" said daddy, petting her.

"And she put the little girl which was all dirty getting knocked down in the street right in a nice bath, and then she dressed her all up in one of her very own dresses, and then she gave her some bread and jam and milk, and then she carried her right home in her automobile!"

"Jolly story!" cried daddy, much interested.

"Then the little rich girl, she saw the empty woodbox and the papa which hadn't any work and how the mamma was sick in a hospital. So she got the papa a job in her own papa's store and sent some oranges to the sick mamma, and when Christmas came she took the poor little girl, oh, just heaps of warm stockings and shoes and two Dinah dolls and some cakes. So she kind of adopted the little girl and took care of her ever afterward," Evelyn finished.

"That's just a fake story Evelyn made up," said Jack jealously when daddy liked it. "'Tain't a truly story!"

"'Tis so!" cried Evelyn. "'Cuz I read it in the paper!"

John Sutner Discovers There Are Two Ways of Doing a Thing.

"If ever there was a perfect demonstration of the fact that there is a right and a wrong way to do everything, we have it in our home." John Sutner passed in front of Julia Osgood's desk.

"I'm listening." Julia smiled up into his face.

"You know Molly never learned to sew?"

"I believe I heard you say as much," replied Julia as John paused for an answer.

"Well, when I went home last night she had on a pretty new waist. She had made it herself. I was very much pleased for I have always felt that it was a great handicap, her not being able to make anything for herself. I have made myself very disagreeable complaining about it."

"So finally to stop your complaints she learned to sew?" laughed Julia.

"Not a bit of it. My complaints had the opposite effect. She would not try to sew, but vindicated herself by finding things I could not do to complain about, and she did not have to hunt far." John made a grimace.

"What started her to sewing, then?" asked Julia.

"I realized that I had been very hard on her and after she came back from her visit to the farm I noticed things she did and appreciated all her efforts to help. Stimulated by appreciation she has been trying to do all sorts of things she never attempted before. This sewing is the last."

"She certainly has done wonders if she can start out with a waist and succeed with it the first thing. Making a waist is no easy job," commented Julia.

"First thing! You should hear her tell about it." John smiled. "She ripped the whole thing apart four times before she could get it to suit her. She got the pattern by ripping up a waist that fitted her."

"That was a practical way to do. She'll succeed," applauded Julia.

"You see what I mean by the wrong way to get at things. A little encouragement made all the difference in the world, and it took five years for me to see it."

"Most men are slow, and some are slower than others." Julia looked archly at her neighbor.

John grinned and turned to his desk.

"Do you know I have been thinking that your reverses are going to be the making of you," said Julia, looking up from her work after a pause.

"How so?" asked John.

"You were defeated, you said. You had slumped into yourself. It took the shock of your wife's sickness to convince you that there was some fight left in you. You pulled yourself together. Something was accomplished in you that put strength in your real self. It's the prime object, I am convinced, of the old world's effort to make something of us."

"I am glad something has given me a disposition to play an uphill game. Perhaps it is a better world than I thought it. I have learned at least to get satisfaction out of it, and I am exactly where I was when I was railing at my fate. I am just as poor; just as beset with difficulties. The difference is that I have the strength to face the defeat and make it a step to something better." John turned to his desk.

"My mother says the way one takes failure is an index to character. He is either weaker or wiser for the blunder." Julia turned the paper to place it her typewriter. "Defeat is a lesson and only the beginning of it."

"Good! I'll remember that. When a man is ready to learn everybody and everything is ready to help him." John stabbed his pen into the ink bottle and fell to work.

WOULD REDUCE RATE ON LETTER POSTAGE

Bill in Congress to Carry Local Sealed Missles for One Cent.

Washington, Dec. 20.—With a view of making the rates of postage on first class mail matter more equitable Congressman William J. Browning, of New Jersey, has introduced a bill in the House proposing the reduction of the rate from two cents to one cent per ounce on local delivery letters. At the present time the two-cent rate is applicable to all sealed letter mailed, whether addressed to a neighbor or to some one at a distant point.

"This is an opportune time to rectify this unequitable condition," said Mr. Browning. "General business is in such a nervous condition something should be done by Congress to stimulate and encourage it to a better level of permanency. The new rate such as proposed, will, I believe, greatly aid in improving business conditions. Business people generally will appreciate such a reduction, particularly at this time. As soon as they realize they can do twice as much for the same amount of money they will use the service much more to develop additional patronage.

"A local letter costs the Government only about one-quarter of a cent each to handle, according to postal experts," said Mr. Browning, "as it involves no transportation expense on account of railroads or steamships. When letters can be carried all over our country and to certain foreign lands for two cents, and return a large profit, it is evident that the profit on local, or the so-called drop letters, must be exorbitant. It is the opinion of men who have made a special study of the situation that such a reduction in the rate would not result in any material falling off in the revenues. The volume of mail would practically be doubled from the very beginning.

"There is a real sentiment for a change in the letter rate of postage and I do not think war legislation should be allowed to interfere with Congress in the consideration of the proposition to reduce the rate on local delivery sealed letters at this time. It is a matter of much concern to every patron of the postal service."

—It's a safe guess that the first real estate transaction made in town today was influenced and brought about through "the classified."

SAYS BODY IS A POISON FACTORY

Urges everyone to drink glass of hot water before breakfast.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombusible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which, if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomaine-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins, and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation others who wake up with bad taste foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember, inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.
